Inland Threshold to Oceans of the World

Montreal Harbour - Canada's Major Port

Vigorous and vivacious as only a great world seaport can be, the big-city lights of Montreal welcome 6,000 ships a year to its bustling, well-equipped harbour. From Europe, the Americas, the Orient, Africa and the farthest reaches of the earth come proud passenger liners of ponderous displacement, sturdy coastal craft of independent men, massive deep-sea freighters laden with fortunes in goods. A thousand miles from heaving ocean swells to the east and as far from the head of the Great Lakes in the west, Canada's largest port moves 23,000,000 tons of cargo through its portals each year. Grain, petroleum, sugar, iron and steel, chemicals, motor vehicles, timber, machinery, minerals, foodstuffs and thousands of other goods big and small that a massive nation imports and exports pass through this world-renowned harbour. Strategic as an interchange centre for ocean, lake, river, road and rail transport, Montreal is a vital pressure point of Canadian trade.

Glittering lights of Montreal Harbour illuminate dockside facilities which provide 129 berths, 37 transit sheds, five grain elevators, floating cranes, dry docks and 62 miles of terminal railway.

Unloading limestone from a freighter. Port of Montreal is open from March to mid-December, provides 35-foot-draught navigation for deep-sea ships.

rioting. Telling his men that "if anyone shoots, we're shooting back," he ordered a squad of 50 men to move through the heart of the riot area. Earlier, small arms fire had been heard.

The officers, closely following six armed cars, marched swiftly down the glass- and rock-littered streets.

Police said besides the liquor market no other stores were looted. Many autos were abandoned in the area, most of them with a m a s h e d windows and damaged fenders.

During the rioting, hundreds of white persons, most of them youths, were prevented from entering the area by police, some aided by canine patrols.

Men of Different Views Composed British Cabinet As First World War Broke

By LAWRENCE MALKIN

LONDON (AP) — War broke on Britain on August, 1914, with the shock of w thunderstorm.

The passions of the struggle were unleashed on a government thinking of other things and an army led by generals of a heroic but fading age.

For a century Britain had preserved the balance of power on the Continent and kept its colonial house in order by ways of swift strike and manoeuvre. The Union Jack on a gunboat or a regimental color carried a threat that often sufficed to bring submission.

At home the successes of industry and commerce had instilled a sense of progress so deep that it was felt to have been God-granted. The mantle of war leadership fell on the Liberal party, the voice of the businessman and the small-holder, the vehicle of reason and reform.

It was poor preparation for the blind grappling of nations committed to total war.

Picture a cabinet meeting early in the war. Almost two dozen skilled debaters gathered around an oak table at 10 Downing Street, with Asquith as prime minister at its head, watching with detachment as his colleagues worried a problem to extinction. When not writing detailed letters to his friends in longhand, Herbert Henry Asquith, one-time classics scholar at Oxford, would add his own comments to the elegant cut and thrust of debate.

His was a philosophy of compromise rather than command, and he was a man of peace thrust into war.

RAISED ARMY

Set against him was Field Marshal Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, hero of the British Empire who had not spent a full year in England for four decades. This aloof, almost mystical warrior of the East had been abruptly called by a baffled nation to serve as secretary of war. He was a man of imagination: almost alone he had recognized that the war would last for several years and it would be a contest of material rather than strictly military dimensions. His personal magnetism had raised an army of 3,000,000 volunteers.

But the cabinet held him in such awe that its civilian members merely demurred as he bluntly refused to discuss his decisions.

It was David Lloyd George, the country lawyer from a Welsh cottage, who wrested munitions production from Kitchener. Within a year he raised weekly production from 70,000 shells to one million.

A pacifist before the war, he soon was exhorting the British people—as Asquith never could to "the great peaks of honor we had forgotten; duty, patriotism, and, clad in glittering armor, the great pinnacle of sacrifice pointing like a ragged figure to heaven."

The genius was Winston Churchill was first lord of the admiralty. He mobilized the fleet even before Britain declared war, sending telegrams from his study in defiance of cabinet policy.

The Conservatives hated him for his originality and vigor; the Liberals distrusted him for it. He was the first in the government to see the possibilities of the tank as a weapon, yet he spent half the war out of office, and some of it in the trenches as an exile from politics.

Andrew Bonar Law was the silent political anchor man who brought his restive Tories into a coalition government and spent his energy tethering his party to its task. A Glasgow industrialist, hailing from Canada who had left school at 16, he curbed his aristocratic party's fretful desire to fight and govern for king and country.

This was a cabinet of divided councils, combining and recombining until Asquith in 1916 could no longer hold it together.

Lord Fisher, the first sea lord, argued for a strike at Germany on the Baltic coast. When asked whether the admiralty had examined maps of German railway lines for bringing up counter attacking reinforcements, he replied that the admiralty neither possessed such maps nor was interested in seeing them. That was the army's affair. This temperamental admiral built the world's most magnificent battleships but virtually ignored the submarine threat. His huge creations were garrisoned at Jutland in a classic naval set piece that solved little and brought serious British losses.

The British Expeditionary Force in France was commanded by General Sir John French, a vain man and a cavalryman who kept demanding more troops for "one more push" to break open the German lines. He failed when his first chance came at Neuve Chappelle in 1915, his troops broke through and then ground to a halt.

EASTERNERS FAIL

The dominance of the Western Front provoked the rise of the Easterners led by Churchill and Lloyd George. Kitchener, obsessed by British prestige in the East, opposed a stab at Turkey or the Balkans.

But the easterners won a compromise. They were given some men, some ancient ships and some guns and told to show what they could do. The result was Gallipoli: there was neither enough force to push ahead nor enough courage to admit defeat. A ragtag army held out for a year until it was brought home.

Then all was committed to the Western Front. The easterners had lost and the only strategy left was attrition.

He had a mind like a ruthless calculating machine. It reasoned that the Allies had begun with more men and would eventually triumph by brutal human subtraction. History and the British people record one chilling fact in Haig's favor: he was right.

At home the experts drove out the amateurs. Lloyd George organized a small, tight war cabinet, sending Asquith into retirement and destroying the Liberal party in the process of making himself prime minister by 1917.

MILITARY DISTRUST

The cabinet for the first time ran by an agenda, kept minutes and made regular decisions.

But the more determined the government became the more the generals and admirals feared it.

After Haig's huge losses at Passchendaele gained not an inch of territory, Lloyd George refused to send more men. Already late as January, 1918, Lloyd George declared his attitude as one of "profound dissatisfaction and distrust of the army" and assailed the war office as "rotten and extravagant in men, money and materials." He believed the generals were planning a coup. The generals accused Lloyd George of meddling, and even King George V supported them. "Leave the war," he said, "to the experts."

"But we know," replied General Max Hoffmann, "that they are lions led by donkeys."

R. C. Bishop Apologizes To Bracci

WHITE RIVER, Ont. (CP) — Most Rev. Alexander Carter, bishop of the Sault Ste. Marie Roman Catholic diocese, has sent a letter to Waldo Bracci, chairman of the improvement district of White River, apologizing for the actions of a priest who had accused Mr. Bracci of malfeasance and corrupt conduct while in public office.

Mr. Bracci and his family were also refused church sacraments by Rev. John Kaptein when Mr. Bracci declined to pay separate school taxes. The Bracci family have been given the sacraments since Father Kaptein was transferred last week from St. Basil's Church in this community, 190 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie, to Conniston, near Sudbury.

Bishop Carter congratulated Mr. Bracci for being exonerated by a judicial inquiry into charges of municipal corruption. However, in his letter, he said he did not want the messages to be interpreted as a condemnation of Father Kaptein.

The bishop said: "I cannot doubt his sincerity. I can only believe that he has been ill-advised and misinformed."

Mr. Bracci said he was deeply moved by the letter and that he now believed Father Kaptein and Rev. Michael Dumnill, an Anglican minister who has since moved to Cobalt, Ont., were misled and became the victims of a conspiracy by others to discredit him.

DEMANDED INQUIRY

Father Kaptein and Mr. Dumnill were involved in circulating a petition last August demanding an inquiry into the affairs and administration of the municipality dating back to 1960. It had ended his office to better his own financial position.

At a town hall February Father Kaptein testified that White River was a "one-horse town ... ruled with an iron fist" by Mr. Bracci. But, when the formal inquiry opened in May, Father Kaptein, Mr. Dumnill and 127 signers of the petition ignored requests by Judge James Parker Thomson of Port Arthur to come forward with evidence of any wrongdoing.

The bishop added: "I write you this letter for no other reason than the performance of what I consider a duty. No other motive does or could prompt this letter. Since those who accused you did not choose to do so publicly and even seemed to prefer publicity, I have no objection to your using this letter in any way you see fit."

Mr. Bracci said he has withdrawn a libel action against Father Kaptein resulting from an O.t.b.e. statement in a church bulletin.

Mr. Bracci had opposed the establishment of a separate school here because he said there were not enough ratepayers in White River, a community of about 900, to support both a public and separate school.

Two Cars

Department was summoned to the scene.

Both vehicles travelled considerable distance from the point of impact following the crash. The Spencer vehicle appeared to have travelled a number of feet on its roof top, completely demolishing it.

BLOCKED TRAFFIC

The crash could be heard for some distance and traffic was blocked along No. 2 Highway for more than two hours until the victims could be removed and the wreckage cleared away.

The tragic crash occurred only a short distance from Mr. Spencer's home where his wife and six children were awaiting his return.

Cause of the accident has not yet been determined. Ontario Provincial Police are continuing their investigation. The accident is being investigated by OPP Constable T. Hulme.

Elsewhere in the district, earlier in the weekend, a two-car rear-end collision on Highway No. 14 sent two men to hospital early Saturday morning.

Another two-car rear-end collision was also investigated the same morning on Highway 401 near Marysville. Two people were taken to Belleville hospital from that crash.

Provincial police were also called to a single-car accident on Highway No. 2 just west of the city limits where a car struck a tree. The driver, 20-year-old Larry Irwin Tegart of the RCAF Station Trenton escapee, the crash with minor scratches.

Girl Should Date Boys Nearer to Her Own Age

DEAR DORIS — I am 19. During the past year I have dated a man of 38. I have been told often enough to stay away from him because he is older.

People often understand our matrimony at this age, and all too often overlook the possibility of us being merely good friends. We find that we enjoy each other's company immensely.

Do you think there is anything wrong in dating him once in a while? As long as we know we aren't doing anything wrong, is there any reason why we shouldn't go on dating? He may be 38 but when we are together he talks about the same things and acts like most of my other dates. — Y.S.F.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR Y.S.F. — There are always exceptions. But if he talks and acts like a boy 19, he sounds like a victim of arrested development. The danger for you is that the sophistication of an older man can mesmerize you into seeing all the 19's and 20's as callow youths. Which is neither fair nor true.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — My sister married a Catholic boy and signed that her children would be raised Catholic. Now she insists that their little boys go to a Protestant School and there was quite a row over that.

Lately he has let her take the children to Sunday School but takes them to his church later.

She took them to the Sunday Scool picnic without telling him. I wish he could have seen their happy faces. Just having an opportunity to play with children their own ages, regardless of religion.

I want you to know Doris, that I don't care which faith the children are brought up in, but this way they are torn between two religions. — CONCERNED.

• • •

DEAR CONCERNED — These two are tearing their children limb from limb, psychologically, in the name of religion! And taking their own marriage down the path to ruin. Any level - headed minister or priest would implore them to make up their minds, one way or the other.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — Im a writing to you on behalf of my cousin who has unwanted hair. He is in this thirties and I feel he is missing out on a lot of fun in the summer months because of hair on his back and chest. He is very self-conscious of this and will not go in swimming or sun bathing.

I would appreciate it very much if you would answer the following questions:

(1) Can this hair be removed for good?
(2) Where could we get it done?
(3) How much would it cost?
(4) Are there any ill effects? — JOE.

• • •

DEAR JOE — What's the matter with hair on your chest? Many men have it and simply ignore it.

(1) Most electrolysis expert could remove it, a hair at a time, but even then some odd hairs may reappear.
(2) He should consult his doctor or the general hospital about electrolysis.
(3) Quite a bit. Depends on the individual problem.
(4) Not when a trained person does it.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — For those who have pretty ears and toys they want to give away, any school for the Mentally Retarded would probably love to have them. They also can use any yarn left from rugs made at home. If one wanted to, all you have to do is call the school and ask if they can use these things or not. I know the one near us does —MEG.

• • •

DEAR MEG — Check and double check. Readers with cards, carpet-yarns, toys in good condition, please note. In Belleville contact the Belleville and District Association for the Retarded Children.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — Doris, could you please advise me or do something on how to get nice peply legs. I go to Grade 10 and I had many people just stare at my thin legs. Please help. — ALL LEGS.

• • •

DEAR ALL LEGS — When the thin lines turn to curves — and they will round out as the rest of you does — you'll enjoy their staring! You can help nature by getting the right kind of exercise and a nourishing diet high in protein.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I am one of a staff of 30 in a large office. In this office we have two "lady" (?) gum-smackers who are strategically seated so that no matter where you are you are near a smacker. It sounds as though it were a contest.

Please help us before we all go nutty. Suggesting tranquillizers! This goes on from 9 till 5 for five days a week! They both read your column. — SMACK - HATER.

• • •

DEAR SMACK - HATER — Gum-smackers are in a class with denture clickers and cows. Too bad the boss can't make them toss the gum in the basket. Maybe he could make this item required reading!

• • •

DEAR DORIS — Bobbie (who is ten now) had bronchitis as a toddler and spent considerable time in steam tent and crib. He sucked his thumb until he was six. The problem is his education.

He was placed in an advanced class in grade one. The work was beyond him and he became quite discouraged before he was moved. He hated school.

Then he moved up, but got a couldn't-care-less attitude. His teacher says she can get nothing good out of him Says he is bright enough and that it is pure carelessness. He only has 10% vision in one of his eyes but the eye specialists doesn't feel this would affect him.

How do you give a child an incentive to learn? Do you feel he needs psychological help?—AT WITS' END.

• • •

DEAR WITS' END — When a youngster has to try to hard, doesn't believe he can do it anyway, and then gets too tired, he's likely to give up.

A psychological assessment would indicate his mental level and confirm, perhaps, his lack of feeling of self-worth. The rest depends on careful, patient teaching, loving, shalleoging; close collaboration between you and the teacher. And a regime designed to build up his health.

Turkish government that their bombers cannot drop bombs on Cyprus . . . with impunity. When doing harm to somebody, it is advisable to remember that the damage which you wanted to inflict on somebody may act as a boomerang."

Khrushchev accused the United States and Britain of enastermingling the Turkish raids. Similar charges have been made in the Greek-Cypriot National Assembly.

Turkish warplanes jets began four days of raids on northwest Cyprus Aug. 7 in retaliation for the Greek-Cypriot advance on the only remaining Turkish-Cypriot coastal stronghold. Turkey called off the attacks and reconnaissance flights over the island after an appeal by the UN Security Council.

The warm Greek-Cypriot reaction to Moscow's support appears to have undercut—and annoyed—the pro - Western Greek government of Premier George Papadopoulos. In a message from Athens Sunday night, Papandreou pledged renewed backing for Cyprus, but emphasized that Greece supported the UN mediation effort.

Cyprus has been relatively quiet since the cease-fire went into effect last week.

Johnson Blasts Goldwater on Nuclear Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson blasted Arizona Senator Barry Goldwater by name Saturday on the question of nuclear weapons in Viet Nam, accusing him of loose charges and doing "a disservice to our national security, a disservice to peace and, for that matter, a disservice to the entire world."

At a press conference, Johnson also brought Goldwater's vice-presidential running mate in the election, U.S. Representative Williger E. Miller of New York, into his line of fire. He lumped both men together as having made loose charges.

Johnson said he gave no admonition to the U.S. 7th Fleet to use any weapons necessary to hit North Vietnamese patrol-torpedo boats and bases after the U.S. reported attacks on U.S. destroyers in international waters. Goldwater had at one point implied that Johnson had freed the 7th Fleet to retaliate with nuclear power if necessary.

Johnson said that orders to the commanders specified "conventional weapons only."

As for Miller, the president said, he used the corridor of government building to say the administration had authorized complete and full "retaliation" against the North Vietnamese and this "is equally false and reckless."

Eugene 'Gene' George at 34 Young Canadian Millionaire

"I don't really fancy the term," the soft-spoken contractor says, "but the boys often kid me about it."

Twelve years ago, he carried bricks in a hod working alone as a masonry contractor. Today, as head of George and Assussen Ltd., he employs 700 workers from British Columbia to the Maritimes in Canadas biggest masonry contracting business.

He also employs another 100 in a wide range of ventures, but the building business takes up most of his time.

And most of his time means a big percentage of a day that often stretches to 18 hours of work. He spends several hours at his desk every Sunday and hasn't taken a vacation in 12 years.

SKIPS MEALS

Mr. George gobbles a sandwich at his desk at noon and often skips dinner when important job closings require precludings a week.

Why does he push himself this way?

"Because I love the work," says the short, stocky builder of Lebanese descent.

His contracting company ranges throughout the country doing everything from bricking up windows to building the Sears Tower at Niagara Falls. It did more than $7,000,000 worth of business last year.

"We've tackled everything," says Mr. George.

To keep his finger on the pulse of all jobs running, he flits around the country with his own pilot in one of his two private planes.

He has looked at faraway fields, too.

Mr. George flew to Nassau to view possibilities for expansion there and feels he is ready to bid on big jobs in the Bahamas. He would also consider jobs in Britain.

LEFT SCHOOL

Because he was from a family of 12—11 boys and six girls—he was forced to leave school after completing Grade 10. Leaning on summer job experience, he began taking contracting jobs with the help of a half-ton pickup truck and a lot of muscle.

When he was advised by local apprenticeship officials that he was contravening building codes by taking jobs when only an apprentice, he formed a partnership with the more experienced Ziv Assussen.

The partnership was dissolved two years later, but Mr. George retained Ziv Assussen name for the company.

From doing local masonry work the firm expanded throughout the province and eventually the country.

To stay fit for his rugged schedule, Mr. George plays hockey in a "house" league of local builders throughout the winter, gets in a bit of golf in the summer, and is an avid CB Xan.

HIGGINSVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Wallace Dale Whitsel, 26, of Kansas City, plunged to his death unday when his first parachute jump.

Don Cooper, president of a sky-diving club and pilot of the jump plane, said Whitsel leaped at 2,700 feet and opened his parachute. But the small pilot chute which pulls out the big one became tangled in the rig arm, Cooper said, and Whitsel waited too long to open his reserve chute.

Introduction of Canadian Duck Stamp Is Possibility

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Chances look good for the introduction of a Canadian duck stamp or federal hunting licence for waterfowl. it could come in three years.

The idea has long had the backing of wildlife scientists, conservation groups and sportsmen's organizations. Now it's being taken seriously at the political level.

The licence would likely be handled in the same fashion as the United States duck stamp which is sold at post offices and must be pasted on regular state hunting licences to qualify the hunter to shoot ducks, geese and other waterfowl.

The U.S. stamp costs $3. Revenue supports duck breeding grounds and refuges.

It's estimated there are 350,000 waterfowl hunters in Canada and thus a $3 fee here would raise about $1,000,000 a year for similar work.

WOULD HELP SURVEY

More important, it would give wildlife experts their first real opportunity for an accurate assessment of waterfowl hunting in the country.

Right now it's practically impossible to survey accurately the number of waterfowl hunters and their success. They hunt on provincial small-game licences that also cover other types of hunting from rabbits to upland birds.

The licensing idea was disclosed behind closed doors at the federal - provincial wildlife conference in Charlottetown. Some and most of the provincial delegates are reported to have expressed support for it.

Actually, the federal government could move on the matter without provincial support because all migratory birds come under federal jurisdiction.

Resources Minister Arthur Laing, the man who has the final say on the matter—is known to favor a duck stamp program.

He would like to pre-sell hunters on the stamp by laying down a firm outline of the projects in each province that would be financed by the revenue. These would emphasize the preservation of duck habitat.

WILL COST PLENTY

Mr. Laing thinks it should be possible to introduce the stamp within three years and certainly no more than five. He would even like to see it come sooner if hunters could be educated quickly to the need for it.

The resources minister doesn't however, support the duck stamp is the easy solution to the problem of dwindling waterfowl populations, although it could be of considerable help

In recent months he has spoken frequently of the critical need for a major program to preserve duck breeding grounds on the Prairies and warned that it could cost between $30,000,000 and $50,000,000 over the next 3 years to do the job properly.

The key to the matter, he stressed, is a public recognition that outdoor recreation in Canada can no longer be taken for granted. It's going to take money—and plenty of it—to retain the kind of hunting, comfortable Canadian sportsmen now enjoy.

Polaris submarines can receive radio signals, even submerged to any depth. Continuous radio watches are maintained; all transmissions are copied.

In the Pacific, part of a system of VLF has been in operation for several years and now is being expanded. The transmitters are of will be located at Jim Creek, Wash., Guam, Japan and Australia.

The chain of command through which orders to Polaris submarines are sent to fire—passes begins with the president, then goes through the secretary of defence, the military joint chiefs of staff, a unified military command and to the submarines.

Rout of Tsar's Armies Opened the Floodgates For Communist Takeover

By PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP)—The Russian armies of Tsar Nicholas, massive and badly armed, marched against Germany to help the Allies as the First World War opened 50 years ago this month.

By the end of August the Russians had been routed with staggering losses. In the chaos that followed in the next few years, the Bolsheviks seized control in Russia and Lenin came to power.

For Russia, the war was just one more military disaster after another. Her huge masses of men were ready in the historic tradition to fight and die in hundreds of thousands.

With French defences crumbling under the first German thrust in the west, the Russians launched an attack to take off the pressure. One Russian army under Gen. Paul Rennenkampf plunged into East Prussia on Aug. 17, 1914, from bases in what now is Poland. Another, under Gen. Alexander Samsonov, struck across the southern frontier of Russia well to the south of the German army.

PULLED BACK

A panicked German general ordered retreat, but before he could put it into effect he was relieved of his post. The hero of von Hindenburg and Ludendorff came into command. On the spot Hindenburg and the most brilliant officers of the German staff, Max Hoffmann ready with a plan.

Ludendorff and Hindenburg put the plan into operation. They left their own flanks lightly protected and drove straight between the Russian armies. German shock troops looped around Samsonov's army in the south and one of the great battles of history—Tannenberg—was decided. By the end of August, with the enemy nearly out of gun, Samsonov's army had been destroyed.

The two German generals, fortified by two corps drawn from the Western Front, then turned on the northern Russian army and smashed it in another noted battle, the battle of the Masurian Lakes.

The battles cost the Russians 250,000 soldiers killed or taken prisoner. Still worse, Russia lost huge numbers of cannon, machine-guns and rifles, irreplaceable from her limited arms factories.

Nevertheless, the Russians had forced the Germans to withdraw two corps of crack troops from the Western Front, slowing down the thrust of the Germans that ended at the hour of the first battle of the Marne in front of Paris.

AUSTRIANS HIT HARD

On the Austrian front the picture was different. The Austrian forces gained some territory but were hit by massed Russian forces, more skilfully handled. The Austrians retreated and again drew German from the Western Front.

Thus, again the Russians, in costly gestures, gave relief to the retreating French armies.

The big Russian steam roller of massed troops soon re-aligned again to move against the Germans, with Grand Duke Nicholas pushing seven armies to the attack.

Where they had numbers, they lacked transportation. The German armies, several times outnumbered by the Russians, had the advantage of railroads paralleling the front to let them switch their reserves into attack on weak Russian fronts. Another disaster to the Russians came in the early part of the first winter.

SMASH THROUGH

The Hindenburg - Ludendorff team again smashed through between two armies.

One Russian army was on the point of being surrounded when another came to its relief just west of Warsaw.

After the first winter, Russian armies marched into the field with the troops badly armed, many without guns. The unarmed scrambled for guns dropped by the fallen. Cannon were limited in number and inferior to the German, as were the machine-guns, which came into their own for the first time to play havoc with just the sort of attack the Russians were famous for-masses rushing at the enemy.

By the time Bolsheviks had taken power and reached a separate peace with Germany through the treaty of Brest-Litovsk on March 3, 1918, Russian losses had mounted to staggering proportions.

During the war 1,550,000 men were killed, 3,850,000 were wounded and 2,410,000 were taken prisoner.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

TRUMPETERS

At one time trumpeter swans were fairly common on the Great Lakes and were breeding from James Bay, northern Mackenzie, and Alaska far down into the United States. But there was too much farm land around southern Canada, and the big, white birds with their distinctive low-pitched voices that reminded people of bad horns, made too good targets. Sixty-five inches in length, with a wingspread of six feet and a weight of 30 to 40 pounds, they are the largest white birds in the world. What a temptation for trigger-happy hunters as they crossed the sky in string lines or in V-shaped flocks like travelling geese, their extremely long slender necks stretched out! By the early 30's their numbers had decreased alarmingly.

Then Canada and the United States co-operated to save these beautiful birds from extinction. The Canadian Wildlife Service stationed a warden in the Peace River district of Alberta because this one seemed to be their favorite breeding grounds. The United States Fish and Wildlife Service carefully guarded any seen at several refuges. Trumpeters are virtually resident in Yellowstone Park, but since that nest in Canada migrate from northern British Columbia and northern Alberta to lake in southern Ida.

The nest is a broad platform of organic matter built on a small islet in a shallow pond or marsh. Incubation takes 38 days, but as soon as the young are out of the shell they are able to leave home. A swan's food is leaves, roots, seeds of sedges and other aquatic vegetation. Unfortunately, they are vulnerable to lead poisoning, and this has helped to deplete their numbers.

INCREASED IN NUMBER

About five years ago the waterfowl research station at Delta, Manitoba, made an experiment in the hope of restocking suitable areas, and found that captive parents will breed. Five young were hatched. Between one thing and another, the trumpeters have at last increased until today they again number in the thousands. This illustrates what a conservation campaign can do.

The story of whooping cranes is, up to a point, comparable. As you may have read an experiment is to be made in their breeding area trusting that their number may rapidly go up form the present small figure of 39. Of late, eggs laid have not always hatched. Now the idea is to take them from the mother whoopers in Wood Buffalo National Park in the Northwest Territories and fly them in incubators to the Monte Vista National Wildlife refuge in southern Colorado where they will be given to bantam hens to hatch. The idea sounds extraordinary. We can only hope that the ending will be satisfactory.

Suspect Shot In Church

NEW YORK (AP) — Policemen in bullet-proof vests and gas masks fired shotguns and tear gas today into a Harlem church where an armed man had barricaded himself after a chase.

They found the man dead.

At one a detective disposed as a minister and begged the man locked in the Church of God, Inc., to give himself up. But the man replied:

"If they want me, let them come and get me."

Police had spotted him about 4:15 a.m. in a taxi stolen during a holdup in The Bronx. The chase proceeded through Manhattan's Harlem district until the man stopped the cab, jumped out and ran to the roof of a building. He leaped from tf roof to the top of the church next door and entered through a skylight.

Welfare Costs Subject of Talk At Meeting

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—The possibility of the province assuming all welfare costs was raised Friday at a public hearing by the Ontario legislature's 14-member select committee on municipal law.

Solicitor Douglas Gaehle of Port Arthur told the committee statutes should be changed to make actual "physical presence" in a municipality the test of who was responsible for an applicant's welfare services.

Vernon M. Singer, committee member and Liberal member for Toronto Downsview, asked "is there anything too shocking in the thought the province should pay for the whole thing?"

Mr. Gaebel said the city's welfare commissioner had suggested the province should finance all autonomous welfare bodies such as the Children's Aid Society.

The Port Arthur city solicitor also suggested:

—The province's municipal works assistance program should assume a larger share of the cost of existing projects instead of encouraging projects that would otherwise not be started;

—Ontario Hospital Services Commission rules should say low welfare recipients to be admitted to the hospitalization plan without a three-month waiting period;

—The Lakehead area needs more vocational training during the period in which welfare recipients can be helped to fit with the cost of heating their homes.

Bowman Andrews, city solicitor for Fort William, told the committee that the sharing of costs for administration of justice should be revised.

A radical overhaul was needed on the sharing of juvenile and family court costs, he said. Licensing of technical trades such as plumbers and electricians should be done by the province.

Toronto Men Charged With Holdup Attempt

BANCROFT, Ont. — Provincial police said Sunday that Toronto men, Joseph Nelson LaBocque, 40, and Herbert Frederick Wiskin, 22, have been charged with armed robbery in connection with a holdup Saturday. They will appear in court Aug. 26. Police said Charles Maxwell, about 60, was hit on the head with his own rifle by two men who then stole the rifle from his general store and service station.

Cars driven by Doug Ketchenson of Consecon and Roy Dayman of Port Hope came into collision. Five persons were injured in this accident. The injured were taken to the Trenton Memorial Hospital. The injuries are not thought to be serious. No report of damages is yet available.

A mishap took place on the County Road, one mile south of Coles Market, about seven o'clock last night. This one car accident involved Mrs. Pearl Reddick and she suffered only minor injuries when her car left the road and struck a hydro pole. The damage to her car was light.

A minor accident happened around eight o'clock in the evening when two cars driven by John Pearson of 36 Grove Street and Frederick Lusk of Belleville collided on the South Bay Road near Milford. Injuries were minor and light damage was reported to both cars.

Castro - inspired terrorism is gradually being cleared from the oil - rich South American republic of Venezuela. In this story, Paul Kidd, an expert on Latin American affairs, reports on the progress of the anti-terrorist campaign.

By PAUL KIDD

CARACAS (CP) —The day I arrived in Caracas, the white skyscraper - studded capital of Venezuela, two municipal police agents were assassinated on a corner of bustling downtown Andres Bello Avenue.

Machine gun bullets sipped from a speeding late - model American - built car and the agents, Jesus Gomez and Carlos Becerro, pitched to the ground. Minutes later both were dead.

Two days after the gunning, terrorists blew up a highway bridge 70 miles from Caracas.

In another part of Venezuela, one person was injured when a hand grenade was hurled at a Mallinckrodt chemical.

The three incidents were prominently reported on the front pages of Caracas newspapers.

Nine months ago, however, they would have been treated as routine news.

For such acts of violence by the Communist, pro Castro Armed Forces of National Liberation—known as the FALN—were the everyday occurrences.

Today they are not.

Terrorism has not disappeared from the political battlefield, but it is lessening. But it is fighting a rearguard action against the forces of democracy in this oil-rich South American republic.

NO LONGER AFRAID

After four years of terrorism, a lull has settled over the country. And its 8,100,000 citizens are beginning to adjust to living without fear.

Caracas, framed in a valley of misty white mountains, is peaceful. Policemen no longer hug the walls but stand unhelmeted in the middle of the streets. Ever-vigilant armored cars and tanks are tucked away, silent and out of sight, in their depots.

Only in the Bachiller mountains, 75 miles from Caracas, is the war between the government and terrorists going on.

There, crack troops are striving to mop up guerrilla bands operating from scattered hideouts. No one knows how many rebels are holding out in the rugged, jungle-covered mountains, but they are believed to number no more than 400

At the Fair

Conklin Midway Twin Corridors of Fun

Its twin corridors, the Great Light Ways, of the annual exhibition, outrank any of its predecessors for color, entertainment and variety of presentation.

The alleys of fun, old as circusdom itself, offer tented and outside attractions, that easily rate with the best seen here in the long history of the city's agricultural society.

The rialto of rides offers a wide variety of thrills from the time-honored merry-go-round and ferris wheel to the ultramodern rocket-age gadgets.

Conklin has ingeniously welded education, entertainment, strange freaks of nature, music and dancing into the tented whole of the midway.

Part and parcel of midways since carnivals were invented, the concessions form a lively part of the lighted corridors.

They're back again in all their colorful garb, the insistent voices of the barkers, "live" and otherwise, the lively competition of various attractions, the music, the noise and the people.

CAN SATIATE APPETITE

Teen-agers and elderers who have become addicted to rock-n-roll, the "Beatles," etc., can satiate their appetite at the Ring-A-Ding Hotel, a swinging hostelry that the "cats" and others will enjoy.

It wouldn't be a midway without one, so this year's "girlie" show ranks with the best. It is the "Club Star", a tired business special that swings with a bevy of beautiful models and all the trimmings.

There is a mysterious moviland tented theatre that offers laughter, movies, games and fun for all. It is billed as the "Amuse-U-Arcade."

And if you like creepy thrills and not allergic to serpents there's the "Snake Pit." Literally it is just that and you'll see every form of slithering life from huge boa constrictors to the lesser forms.

These and many others round out a highly entertaining bill of tented attractions.

THE RIDES

Many breath-taking and other rides are available for seekers of off-the-ground thrills.

For the older people and those who like to take it easy there's the ever-popular ferris wheel.

The Rock-O-Plane and Till-A-Whirl are guaranteed to put patrons in a whirl so to speak. There's the Octopus and the Flying Scooter.

A new ride is the "Flying Coaster." This is a speeding coaster train that hits the high spots then takes off.

There is the Round-Up and the Scrambler, and another new ride is "Paratrooper." You go up and come down in chutes. It's a thriller.

On Concession Row you can win teddy bears, dolls and assorted prizes. You can pitch pennies, toss baseball, hurl darts, ring bottles, shoot rifles, roll wheels among a dozen other items of various skills and luck.

You can play bingo, eat candy floss, ice cream, chew on candied apples or "toothpick" French fries with hamburgs and hotdogs.

KIDDIE LAND

There Mom and Dad can leave little Joe and Jane to their own fun under the watchful eye and careful attendants while they enjoy the "big" Midway and fair.

If Junior desires an army touch he can ride the armored tanks, shoot down imaginary enemies and play make-believe soldier.

If he is sportsminded he can pilot a miniature racing automobile around a whirling track or drive a baby hydroplane motor boat.

Always a delight to young sters are the swings. This is something different, safe and highly amusing.

Then there's throwback to grandpa's days something the youngster will enjoy. It is the new horse-and-buggy ride, old yet brand new in children entertainment.

U Thant Regards Threat By Soviet Union Allies Over Dues as Serious

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—East European sources warn that the Soviet Union and its 10 Communist allies will walk out of the United Nations if they lose their votes in the General Assembly for falling too far behind in their dues.

Secretary-General U Thant regards the threat as serious and is working quietly behind the scenes to prevent a showdown before the assembly begins its 19th annual session Nov. 10.

The crux of the matter is refusal of the Russians and their allies to pay special assessments for UN peace-keeping operations in the Congo and the Middle East. They regard both projects with distaste.

Article 19 of the UN charter says any member who falls two calendar years behind in its over-all dues "shall have no vote in the General Assembly." Fifteen countries are that far behind because they have been unwilling or unable to pay their share of the costs of the peace-keeping operations.

Seven are Communist — the Soviet Union, The Ukraine, Byelorussia, Czechoslovakia., Hungary, Poland and Rumania. Eight are non-Communist—Albania, Cuba and Mongolia—refuse to pay the peace-keeping assessments, but they are not so far behind in over-all dues because their regular assessments are low.

Arrears for the Congo force total nearly $83,000,000 and for the Middle East force nearly $30,000,000. The United States has covered much of the deficit and the U.S. Congress wants the loans repaid.

Although the U.S. has no plan to drive the Russians out of the world organization, thereby ending its function as a meeting place between East and West, American diplomats note the charter is quite clear about voting rights for delinquent members.

The Soviet Union contends that no member can be deprived of its vote without two-thirds consent. It also contends that the peace-keeping operations are illegal.

Thant came away from talks in Moscow last month convinced that the Russians are serious about their threat to quit the assembly—and even the UN—if they lose their vote.

U.S .OPPOSED

In Washington, U.S. officials subsequently told Thant the Russians are bluffing and that they would eventually pay their bills in the face of solid opposition. They noted, for example, that Khrushchev has dropped his demand for a "troika" UN secretariat in which the West, Communist and neutralist blocs each would have a veto.

Some diplomats are hopeful that the U.S. and the Soviet Union can reach a compromise, either by themselves or with the help of the assembly's 21-nation working group on peace-keeping finances. The group meets Sept. 2.

If the negotiations fail, the problem will be tossed to assembly president Carlos Sosa-Rodriguez of Venezuela. After he opens the session, he may ask the General Assembly and rule whether they are entitled to vote on the 1964 president if he can ignore the issue.

Whatever he does, the decision will be challenged and there will be fireworks.

OTTAWA (CP)—There were 200,019 Canadians seeking unemployment insurance benefits June 30, about 50,000 fewer than a month earlier and 18,000 below the number a year ago, the bureau of statistics said today.

The bureau said there were 87,827 new or renewal claims for benefits during the month compared with 105,182 during May and 82,902 in June, 1963.

About 80 per cent of persons making claims in June had lost employment during the month.

Average weekly estimate of beneficiaries in June was 155,500 compared with 160,300 in May and 168,300 a year ago.

Benefit payments amounted to $18,500,000 in June, $33,100,000 in May and $16,000,000 a year earlier.

The bureau said the sharp decline in beneficiaries and payments was associated with the termination of benefits to claimants under the seasonal benefit provisions.

Hopes Dimmed for Rescue Of Trapped Miners in North

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — A series of severe weekend rock bursts has dimmed hopes of rescue teams trying to reach two miners missing and presumed dead at the 4,000-foot level of the Wright - Hargreave Gold Mine. The miners were buried under tons of rock by a rock burst Friday night.

A statement from mine officials said chances were "extremely remote" that Donald Yaworski, 45, and Edouard Duchesne, 35, both of Kirkland Lake, would be found alive.

Officials said a recovery crew would be sent down today unless further underground disturbances are felt. The men had no food other than what was in their lunch pails.

The mine, 8,170 feet at its lowest level, was evacuated Saturday night as a shift of 65 miners worked. Only Yaworski and Duchesne were reported missing when the men were called to the surface.

One rescue crew Saturday, led by mine manager Frank Buckle, came to within 15 feet of where the men were last seen. He was unable to raise an answer to loud shouting. Further searches were discouraged by additional tremors.

The first burst, which shook a teen-age dance at a nearby arena, was followed within three hours by five more bursts. The most severe of the later shocks was felt=15 miles away in Larder Lake.

Another burst rocked the mine while a crew searched for the men and a mine violent one followed Saturday night, causing rescue operations to be called off temporarily.

Officials said the rock bursts, caused by underground upheavals, are common in the area but usually take place in abandoned shafts. The most violent of the weekend bursts set off alarms in banks and a sprinkler system in a nearby building.

Relatives of the missing men said both had been talking of leaving the mine in recent years.

Khrushchev Tells Thomson Russia Ready for Meeting To Ban Use of Nuclear Arms

LONDON (AP) — Premier Khrushchev was quoted Saturday as saying in an interview "I would hardly describe Goldwater as an embellishment."

The interview took place Thursday with Lord Thomson, Canadian-born newspaper magnate, in the personal coach of the Soviet leader's special train travelling through the virgin lands of Kazakhstan. The interview appears in The Sunday Times, one of Thomson's publications.

Thomson said the Soviet leader was wary of discussing Senator Barry, Goldwater, Republican candidate for president of the United States in the Nov. 3 U.S. election. The article continued:

"When Lord Thomson said that many people all over the world were concerned about Goldwater's speeches the Soviet leader remarked: 'You said it —not me. He's your ally—and mine'.

"Would you disagree with Goldwater's position? I asked Lord Thomson.

LOOKED OUT WINDOW

"Mr. Khrushchev smiled and looked out of the window. After another prod, he said: 'There are some strange phenomena in the world. I would hardly describe Goldwater as an embellishment'".

He said he did not want to interfere with American election.

These were Khrushchev's strongest remarks on the presidential contest.

In answer to a question whether he would favor a summit conference early next year aimed at an agreement banning the use of nuclear weapons in war Khrushchev said: "We would be ready. A new Geneva five would be welcome."

He expressed doubt, however, that even such an agreement could be completely effective.

"The trouble is," the published interview quoted him as saying, "the losing side will always use nuclear weapons in the last resort to avoid defeat. If a man thinks he's going to die he'll take any steps."

WOULD ALLOW INSPECTION

The Soviet premier said Russia would permit free, close inspection of its territory "if we make a disarmament agreement and a start is actually made on disarmament."

Khrushchev agreed that East-West relations are better than a year ago.

He was told that British Foreign Secretary Richard Butler returned from a recent visit to Moscow with the impression that Russia would like to withdraw from commitments in Laos and Southeast Asia. Khrushchev replied:

"That is so. The whole basis under which we assumed cochairmanship of Britain of the Geneva agreements of 1954 and 1962 stabilizing Laotian neutrality) has crumbled away."

The premier said solution of the Cyprus problem is to "get the British troops out of the island. Anyone with any sense can see that the strings behind Turkey's attack (on Cyprus) go back to Washington and London."

ATTACK 'STUPID'

On the Gulf of Tonkin crisis between the U.S. and Communist North Viet Nam: "I would say the U.S. attack was stupid and not at all in (president) Johnson's favor. All people of common sense regard that (the U.S. attack on North Vietnamese patrol-torpedo boat bases) as an aggressive act. . . ."

On differences between Communist China and the Soviet Union:

"This is an internal affair between the Communist countries and should not be aired in the capitalist press. Our differing points of view have been documented. You can study them for yourself."

The Soviet premier said he has no capital and never will have.

"As chairman of the council of ministers, I have a house, a car and other amenities but they are a part of my job. When I leave this job I will no longer have them. What good is your money? You can't take it with you."

Mediator's Illness Causes Grave Concern

GENEVA (Reuters) — The possibility of a delay in the Cyprus negotiations caused by the sudden illness of United Nations mediator Sakarai Tuomioja is causing grave concern here, reliable sources said today.

Tuomioja, 52-year-old Finnish diplomat, underwent surgery today after his condition, understood to be a blood clot in the brain, worsened during the night. He suffered a stroke Sunday.

Tuomioja was scheduled to leave for Athens, Greece, and Ankara, Turkey, as well as Nicosia Sunday with a possible solution to the Cyprus problem in his briefcase.

It was understood a proposal, worked out by the former U.S. State secretary Dean Acheson, had met with a fair amount of agreement between the Greeks and the Turks.

On Saturday, Tuomioja expressed optimism and confidence that a solution could be found based on Acheson's formula, but he stressed the need for speed to get agreement.

Sources here said Tuomioja's view that speed is essential is based on the belief that pressure from Turkish military leaders is being exerted on Turkish political leaders to intervene in Cyprus to lift the blockade maintained against the Turkish - Cypriot community on the island.

The Acheson plan is reported to urge the union of Cyprus with Greece, but is coupled with guarantees by the Greek government for the safety of the Turkish-Cypriot minority on the island as well as safeguards for Turkey's own strategic interests in the eastern Mediterranean.

A bulletin issued today on Tuomioja's condition said it "deteriorated in the course of the night. A surgical operation has been performed this morning by Prof. Aloys Werner. The doctors are very reluctant to make a prognosis."

There was speculation the job of mediator in the dispute, which began with communal fighting on the island shortly before Christmas last year, would be given To Acheson.

But British diplomat has not yet officially given up the job and reliable sources disclosed here that Acheson would take over.

Research Group Fails to Show Direct Link

NEW YORK (AP) — A tobacco industry research group said today that studies it has sponsored have failed to show a direct link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer.

The group, the Council for Tobacco Research — U.S., Inc., also said findings of its 10-year research program produced no evidence of a relationship between smoking and heart and circulatory ailments or stomach ulcers.

The group's annual report was its first study issued since the U.S. surgeon - general's report in January linked heavy smoking cigarette smoking as smajor health hazard and linking smoking to lung cancer.

Dr. Clarence Cook Little, scientific director of the council, said 15 council-sponsored studies failed to support a theory that cigarette smoking could cause cancer by contact with the lungs. This is one of several theories on how cancer ties be tween smoking and cancer.

Little said the study was continuing on other theories.

The report also said "more than a dozen studies" of heart and circulatory diseases uncovered no evidence "of any significant contribution by smoking or nicotine."

The council, supported by tobacco manufacturers, growers, and warehousemen, says it has spent $7,250,000 on research since its founding in 1954.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carter, Sports Editor

Twelve eager standard-bred youngsters are champing at the bit waiting for the "Go" that will send them questing the biggest chunks of gold in their brief racing lives.

In two semi-finals fields of six, the dozen colts will thunder down the Fair Grounds Raceway track next Thursday evening with the handsome Black Diamond Cheese Stakes Trophy and a purse of $1,300, the targets for the night.

The Black Diamond Cheese Stakes, sponsored jointly by the Black Diamond Cheese Ltd. and the Belleville Fair Board, is the first and richest race of its kind ever run on a Belleville track.

The handsome trophy, pictured above, has been donated for annual competition by Alderman Don Joss of the Black Diamond Cheese Company.

"The Stakes" will be the feature event of a four-race, nine-heat harness meet that is the top grandstand attraction for the final night of the fair.

The first four horses to finish in the two qualifying heats will enter the eight-horse final for the trophy, gold racing glory.

Presentation of the Black Diamond Trophy will be made by Alderman Don Joss immediately following the final heat. Purse division will be made later. The winner will also receive a handsome engraved cooler, the gift of the Fair Board.

I understand the dozen "teen-age" trotters and pacers are youngsters who have won a limited amount of purse money. However, some of them made a fine showing in the Hiram Walker Stakes, raced in Kingston a short time ago.

Race Committee Chairman Gerald Vance assures me there will be no changes in the field. Incidentally, the "Chief" with his race secretary, Ron Isaacs, who is the Quinte Driving and Riding Club president, has done an outstanding job in arranging the 36-horse harness meet for Thursday night. They have worked hard in lining up one of the most attractive race cards seen here in some time.

Another popular horse here is Riverdale Bill who will match strides with other such well-known youngsters as Lila Bars, Dominion K. Abbe, Terrific Pick, Daisy Hitch, Yankee's Pride and newcomers Lady Bug C and Llomar Topsy Lee.

There they are. Take your pick—it's your shirt.

And the supporting cast to this galaxy of young track stars is an imposing one, according to Chairman Vance.

"Twenty-four horses will go to the post in three additional classes with two heats to each event," he said. "They represent the best horses in the district, the most of them well-known to patrons of the Quinte Driving and Riding Club Saturday night meets."

"There will be nine heats all told, starting sharp at eight o'clock and I think we are safe in saying that they will represent the best harness racing presentation offered here in many years," said the chairman.

There will be full betting privileges at the track under RCMP supervision and a daily double along with two quinellas.

The nine-heat four-race meet will be a more or less lengthy one and the first race will start at eight o'clock right on the button.

The complete entry will be published on Wednesday.

Barely Misses 70-Year Record

Flood Hits Eight Straight In Twin Bill

By Mike Rathet
Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia Phillies lost a single game, San Francisco Giants lost a doubleheader.

But the biggest loser of all Sunday was Curt Flood—and he had eight hits.

While the National League's leading contenders were taking it on the chin, Flood was hitting the ball on the nose for St. Louis Cardinals and threatening a record that was set when Baltimore was in the National League 70 years ago.

On Sept. 3, 1894, Baltimore outfielder Joe Kelley collected nine consecutive hits against Cleveland. No one had done it before and no one has done it since.

Flood, 26-year-old righthanded swinger, collected four hits at the Cardinals' home ball park as Los Angeles Dodgers and Sandy Koufax 3-0 in the opener of a doubleheader and reached the ninth inning of St. Louis' 4-0 nightcap triumph with a string of eight consecutive hits.

Flood did become the first National Leaguer since Stan Musial of Pittsburgh in 1943 to collect eight hits in a doubleheader.

KOUFAX WINS 19TH

Koufax hurled a three-hitter against the rest of the Cardinals as he posted his seventh shutout and 19th victory of the season, striking out 13 and lowering his earned run average to a league-leading 1.74.

The Phillies, meanwhile, were bombarded 12-4 by New York Mets but still stretched their lead to 6½ games over the second-place Giants, who dropped a doubleheader 5-4 and 10-2 to Los Angeles Dodgers.

In other NL Sunday action, Chicago Cubs defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3, Houston Colts took the second game 7-4 and Cincinnati Reds belted Houston Colts 8-2.

In Saturday's NL games, Pittsburgh edged Chicago 5-4, Los Angeles took a 4-3 decision from St. Louis, San Francisco outlasted St. Louis 5-3, Houston downed Cincinnati 7-4 and Philadelphia walloped New York 8-1.

Flood slammed a triple, two doubles and five singles against the Dodgers, collecting four hits in a game for the fifth and sixth time this season while lifting his average to .302 from .296.

He scored the only run Curt Simmons needed in the eighth, opening the Cards' attack with triples and scoring on Dick Groat's sacrifice fly. Simmons checked the Dodgers to six hits, bringing his record to 14-5.

Koufax, now 19-5, pitched two days ahead of his 1963 pace when he won 25 games.

DAVIS WHACKS HOMER

The Dodgers scored twice in the fifth on two walks and single by John Roseboro and Dick Nen, Wes Parker's double to left and Jim Gilliam's single to right. Roseboro and Dick Nen, Wes Parker's double to left and Jim Gilliam's single to right.

The Braves got the job done on a pair of three-run homers that proved more productive than five bases-empty blasts by the Giants. Eddie Mathews got one in the seventh inning of the opener while Gene Oliver produced in the nightcap for Milwaukee.

Willie Mays hit his 36th and 37th for the Giants in the opener while Willie McCovey and Orlando Cepeda also connected. Dal Crandall homered in the second game.

The Cubs won the opener in the ninth inning when Ron Santo, Bertell, Andre Rodgers and pinch-hitter Jimmy Stewart produced the winning run off Phillies reliever Al McBean, who hadn't lost in 60 appearances dating back to July 27 last year.

The Pirates slammed 14 hits in the second game, including two-run homers by Don Dennis and Bill Mazeroski.

Frank Robinson's two-run homer off Sam Ellis gave the big blow for the Reds while Joey Jay checked the Colts on six hits for a 9-3 record.

BOSTON TIES MARK

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—Ralph Boston, the United States' top hops in the Olympic broad jump, equalled the world record with a leap of 27 feet, 3¼ inches Saturday night in the Carrera invitational track meet. Boston matched the mark posted by Russia's Igar Terovanesyan on his third jump.

Balding, Thompson Second

Knudson's 199 Wins Pro Title

By W. R. Wheatley

HALIFAX (CP) — George Knudson of Toronto, the only man who could beat the Ashburn course par in all three rounds, won the Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship Saturday with a 54-hole score of 199.

The 27-year-old Torontonian, who plays regularly on the pro tour, fired rounds of 66-66-67 against Ashburn's par 68 for a tournament record and was five under par for the full distance to win by two strokes.

His 199 cut three strokes off the record 202 made last year by Al Balding of Toronto over the par-70 Edmonton Mayfair course.

Balding came up with a brilliant 68 Saturday but had to share second place at 201 with Alvin Thompson of Toronto, who started the final round with a one-stroke lead over Knudson. Four three-putt greens proved Thomson's undoing and he had to settle for a final-round 70 after a 66-65 Thursday and Friday.

Knudson's first CPGA championship brought him top prize money of $1,500 and the Seagram Gold Shield. Thompson and Balding collected $1,050 each.

MAGEE FOURTH

Jerry Magee kept the all-Toronto finish going by shooting a last-round 68 for even-par 204. Stan Leonard of Vancouver, CPGA champion for 11 years, took fifth place with a final-round 70 for 205. Magee won $750 and Leonard $500.

Knudson's steadiness, particularly from tee to green, was the main factor for his win. But his putting was "just average." He three-putted one green and missed a three-foot putt for a par at another. But he ran down birdie putts of two to 15 feet. He missed only three times, twice because of his putting and once when he put his second shot into a trap.

The whole field found Ashburn's hilly golf layout, with its rolling and hilly terrain and tight fairways, far from a picnic. The course is very par-test—and only a mediocre one at that—came Thursday when nine players bettered 68. Only five did it Friday and the same number Saturday.

Cronin May Call Meeting

BOSTON (AP) — American League president Joe Cronin is the next batter due in the controversial sale of New York Yankees to CBS—baseball's hottest topic.

Cronin said he will decide today whether to call a league meeting as requested by Arthur Allyn, president of Chicago White Sox. Allyn contends the telegraphic vote which approved 8 to 2 the sale of 80 per cent of Yankee stock to CBS violates the League constitution.

Meanwhile, Representative Emmanuel Celler, New York Democrat and chairman of the House of Representatives judiciary committee, said in Washington the transaction may run afoul of the anti-trust act.

Allyn contends a unanimous vote was required by the Yankees-CBS sale unless the owners had received notice 15 days in advance.

Said Cellar: "Viewed as a vertical acquisition of a major supplier by a customer, this acquisition gives CBS one voice out of 10 in passing on its own bids for the sale and television broadcast rights to the World Series, the all-star game and Game-of-the-Week broadcasts.

"It is fair to assume that CBS, as owner of radio and TV stations in New York, will exclude other networks from the radio and TV broadcast rights to Yankee home games, and it may give its owned and operated stations in other cities, such as Chicago and Los Angeles the inside track on Yankee away-game telecasts in those cities."

Foxboro Leads SH Finals 3-0

Foxboro came up with a 6-3 victory over Cannifton at Cannifton on Sunday to grab a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final series for the S.H.B.L. championship.

Gary Little pitched six-hit ball for the winners until he needed help from Gerry Mann in the eighth. Together they gave up seven hits while striking out three and walking three.

Don Dafoe and Butch Clapp tolled in defeat for Cannifton. They whiffed seven, walked three, while giving up nine hits.

Foxboro came roaring back and sewed up the game scoring five runs in the fourth as Skinner and Reynolds singled, Cannifton erred three times and Turcott doubled.

Gary Little aided his own cause by banging out a double and a single. Pete Young had two singles while Skelly homered for Foxboro. Turcott's double and singles by Charlton, Reynolds and Skinner completed Foxboro's batting.

Len Harvey was best for Cannifton with two singles while Clapp doubled. Other hits went to Petrie, Urch, O'Connor and Don Forgrave.

Next game in the series is Tuesday night at Foxboro at 8.30 p.m.

Cooley, Dixon Spark Larks 21-13 Win

Last-Minute TD

By IAN MacLAINE

TORONTO (CP) — Consid-ered expendable by Hamilton Tiger-Cats a year ago, Harold Cooley has developed into one of the outstanding finds in Montreal Alouette's surge to the top of the Eastern Football Conference schedule.

His shot at a crucial convert attempt took the pressure off the Als Saturday night in their 21-13 conquest of Toronto Argonauts just when the Montreal club was reeling under a tremendous second-half assault by the Argos.

The blocked convert left the Montrealers a 14-13 edge with less than five minutes to go in the game.

Cooley, a former Negro all-American at Jackson State (Miss.) College in 1960, was a terror to Argo backfielders all night and was in on nine tackles in addition to the blocked convert. He was picked up by coach Jim Trimble as a free agent after sitting out the 1963 season when Ticats let him go as their final cut.

Gerry Pinti, a former Argo, Ted Page and George Dixon scored the Alouette touchdowns. Gino Berretta converted all three and the Als ran up another leads of 7-0, 14-0 and 14-13 701 FOR PARKER

Jackie Parker and Ron Hatcher scored the Toronto touchdowns and Jim Christopherson converted one. Parker's 4-yard pointer brought his lifetime scoring total in Canadian football to 701—the first time a professional football player in Canada has reached that plateau.

Dixon put the damper on any Argonaut notions of a comeback late in the game when he swept around the right side of the Toronto line with less than two minutes to go. The touchdown came two plays after Billy Ray Locklin had dumped Parker on the Toronto five - yard line and jarred the ball loose into the hands of Montreal's Chuck Walton at the Toronto seven.

Tempers threatened to flare up on several occasions, but cooler heads kept the would-be troublemakers in check until after the convert on Dixon's touchdown when Toronto's Ron Brewer and Montreal's Rene Bipella of the Als. Both players were banished.

The Montreal offence centred once again on Vernon Cole, the cool and calculating refugee from North Texas State University via Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Cole utilized Dixon's break-away speed and fullback Dave Hoppmann's line-busting gallops to keep Toronto's defences off balance.

DIXON LEADS ALS

Dixon ran 128 yards in 17 carries for a 7.55 average. Hoppmann picked up 84 in 14 tries and Cole carried for 41 yards in six runs to account for the Montreal rushing offensive of 231 yards.

Cole was successful on all three of his passes in the first half — including a touchdown pass to Page—for 56 yards but lofted three incomplete ones in the second half Dixon threw his first pass in Canadian football for Philip's touchdown.

Hatcher barged over from the Montreal two for Toronto's first touchdown, finishing off a sustained drive from the Argo seven-yard line. Parker carried the ball across for the second when he found all his potential receivers covered. He skidded for three yards despite the grappling efforts of two Montreal defenders.

Parker's passing was erratic although he did manage to hit on 14 of 25 attempts for 199 yards—mainly through pinpoint tape catches by halfback Dick Shatto and end Dave Pivec.

Hatcher picked up 74 yards in 10 carries to lead the Toronto rushing attack which ran up 149 yards in the game.

Stottlemyre Wins Two In Row

Yankees, Chisox Whittle Orioles' Margin

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Mel Stottlemyre is one summer replacement who may wind up with a show of his own. And on another network.

This time he whipped the league-leading Baltimore Orioles 3-1. That moved the Yankees to within 3½ games of the Orioles.

The second - place Chicago White Sox moved to within two games of the top with a 2-1 victory over Boston Red Sox.

In other American League games Sunday, Harmon Killebrew hit his 42nd homer as Minnesota Twins defeated Cleveland Indians 13-2, Detroit Tigers walloped Kansas City Athletics 11-3 and Washington Senators defeated Los Angeles Angels 4-1.

In Saturday's AL games, New York thumped Baltimore 8-1, Detroit downed Kansas City 5-1, Washington won 8-2 over Los Angeles, Boston defeated Chicago 7-3 and Minnesota walloped Cleveland 8-3.

WINS FIRST TWO

Stottlemyre was called up from Richmond in the International League last Tuesday. The next day he trimmed the White Sox 7-3 in a complete game. Sunday he went 8 2-3 innings—All Downing came in and got the last out—in the decision over the Orioles.

If things keep on like that, Mel will have a starting job in the World Series in October. That might create one problem —the series is on NBC and the Yankees were bought last week by CBS.

The Orioles took a 1-0 lead on Brooks Robinson's homer in the second and held it until the seventh, when Oriole starter Milt Pappas retired with a stiff arm. Steve Barber came in and Roger Maris promptly sliced a double to left. He went to third when Tom Tresh singled. Luis Aparicio got his glove on the ball and would have thrown Maris out at third but he couldn't hold it.

Finch-hitter Elston Howard lashed a liner to right. Sam Bowens lost it in the lights, which had been turned on in mid-game on an overcast day, and played it into a double, with two runs scoring.

Lopez added a homer in the eighth for the other Yankee run.

Boston's Ciri Yastrzemski misjudged flies by Floyd Robinson and Bill Skowron and both went for triples in the game with the White Sox. Skowron singled Robinson home in the first.

Joel Horlen, with help from Don Wilhelm, got the victory, as the White Sox wound up the season 14-4 over the Red Sox.

Tom Wickersham, traded to the Tigers by the Athletics before the season, posted his 14th win with Don Wert and George Thomas homered. The Athletics hit three homers. Rocky Colavito hit his 23rd and Jim Gentile his 19th and 20th.

Willie Kirkland, obtained on the last week, hit one of the longest homers ever in Washington's new stadium — a long, long drive that disappeared and Buster Narum was his eighth game after 10 unsuccessful starts since June 21.

Brockville Whips Joyces; Series Tied

By ROBERT SNEJIELLA

The Joyce Realtors blew a 7-0 lead and were crushed 15-8 by an inspired Brockville team in a game played yesterday at the O.B.A. senior series at one win each. The third game is slated for Belleville next week.

Belleville used three pitchers Gord Vaughn, Bill Latchford and Pat Asselstine. Between them they allowed 16 hits. Mac struck out six and walked one. Vaughn was the loser.

Brockville's hurlers were Spicer and Wilson. They were tagged for 10 hits, whiffed nine and walked two.

The losers chalked up two runs in the first and five more in the second to take a commanding 7-0 lead. Brockville came back to score three in the second and added another in the fourth. The Beavers scored six runs in the fifth frame and punched five more across in the next inning.

In the second Court Brailey singled and advanced to second on an error. Latchford's perfect bunt loaded the bases. Moon's routine grounder was booted and Brailey scored. The shortstop also bobbled Hunter's drive and McKibbon reached home. Latchford scored on a wild throw from the outfield. Asselstine doubled to empty the bases and the score stood at 7-0.

Pierce singled in Brockville's half of the second. Dexter also singled, but was forced at second. Pierce reached home on an error and both base runners advanced on a passed ball. Spicer lined a shot through McCrimmon's legs and both base runners scored.

In the fourth frame another Brockville run scored on consecutive hits by Coughlin and McRobie.

Marshall started Brockville's rally in the fifth when he lined a single into centre field. Muirhead attained a drive over the left field fence for a grounds rules double. Both men scored when Asselstine's long batter reached home on a double by Dexter. Another two-bagger by Coughlin scored Dexter.

Latchford replaced Vaughan and Spicer lined a shot through Brailey's legs and McRobie scored. Macnall rapped his second single of the inning to score Spicer, and make the score 10-7.

Brockville scored five more runs on hits by Smith, Glass and Coughlin, an error by Asselstine and a home run by Joyces opened their final run on Latchford's double and Louis' single.

Asselstine relieved Latchford in the eighth and retired the next six men to face him.

Jack McNall hit three singles and Ron Pierce two singles and a double to lead the Brockville attack. Sam Snider hit a homer, Bill Glass and Pierce each two singles. Miller with two doubles and Coughlin and McRobie with a single and double rounded out the Brockville hitters.

OUTDOORS

With JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT and RICHARD ALDEN KNIGHT

Every fisherman, no matter whether he is a beginner or a seasoned angler, always wants to hook and, if possible, land a big fish, a tackle buster. Trouble is, big fish are smart, at le: st they are when you compare them with smaller fish. They don't take just any old thing you throw at them. They're choosy and far from easy, to hook.

But big fish, particularly big trout and bass, can be hooked more or less consistently if you fish for them properly. Admittedly, this is a study of itself, as anything bas. The rules, most of them, that apply to the smaller fish don't work out with the big boys as a rule. For example, let's consider big bass.

First off, it must be remembered that a big bass almost always will refuse to cooperate if h- has any idea you are in his area fishing for him. You've got to stay well away from him and, equally important, fish quietly. Then comes the selection of lures. Some lures take big fish consistentiy; most of the others do not. Then, too, big bass are definitely leader-shy.

Some years ago, when my son was a youngster in his teens, we were fishing a private pond in Connecticut. The pond held only an allmouth and, it being late in the season, the big fish were out in deep water, away from the shore lines. Thus, we fished bait, golden shiners. For several hours we had little or no luck. A glance into the live box of the boat showed several dead shiners, so I scooped them up and tossed them out into deep water. Immediately they were taken by a school of kinglsh bass.

AVOIDED THE BAIT

We picked up a few more dead shiners from the live box and baited our hooks with two of them. Then we tossed out some unhooked dead ones. Once the big bass were splashing at the surface, gobbling dead minnows we cast our baits into the centre of the commotion. Result? Nothing. Those big smallmouth would take all the dead baits we threw at them, but toss one out with a hook and leader attached to it and it would be refused.

We have yet to hook the first one of those big bass. Probably for this very reason —their aversion to leaders — surface lures seem to take big bass more readily, than under-water lures. In the plugs, we have had far better success with big bass, notably largemouth, with large plugs, the ¾ ounce jobs. The big Jitterbug, the Injured Minnow or that old three-piece wobbler that Heddon used to turn out, would all take big bass for us with regularity.

But the deadliest of the big bass lures that we have found is the bass bug. For some reason, the leader attached to these lures does not seem to alarm big fish as much as a leader attached to a sub-surface lure. It is better, we think, to use a fairly large bass bug for largemouth, the largest that can be cast with comfort with a fly rod. Smallmouth seem to prefer a somewhat smaller bug than those used for largemouth.

Strangely enough, there are very few bass bugs in the sporting goods stores that can be considered to be really good ones. Most fly fishermen want popping bugs and these, invariably, are made with concave faces. This means, of course, that they will cast off-line. You aim your cast at a gap in the shoreline growth or a pocket in the lily pads and the big winds up about four feet wide of its target. Moreover, a concave face will cause the bug to dive on the pick-up and when this happens a broken rod tip may well be the result. Steer clear of bass bugs with concave faces.

SOME GOOD ONES

But there are some good bass bugs on the mark.t. The old Wilder-Dilg bug is a good one. So is the Mesinger hair frog. Heddon puts out a green frog with a wooden body and hair legs. This will cast true and pick up easily. These bugs are good for both smallmouth and largemouth. Next year Weber Tackle plans to put out two good ones — the Mystery Bug and the Bulldozer. These two have concave faces and rounded edges. They cast true and pick up easily. And they catch fish to beat the band.

Big trout are just as fussy about flies and lures as are big bass. Usually they like a mouthful when they decide to strike. Streamers such as the Mickey Finn or Weber's Little Brown Trout usually will get results. So will the marabou streamers. And unless the big boys happen to be feeding to a drifting hatch of flies (and this doesn't happen too often) the better plan is to show them big fan-wing Coachmen (size 10) or big may - fly drakes.

Also, the large spiders and variants — flies the size of a silver dollar — will produce for you when nothing else will.

Last but not least, don't forget the weighted nymphs for big trout. Fish these well under, right near the bottom, and use as light a leader point as you dare. Large trout don't like leaders any better than large bass do. And remember, when your nymph comes to the end of its drift, bring it to the surface in short, well-spaced jerks. Often this will produce large fish when other methods fail.

As I say, large, grown-up fish are not easy to hook. But when they do decide to decide to strike, the result is well worth the time, patience and study that you have put into the effort of fishing for them.

Canadian Amateur
Weslock Favored To Repeat

SASKATOON (CP) — Some 110 golfers, representing all 10 Canadian provinces, the United States and Bermuda, tee off today in search of the Canadian amateur golf championship won last year at Saint John, N.B., by Nick Weslock of Toronto.

Weslock, 46-year-old veteran of 18 Willingdon Cup teams, ranked as the early favorite to capture the title again But observers predicted a tight contest for the Willingdon interprovincial team crown captured last year by Alberta.

Eight U.S. players and one from Bermuda are entered in the competition, which will be played over the par-70, 6,535-yard Saskatoon Riverside Country Club layout. One of the Americans, Tom Draper of Royal Oak. Mich., was considered a leading rival for Weslock's crown. Draper reached the semi-finals of the competition last year and bowed in the 1962 final to Reg Taylor of South Africa.

The long - playing Riverside course proved difficult for some of the entrants. but Weslock, Draper and Gary Cowan of Kitchener provided early indications they would be tough.

Weslock fired a practice-round 68 Saturday—best of the preliminaries—and followed with a 68 Sunday.

Draper fired a 69 Saturday and Cowan had a practice-round 67.

Familiarity with the course was expected to add to the chances of the Saskatchewan man in the Willingdon Cup competition but Weslock predicted any of five or six teams could wind up on top after the two 18-hole Willingdon Cup rounds. The 18-hole title also will be used to find the 64 qualifiers who will enter the match - play section of the amateur starting Wednesday.

The final, scheduled for Saturday, will be a 36-hole affair. Former champions in the field besides Weslock include Keith Alexander of Calgary and Cowan. Cowan won the championship at Edmonton in 1961 and Alexander won at Ottawa in 1960.

Heimrath Wins At Harewood

JARVIS, Ont. (CP) — Ludwig Heimrath of Toronto drove his Cooper-Ford to victory in the Great Lakes Trophy race over the Harewood Track Saturday and increase. his lead in the 1964 Canadian driving championship to eight points.

Heimrath, 1961 national driving champion, flashed around the 1.9-mile sports-car layout at an average speed of 88.8 miles an hour. His fastest lap of 92.0 miles an hour set a track record. The former record was 91.75 set by Vic Yachub of Kingston.

Yachub, d iving a Ecurie Portland Lotus 19, finished second, 12.6 seconds behind Heimrath.

Oliver Clubine of Brantford, in a Mazda, was third.

Three events remain in the eight-race championship schedule. They are scheduled for Souris, Man., Sept. 6, St. Jovite, Que., Sept. 13, and Mosport, Ont., Sept. 26. The Mosport event is the Canadian Grand Prix.

Hornung Sparks Packers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Paul Hornung is back and it shows on the Green Bay scoreboard.

The three-time National Football League scoring champion, under suspension throughout the 1963 season for betting, sparkled in a home exhibition debut Saturday, leading the Packers to a 24-10 victory over the visiting New York Giants.

Hornung had a hand in 16 of the points the Packers ran up against the Giats, who played the Packers even throughout the first half but faded in the last 30 minutes. THE Arnold Palmer METHOD

Four-Time Winner of the Masters

PROPERLY POSITIONING THE BALL ON PUTTS

Most golfers have accepted the tendency of "picking the ball off the high foot" on uphill and downhill lies in the fairway. Because of the upward or downward slope, they play the ball more forward or farther back, always toward the higher foot. This change in ball position automatically adjusts a golfer's swing to compensate for the irregular terrain.

If a golfer makes this change in ball positioning on fairway shots, he stands to reason that he should also make some compensation, though not to such a degree, on uphill and downhill putts.

If you position the ball for level putts off your left instep on I do (#1), I suggest you play putts from uphill lies off your left toe (#2). Play downhill putts about up-inch farther back than normal (#3).

You will find that this alteration in the ball's position will help give you more solid contact on the putt.

Diving Champions Declared

By MIKE FITZGERALD

TORONTO (CP)—Judy Stewart, a pretty Toronto stenographer, and Tom Dinsley, a University of Indiana graduate from Vancouver, both withstood strong challenges from other divers Sunday to take the women's and men's five- and 10-metre tower events on the final day of the Canadian diving championships and Olympic trials.

Miss Stewart's tower title was her third of the three-day meet and gave her a clean sweep of the women's championships while Dinsley's victory gave him two out of three men's titles.

Both are virtually certain of a trip to Tokyo in October as part of the Canadian Olympic aquatic team but the official team will not be announced until September.

The 18-year-old Miss Stewart, who won a silver medal for Canada in the 1963 Pan-American Games, gave a strong performance in her seven dives in the spectacular tower event Sunday to score 293.6 points. Defending champion Carol Ann Morrow of Vancouver matched her on nearly every dive to register 290.15 points.

Dinsley, 22, had a 45-point lead over John Eisel of Toronto after the seven preliminary dives Sunday but Eisel cut the margin almost in half with a strong showing in the three dive finals. Dinsley finished with 296.8 points, Eisel with 270.35.

Perry Mason Series Will Likely Close End of Year

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Every year for the last three or four Raymond Burr has suggested at about this time that it will be his final season at television's Perry Mason. He is interested in other pursuits, he usually confesses, including his art galleries, motion pictures and a stage career.

There follows a period of considerable excitement at CBS but ultimately comes the news that Perry Mason will continue for another season or so.

This year, however, Burr, a native of New Westminster, B.C., started grumbling in print ahead of his usual schedule. This led TV innocents to believe the summer re-runs from 1961 and 1962 would be the last to be Perry's swan song. And they wrote in, in droves, declaring their undying affection.

But for the first time in the seven-year history of the program, Burr has declared at the end to the TV career of Erle Stanley Gardner's most popular character is definite.

THINKS HE MEANS IT

Gail Patrick Johnson, producer of the series and Gardner's partner in Paisano Productions, says: "I feel that Ray means it this year."

"This year" means, however, there will be the usual quota of new shows to run from September to April or May.

Burr's contract expires at the end of the 1964-65 season and CBS has made no move to renew the series or the star. This situation could change suddenly, should the program get a high audience rating.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Jackson and her Paisano partners are preparing other Gardner literary properties for conversion to television. One is a series of Donald Lam—Bertha Cool, private eye in many a Gardner book. Mrs. Jackson has her eye on Joan Blondell for Bertha.

"But as far as Perry Mason is concerned, we've said fade ionod and I think our fans are " said Mrs. Jackson. "They like the show the way it is and they don't like change."

So, for the time being at least, Perry Mason will still be winning his weekly case in the courtroom. It will be a warm, comfortable feeling to know that something is stable in that unstable world of television.

Revival of Buster Keaton Art Continues to Flourish

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I could retire mighty easy," says comedian Buster Keaton. But his public—or maybe it's Keaton—won't let him.

Buster bought a retirement home in the San Fernando valley with the proceeds from his film biography, but he sees less of it than he'd like. The reason: The revival of the Keaton art continues to flourish.

His silent features, with nothing added but a musical score, have been drawing crowds in Europe. Buster owns 10 of the old comedies plus numerous shorts and plans to release them abroad and in this country.

He's busy with new films, too. He just returned from New York where he starred in an avant garde movie for Samuel Beckett (Waiting for Godot).

"I never did find out what it was all about," said the comedian. "Beckett was always on set and once I asked him, 'How do you get all these crazy ideas? Is it because you had polio?' He just smiled and walked away."

Now old frozen face has stuck a feather in his pork-pie hat and is playing Chief Sutten Eagle in Indiana Party. It's his first lengthy role in films for many years.

Another recent assignment: Working up comedy routines for the Ice Follies. "I tried to convince the boys to be comedians first and skaters second, but I failed," Buster sighed.

And he has also a lucrative sideline of television commercials. While in New York he appeared in a Keystone Cops sequence for Ford trucks and he has buckstered for headache remedies and other products.

"Those commercials are jim-dandies," he commented. "I got paid twice for the Ford job, once for each time it will be shown. Some of the others pay each time they appear, and that adds up nicely."

STAR FOR CNR

His next assignment sounds like a dream. He will star in a locomotive short for Canadian National Railways to extoll the joys of railway travel through Canada. The filming will take four weeks, during which he will tour the scenic wonders in his own railroad car.

"And I insisted on putting it on my contract that I would be paid in cash. I've been bitten before," said Buster, almost smiling at the thought.

At CT Burter shows evidence of good eating, but has lost little of his agility. (His nickname came when he was being tossed about the stage in his family's vaudeville act).

A Kaleidoscope of Cuba

by MORRIS W. ROSENBERG

HAVANA (AP)—Cuban kaleidoscope:

But Cuba's big state publishing house lists its own favorite books as: Tales of Edgar Allan Poe, Robert Louis Stevenson's stories, Flaubert's Madame Bovary, a study of the production of sugar, and a textbook on the metric system.

Grey market prices (automobile division): A cab driver reported he was offered $14,000 for a well-worn 1960 Buick. A set of four sparkplugs was offered for $60.

The oil, grease and gasoline dripped on the streets by the motors of gasping, flaming old British, American, Hungarian and Czech buses have produced a thick film of grease on many thoroughfares. At times roadsweepers are out to remove the greasy layer which is dangerously slippery when wet.

Night life is still active in Havana. The cabarets are nearly empty during the week but on Saturday night they are packed. The biggest, most colorful show is down at the famed Tropicana. There's no switch or brandy, but plenty of rum. Beer is served only with meals.

Posted on a time clock in the National Agrarian Reform Institute is a newspaper clipping. It is the story of two men who collected each other's wages, ever one arrived for work late, the other would punch his time card at the proper hour. The trick was discovered. Each was sentenced to one year in prison.

If a worker quits his job he is not allowed to take another job for a period of one year.

Strikes are considered counter revolutionary crimes. "Workers have no reason to strike now," says an official.

There is no overall shortage, plenty of demand for "voluntary" hours on the job.

The long lines of tired people seen standing in the streets are usually waiting to buy rationed goods: Perhaps their four eggs monthly, or one of the pairs of shoes they are allowed every six —one dress pair, one tennis and one work pair.

In a former capitalist five-and ten-cent store, a long line of women formed to buy toothbrushes.

Many Cuban women still dress in tight, form - fitting dresses that create a sexy impression they are seated when they are standing.

Havana restaurant prices are expensive (the peso is pegged at par with the U.S. dollar). Prices in the Zaragozana, one of Havana's best: Fruit cup $1; shrimp cocktail $2.50; consomme $1.25; potato omelette $3; chicken and rice $5; fried chicken $5; hamburger and cheese $4; rabbit $5; pudding or custard deserts $1.

Most people eat lunches in the "popular restaurants" where they line up by hundreds and for 50 cents eat whatever is served on metal trays. One girl waiting in line commented to a friend: "I bet we will have vigoodle soup, spaghetti and macaroni desert." She was wrong. That day the plate had Spinoad's soup, fried fish with rice and beans. There was no dessert or coffee. Bread but no butter. The previous day the menu was bean soup, meat and rice with canned pineapple for desert.

Stalled cars and trucks are a common sight. The U.S trade embargo has limited the supply of spare parts. The vehicles that roll do so because of ingenious mechanical devices and efforts.

The weekly Iberia Airlines flight to Madrid has a waiting list of persons ready to leave Cuba. They would fill every flight for the next 1½ years.

Sign on a garage: "We repair socialist vehicles."

The Moncada barracks in Santiago, where Fidel Castro led his first revolutionary attack in 1953, now is a high school, part of the campaign to convert the barracks into schools.

But a Cuban in Santiago comments quietly: "There are more barracks elsewhere now than there ever were before."

Tshombe Seeks Long-Range Scout Planes

From AP-Reuters

LEOPOLD VILLE (CP) — Congolese Premier Moise Tshombe has called now for the United States to send his government long - range scout planes so it can keep closer watch on rebel movements in the eastern Congo.

A U.S. embassy official said Tshombe's appeal, made during talks with Mennen Williams, U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, has been sent to Washington An official at the U.S. embassy here indicated there was no reason why the United States would reject the request which would come under the U.S. military technical assistance program.

The planes would be flown by U.S. pilots but they would be at the disposal of the Congolese government for deploying against rebel forces led by leftist Gaston Soumialot.

Dispatches from rebel territory said the Congolese Army has stopped a drive in Bukavu, capital of Kivu, where insurgent forces had pushed to the city's outskirts. Army headquarters said about 300 rebels had been killed in recent operations in the hills around Bukavu.

COLD STANLEYVILLE

The rebel forces already hold Stanleyville, the third largest city in the Congo, about 850 miles from here.

Emergency medical supplies and food were airlifted from Leopoldville to Baudouinville, recaptured by Katangan police last week after it had burned and looted the city. About 1,500 persons in Baudouinville were reported homeless.

Four U.S. Air Force C-130 Hercules planes were sent here by the United States last week to fly such missions. An official of American surplus food and medical supplies have been collected by the United Nations for shipment to Baudouinville.

Meet World's Best

Name Junior Net Champions

OTTAWA (JP) — After four days of eliminations to decide Canada's best native tennis talent, the new champions were turned loose today in open competition where Canadian crowns don't usually carry much weight.

Some of the world's best junior tennis players, including world champions Marcello Lara of Mexico, are joining the 200 Canadians in competition for 12 open titles.

The star of the closed section of the tournament was Andree Martin, a pretty 16-year-old from Montreal, who not only took her girls' 16 class as expected but went on to take the girls 18 singles.

Officials at the tournament—in its 16th year—said it was the first time the two finals had been contested by the same two players.

Bob Puddicombe of Vancouver lived up to his top rating in the 18-year-old boys competition, defeating Barry Shuttleworth of Halifax in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3.

Shakespeare's 11-year-old brother was also a finalist, but lost to John Davis of Montreal, 6-3, 6-1, in the 12-year-old class.

BEATS FLOCK, GATEMAN

Davis reached the final with a pair of victories over Southampton, Ont., entries. He stopped Murray Flock 6-1, 6-1 in the third round and eliminated Martin Gateman 6-4, 6-2 in the semi-finals. Gateman reached the semi-finals with a 6-4, 5-4 conquest of Ottawa's Blake Dunlop.

Chris Burr, 18, of London, Ont., took his age group with a 6-1, 7-5 triumph over Stephane Vezina, 16, of Montreal.

British Columbia players took both titles in the 14-and-under class. Sue Eager won a 6-3, 6-1 decision against Janice Tindle in all-Vancouver girls final. Rocky Skillings of Victoria Beach the boys crown by downing Martin Berryman of Burlington, Ont., 6-3, 6-0.

In an all Ontario final for 12-year-old girls, Karen Will of Clarkson trimmed Vera Komar of Galt 6-2, 6-3. Both girls eliminated London girls in the semi-finals. Miss Will defeated Barbara Lyon 6-2, 6-1 while Miss Komar ousted Helen Sneenk 6-2, 6-2.

Miss Komar also reached the semi-finals in the 14-year-old bracket, but dropped a 6-2, 6-1 verdict to Donna Shakespeare of Halifax.

Crusaders Win Over Parsons 3-2

After two postponed games in two weeks Parsons' Cleaners finally returned to action against the Kingston Crusaders, losing by 3-2.

Parsons went into the lead after commanding the game for about twenty minutes, on a goal by Larry Cain.

Soon after half time Larry Cain scored again, after being put in the clear by Crowle, this goal was again equalled by Jesperson for the Crusaders.

Crusaders were awarded a penalty kick for a handball by a Parsons' defender, the goal being scored by Jesperson.

In the ten minutes Parsons tried hard, and Rutherford missed a booming 25-yard drive which just skipped the crossbar.

Will Protest Wallaceburg Junior Entry

ST. THOMAS (CP) — Five teams in the Ontario Hockey Association western Junior B series decided Sunday to protest the admittance of Wallaceburg into the six-team circuit.

St. Thomas, London, Sarnia, Chatham and Windsor will send delegates to the first fall meeting of the OHA in September to argue against the Wallaceburg entry.

The five teams are protesting on the grounds that Wallaceburg cannot ice a suitable contender and that it will lower gate receipts.

Wallaceburg competed in Junior C division last season and was given permission by the OHA to step into the Junior B class this year.

SUFFERS ATTACK

Americans Parachute Champions

LEUTKIRCH, West Germany (Reuters) — Staff Sgt. Dick Fortenberry and Thelma Taylor of the United States were officially declared men's and women's world parachute champions Sunday.

The American women's squad also won the women's team title in the world parachute championships which ended Saturday after two weeks of competition.

The 26-year-old Fortenberry landed on target in his two jumps from a height of 1,500 metres (about 5,000 feet) to clinch the men's title.

Vaclav Klima of Czechoslovakia was second in the final standings and Pierre Arassus of France was third.

Two Russian competitors who held the lead until the last event, Eugen Tkachenko and Oleg Kazakov, came fifth and sixth respectively.

Czechoslovakia took the men's team championship for the third successive time, Russia was second, the United States third, East Germany fourth and Canada fifth.

Canada was sixth in the women's team events.

Phillies Purchase Shantz

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Philadelphia Phillies announced Saturday they had bought veteran pitcher Bobby Shantz from Chicago Cubs for cash and a player to be named by Oct. 15, or additional cash in lieu of a player.

Shantz was acquired to give added strength to the National League leaders' bullpen staff in the drive for the pennant.

Shantz, one of baseball's smallest pitchers, returns to the city where he enjoyed his great triumphs with Philadelphia Athletics of the American League before they shifted to Kansas City. He was a 24-game winner in 1952.

Since then Shantz has been with New York Yankees, Washington Senators, Houston Colts, Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals before landing a Chicago berth.

Shantz made his debut with the Phillies Sunday, pitching five innings in Philadelphia's 12-4 loss to New York Mets. He gave up four runs, all earned, and six hits.

'PRINCESS IS 18

Channel Swim

Briton Sets New Mark

DOVER, England (Reuters)—A 25-year-old Briton Sunday set a world record for the Channel swim from France to England, cutting an hour off the previous best time.

Barry Watson, a printer from Crossflats, Yorkshire, came ashore in the morning at a beach near Dover after swimming from Cap Gris-Nez in nine hours 35 minutes.

The previous official record was 10 hours 33 minute, set in September, 1961, by Brojan Das of Pakistan.

Another France - to - England swimmer, 24 - year - old American dental student Harry Huffaker of Whitmore Lake, Michigan, was pulled exhausted from the sea Sunday when less than three miles off the English coast. He had been in the water 8½ hours.

A third swimmer, 46-year-old Arthur Ayers of Coventry, England, gave up his effort to swim from France to England after two hours 33 minutes because of leg and stomach trouble.

On Saturday, choppy seas and seasickness forced a team of 10 women to abandon a relay swim across the English channel.

The women—swimming in the nude—had covered 15 miles of the 21 mile stretch of water and had been swimming for seven hours and 21 minutes.

SINGER MARRIES

ESSEX FALLS, N.J. (AP)—Constance Franconero, better known as singer Connie Francis, was married Saturday to Richard Kanellis, a public relations agent. It was the second marriage for Kanellis, 33, who was divorced, and the first for Miss Francis, 26.

Long-Smoldering Feud Between U.S. Army and Air Force Nearing Settlement

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

SAIGON (AP)—A long-smoldering feud between the U.S. Army and the U.S. Air Force in the anti-Communist war in South Viet Nam is moving toward a settlement. It may mean close co-operation for the first time between armed helicopter units of the army and air force fighter planes.

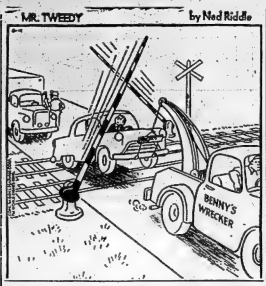
In anticipation of a truce, very high frequency (VHF) radio equipment of the type used in fighter planes is being installed in army escort helicopters.

The truce has been drawn up for the signatures of air force Maj.-Gen. J. D. More and army Brig.-Gen. Delk M. Oden.

It is expected to correct the kind of delay which occurred during last Wednesday's helicopter assault on Communist Viet Cong guerrilla positions. A helicopter pilot requested an air strike by South Vietnamese Air Force fighters flown by U.S. Air Force pilots against a Communist tree line. The helicopter pilot was told that air force fire mission requests could not be accepted from army helicopter men.

HALF-HOUR DELAY

Thus the request had to be filtered through various control centres in Saigon. Half an hour after the request, an air strike force was dispatched.



The operating philosophy of the expected inter-service agreement would make army and air force aircraft almost interchangeable.

The U.S. Air Force both at high levels and at operating field levels, has disapproved of the U.S. Army combat aviation function. Many air force men feel this function can be handled better by the air force.

Army men, in turn, believe the air force has not been able to provide the close support for ground forces that can be provided by army-controlled helicopters. In any case, the army argues they provide a much more stable and accurate platform for firing rockets and machine-guns into enemy emplacements at close range than conventional fighter planes.

Bitter arguments persist between helicopter and fighter pilots and a final truce will depend at least partly on improving relations between these two groups.

Student Admits Killing Four Family Members

CHULA VISTA, Calif. (AP) — An 18-year-old divinity student was booked on suspicion of murder Sunday after police said he told them of beating his mother, father, brother and sister to death.

Raymond Goedecke, student at Lutheran Concordia College in Oakland, Calif., first told officers he discovered the bodies when he returned home Saturday morning from a Lutheran mountain camp.

Police Lieut. Roy Borchers said the youth later admitted using a steel rod to kill his father, Henry, 43, landscape architect and church elder; his mother, Joan, 39; his sister, Helen, 15, and brother, Mark, 8.

Borchers said young Goedecke told him he hated his father because he was demanding better work in school. The officer said the youth stabbed his father 20 times after beating him with the rod.

Printers Promised Support By International Union

TORONTO (CP)—A meeting between negotiators for printers, on strike against three Toronto newspapers since July 9, and international union officers has resulted in a promise of "substantial support" for the local union and no change in the position taken by the local's bargaining committee.

Elmer Brown, International Typographical Union president, promised the support in a statement Sunday following the meeting at union headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Following the return of the local officers Sunday night, union counsel David Lewis said he had been informed by Local 91 President Robert McCormack that there was no change in the bargaining committee's stand in the dispute with The Globe and Mail, a morning paper, and The Star and The Telegram, evening papers.

The union has told Louis Fine, Ontario labor department chief conciliation officer, that it is willing to negotiate with the papers on all outstanding issues.

This contrast in which an earlier union stand on proposals submitted by the publishers since the strike of 400 printers began. The union at first described the proposals as "unionbusting."

Negotiations under Mr. Fine broke down Aug. 4 after settlement of the issue concerning jurisdiction over electronic computers at the papers.

Unsettled were three issues included by the publishers since the strike: The papers' demand for removal of firemen and assistant firemen from ITU jurisdiction, the right of the publishers to introduce any new equipment and elimination of practices which the publishers call featherbedding.

In return, the publishers offered present composing room employees a lifetime guarantee against layoffs due to automation.

The ITU statement in Colorado Springs did not say how much additional support was planned. Strikers are receiving strike benefits amounting to about $87 a week each.

Auto Workers Reject Offer Of Big Three

U.S. Industry Closer To a Possible Strike

DETROIT (AP) — The U.S. auto industry was a step closer to a possible strike today with rejection by the United Auto Workers Union of new contract proposals by General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

Which of the Big Three automakers will be chosen as the No. 1 strike target probably will be decided at a meeting of the UAW international executive board Thursday in Chicago.

GM was named as the primary target in 1961 while Ford was selected in 1955 and 1958.

In almost identical offers Monday, the companies proposed new three-year contracts for more than 500,000 production-line workers, calling for higher wages, earlier retirement and larger pensions.

The proposals — to replace agreements expiring at the end of this month — were immediately rejected by UAW bargainers as "terribly disappointing" and "miserably inadequate."

In turn, a Ford motor company spokesman observed: "This makes the situation very serious."

Workers at all three companies already are participating in a strike - authorization vote which is expected to gain overwhelming approval.

Such a move, strengthening the bargaining position of union negotiators, is necessary as contract expiration deadlines approach.

In 1961, both sides agreed to a week's extension of the GM contract and agreement was reached on a new pact six hours before the strike deadline.

NOT THIS YEAR

Asked whether the union would agree to a similar arrangement this time if progress is being made in negotiations, Leonard Woodcock, UAW Vice-President Leonard Woodcock told reporters:

"Other people in the plants are opposed to it."

Woodcock, chief union negotiator at the bargaining table, said the company offer did not begin to close the gap presently existing between the UAW-related workers represented by the UAW and salaried whitecollar employees.

No mention was made in the contract proposals of one of the union's big concerns this year — improved working conditions.

The union has insisted that the national agreement include two 10-minute daily breaks for production workers in addition to the two 12-minute

Publishers Will Meet Louis Fine

TORONTO (CP) — Louis Fine, chief conciliation officer of the Ontario department of labor, was to hold exploratory talks today with publishers of the three Toronto daily newspapers, hit by a printers strike July 9.

Talks under Mr. Fine between the publishers and local 91 of the International Typographical Union (CLC) broke down Aug. 4 over issues introduced by the publishers' since the union's 600 members at the papers' walked off their jobs.

Mr. Fine met with the union bargaining committee last week. At the end of two days of talks, the union said it was willing to negotiate on all outstanding issues in its dispute with the Globe and Mail, a morning paper, and the Star and the Telegram, evening papers.

The newspapers, which have continued to publish using supervisory and non - union employees to carry out composing room work, were not represented at last week's meetings.

The three issues outstanding when joint negotiations broke down were publishers demands for elimination of foremen and assistant foremen from the ITU bargaining unit, elimination of practices which the publishers call featherbedding and the right to introduce and use new equipment and processes.

PRESENT VIEWS

Meanwhile, representatives of four other unions which bargain with the newspapers conveyed their unions' views at a meeting with the Globe and Mail. Union spokesmen presented texts of resolutions expressing concern over the apparent stalemate in the situation.

Represented at the talks were the Toronto branch of the American Newspapers Guild (CLC), the International Stereotypers Union (CLC), International Printing Pressman's Union (CLC) and the International Photo Engravers' Union (CLC). The unions have all continued to work at the plant.

Speaker Upheld In Vote

By JOHN E. BIRD

All opposition party leaders have indicated they will attend a conference called by Prime Minister Pearson for 12 noon, apparently in an effort to arrive at a compromise on a flag design.

The conference was to take place after the ninth day of Commons debate Monday on the government's proposed design — three red maple leaves on a white background with blue bars at each side.

By a vote of 94 to 59 the House upheld a ruling by Speaker Alan Macnaughton refusing to allow a Conservative sub-amendment to the government's flag resolution.

NO EXPECT

However, the ruling had practically no effect on the free-flowing debate, with despite objections from Justice Minister Favreau, government House Leader, and the chair.

The vote on the Speaker's ruling was taken after Conservative shouts of "veto" — "1956 all over again," and "the pipeline debate."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker protested that any restriction of debate on the sub-amendment would be completely untenable and would be "application of the guillotine under cover."

Such a restriction would be "an indirect form of closure," said Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre). Opposition House leader.

CALLS FOR PLEBISCITE

The sub-amendment, proposed Thursday by Ken More (PC—Regina), proposes that the original motion be amended to read: "And this House is of the opinion that the matter of the Canadian Red Ensign, which for so long a period has been the symbol of the Canadian people, should not be changed to show the heritage of the two foundings races and whether they are in favor of a three-maple leaf design or of a maple leaf design."

Mr. Favreau protested that the first speaker Monday, Harold Danforth (PC—Kent, Ont.), was not confining his remarks to the four questions. Speaker Macnaughton agreed, and ruled that speakers must restrict their

North Bay Residents Fear Disarmament Consequences

NORTH BAY (CP) — A group of university students has been conducting a research project since May to get some idea of the effect disarmament would have on this community of 47,000 with about 13 per cent of its labor force on the RCAF pay roll.

Arthur Page, 22, a graduate philosophy student of the University of Toronto, and 14 other members of the combined universities campaign for nuclear disarmament have spent the summer here doing research. The project is entirely self-supporting.

In a random selection sample of 210 North Bay residents, which Mr. Page said was sufficient to make the sampling accurate, the group asked 48 questions. The answers have been analysed by a computer in Toronto.

Asked what effect the removal of military installations near here — a Bomarc missile site, an electronic Semi Automatic Ground Environment centre, and the RCAF air station —would have on the economic welfare of the community, 86 per cent answered that it would have "serious" or "some" effect while 14 per cent answered that it would have "little" or "no effect."

"The military bases are the largest single contributor to the economy of the area," Mr. Page said today in an interview.

"If disarmament were to come tomorrow North Bay would suffer severely and there fore this city presents a real political obstacle to disarmament."

About 17 per cent of the people interviewed refused to answer the questions which, Mr. Page said, was normal for sociological studies. The survey is expected to end Aug. 28.

Mr. Pope predicted that if disarmament came tomorrow, 1,400 airmen and technicians from the bases here would leave the area and more than 350 persons living in North Bay would lose their jobs.

Bench Warrant Issued

MONTREAL (CP)—Where is Hal Banks?

Members of Parliament want to know. Police now want to know. A bailiff of Montreal Superior Court has wanted to know for about a month.

The burly former president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) didn't show up at a required Montreal criminal court appearance Monday. A bench warrant was issued for his arrest.

If he has left Canada, a justice department source in Ottawa said extradition could be sought if he is in a country with which Canada has an extradition agreement. There has been speculation—but nothing more—that Banks has gone to his native United States.

Roblin Rejects Sales Tax But Aids Property Owners

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Manitoba government will reach into the pockets of smokers, drinkers, motorists, electricity and telephone users to collect money to pay for increased aid to municipalities and a school tax rebate to property owners.

Premier Duff Roblin Monday imposed new taxes in these fields as he rejected a general retail sales tax as a method of raising an additional $29,700,000 annually to cover the increased expenditure.

He said in an effort to achieve a transfer of the tax burden properly owners will get a 50 per cent rebate on about 50 per cent of taxes with a maximum $50 payment on each tax bill for one year.

Most of the remainder will pay for grants to municipalities in lieu of local taxes, up to five per cent of the tax bill and for increased aid on local roads and streets.

In addition to the rebate, one tax decrease was announced which a treasury official estimated might save Manitoba taxpayers more than $1,000,000 annually.

The provincial surtax on federal rates on individual incomes will be reduced to five per cent from six per cent.

The premier announced those new taxes:

—A five-per-cent surtax on telephone, electricity, and natural gas bills and one cent a gallon on fuel oil used for heating;

—A one-per-cent tax on the registration of land transfers;

—Additional rates of taxation will be made on the following existing areas of provincial taxation:

—Doubling of the tobacco tax to 20 per cent, jumping the price of a package of 25 cigarettes five cents to 55 cents;

—Liquor prices to increase 25 or 30 cents a bottle depending on price (scotch now costs $5.60), retail beer will increase 15 cents a dozen to $2.50 and increases in wine prices;

—A 25-per-cent increase in drivers' licences (now $1 for

NATO Troops Withdrawn For Cyprus Defence

Eastern Flank Stripped; Greeks Laud K's Stand

NICOSIA (AP) — Greece apparently is closing ranks with the Greek - Cypriot regime of President Makarios by withdrawing some Greek forces from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to help defend Cyprus.

Greece's decision Monday helped ease a strain between Athens and Nicosia. It also came in a new blow to the solidarity of the Atlantic alliance's eastern flank at a time when the Cyprus crisis has become embroiled in the Cyprus crisis.

Meanwhile, a Greek military force said in Athens that NATO Supreme Commander Lyman Lemnitzer has dispatched to Greece not to remove its NATO eastern flank headquarters from Izmir.

Turkey withdrew some airfree planes from NATO control days ago after the Greek - Cypriots charged that Turkish jet fighters took off from NATO bases to attack Cyprus.

ISSUE STATEMENT

A Greek foreign ministry statement in Athens said Greece's protests about the Turkish pullout had gone unheeded.

"Following this," the statement added," Greece decided to withdraw the necessary army, naval and air force units assigned to the alliance.

"The decision was taken . . . to fulfill Greek obligations to defend the independence and territorial integrity of Cyprus, and in particular in ward off the constant Turkish threat."

Greece also hailed "as an important contribution to peace" Soviet Premier Khrushchev's warning to Turkey against further air attacks on Cyprus.

The Greek stand pleased the Greek - Cypriot government, which had been chided by Premier George Papandreou for launching a military drive against the Turkish - Cypriot coastal stronghold without consulting Greece. The attack brought four days of Turkish fighter raids on Greek-Cypriot towns.

FORCE COMMITTED

Greece's NATO forces total 120,000 men and its entire air force, most modern fighter-bomber squadrons, is committed to the alliance. Like the Turkish armed forces, most Greek units have U.S. equipment.

Greek-Cypriot Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou attended

Hoffa Sent To Prison For 5 Years

CHICAGO (AP) — James R. Hoffa's chief counsel says he will appeal the five-year prison term given the Teamsters Union president on a mail fraud and conspiracy conviction.

Maurice Walsh, Hoffa's chief lawyer, said he would appeal the sentence and ask for a new trial within the 10-day period established by Judge Richard B. Austin Monday.

Judge Austin sentenced Hoffa, 51, to four consecutive five-year terms and fined him $10,000. Judge Austin said the term would be served after Hoffa finishes an eight - year prison sentence handed down in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Judge Austin sentenced Hoffa and six co-defendants on convictions of mail fraud and conspiracy arising from a scheme to obtain fraudulently more than $25,000,000 from the Teamsters' pension fund.

A jury of eight men and four women returned a guilty verdict July 26.

TWO SENTENCES

The powerful union leader now faces two sentences totaling 13 years in prison. Hoffa was sentenced to eight years earlier this year in Chattanooga for jury tampering. The Chattanooga conviction also is being appealed.

Judge Austin fined five co-defendants $5,000 each on civil-action charges and sentenced them to prison terms.

A sixth defendant, suffering from a heart condition, was fined $5,000 and given one hour in custody of a U.S. marshal.

Hoffa told a reporter he expects to serve the Chicago sentence after completing the Chattanooga term "if I have any to serve at all." He declined further comment and made no statement in court.

Prosecutors said appeal procedures could forestall imprisonment for Hoffa for as long as two years.

WAS MAXIMUM

Hoffa's sentence was the maximum permitted—five years for each of three counts of mail and five years and the fine for conspiracy.

The co-defendants and their

Cuba and Red China Broadcast Advice to U.S. Negroes to Revolt

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Broadcasts from Cuba and Red China have been advising U.S. Negroes to take to the streets in armed revolutionary violence and even guerrilla war.

The Chinese claim Negro violence in the U.S. must be encouraged in the name of "the national liberation movement."

Peking has enlisted a man with Cuban ties, a Frank Coe, once was a target of a U.S. Senate investigation for alleged spying on behalf of international communism. He was a high-paid secretary of the International Monetary Fund in the late 1940s.

Just a year ago, China's Mao Tse-tung issued a declaration urging "the world's people"—meaning the U.S. as a club in its ideological war with the Soviet Communists.

The Chinese want non-white people in Africa, Asia and Latin America to believe Peking is their only true friend. Red China is trying to shut the Russians out of Asia and take over revolutionary causes—the "national liberation movement"—in all underdeveloped areas.

Last week, to commemorate the first anniversary of Mao's declaration, a series of rallies was held in China. One speech was delivered by "American comrade Frank Coe," as Peking radio described him. He had been active in behind-the-scenes moves for years before when Mao made the statement.

Coe noted that Mao's declaration was widely distributed among Negroes in the United States. He told the U.S. Negroes "are beginning to talk more and more about armed self-defense, about fighting for freedom by any means necessary, about guerrilla warfare and civil war."

Coe said true Marxist-Leninists "advocate armed self-defence," and "liken the stand of non-violence to that of Khrushchev." He accused pro-Khrushchev Communists in America of counselling "Negroes to stop their violence.

Bus Carrying Happy Children Hurtles Across Road Killing Eight

Then, a blown-out tire, a series of collisions, and eight persons lay dead. Four were children, one the adopted daughter of Roy Rogers and Dale Evans. About 40 persons were injured, 10 severely.

After that, the horrified, real actions: "It was awful." "I couldn't look." "We all just knew." "I thought I was going to die. I can't believe I'm alive." "There was gas and blood all over. I'll never forget all the blood."

Police said the bus was 21 years old and had no emergency exit. It was carrying 66 members of the Disciples of Christ Chapel of the Canyon Church of Canoga Park, Calif., and was six miles south of San Clemente when a front tire blew.

The bus hurtled across the divided highway, striking several other vehicles and coming to rest against a tree at the edge of a 40-foot bluff over San Onofre Creek.

Two children on the church bus died. One was Deborah Lee Rogers, 12, a blue-eyed adopted daughter of Rogers and Miss Evans' big white. The other was Deborah's friend, 12-year-old Joan Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Russell of Granada Hills, Calif.

The other six dead were all in one station wagon. They were Mrs. Mildred Hamilton, 50, of Albuquerque, N.M.; her children, Jo Ellen, 16 months, and Jeffrey, 4; and the Rev. and Mrs. Marie Huss, 20, of Fallbrook, Calif., and her sisters, Susan, 22, and Catherine, 15.

"After we stopped, we climbed out the windows," she said. "I walked around to the front part of the bus. Debbie's head was touching the window. . . . Blood was just streaming down the side of the bus. Then she lifted up her head once, and I could see that most of her face was torn. Then her head fell forward and she was gone."

Passengers on the bus said the group had made its regular monthly trip to donate food and clothing to the Mexican orphanage in Tijuana, just across the Mexican border from San Diego.

Debbie, adopted by Rogers and Miss Evans in 1958, was 12 last Friday. We selected Debbie from a photograph because she looked so much like Dodie," said Miss Evans, referring to another adopted child, Mercy Dawn, an 11 - year - old American Indian.

Rogers and Miss Evans have had nine children—five adopted. One daughter by birth, Robin, died several years ago.

Special Events For Children Much Enjoyed

A kiddies' special events grandstand show, including the old game of musical chairs and a pie-eating contest, was one of the highlights of yesterday's fair novelty program.

It was the first time that such events had been offered on the children's day program and it went over with a big bang. Fair Director Harry "Senator" Rollins presided over the events.

David Lloyst won the pie-eating contest and had the pie smeared face to prove it. Runners up with equally smeared faces but slightly slower time were Peter Zebedee and Ben Haighway.

Trenton Visitor To Tell French Of Beauty Spots

TRENTON — Beauty spots in Ontario will be the subject of a talk this autumn in the French town of Aix-en-Provence, a community of 80,000 population, before the Academy of that town, by Dr. Elisee Charpin, the father of a Trenton woman, Mrs. John Forbes of Third Ave. The Academy at Aix-en-Provence is a small edition of the famous French Academy, and its members are all appointed professional men from all walks of life.

Dr. Charpin and his wife, recently returned to France after spending a month with their daughter. During the visit, the couple made trips to Haliburton, Algonquin Park, Ottawa, Orangeville and Toronto and drove to Montreal to take the plane back to France from Dorval airport. This is the third trip to Canada for the Charpins.

While in Trenton, Dr. Charpin visited the Chamber of Commerce tourist booth, run this year by Peter Bonter where he picked up a large number of travel folders, brochures, etc. Dr. Charpin means to bring this material back with him for the edition of his own Chamber of Commerce, as he commented that the tourist booth information was excellent, and the literature itself superior to any he had seen in other centres.

Request Office For Court Clerk

TRENTON — Mrs. Nellie Bain, the wife of the late Trenton police chief, Wm. Bain, has been appointed Clerk of the Court for Trenton. Mrs. Bain was sworn in as Justice of the Peace in Trenton for a number of years, and will continue to do so, in addition to her new duties.

The Family Court officials have requested verbally that Mrs. Bain be given office space upstairs in the Market Building. The request was relayed to Trenton council last night by clerk comptroller O. W. Lutz.

Councillor G. A. Weaver asked that the council official put their request in writing. He said he was opposed to putting anymore on the market building, when council meant, in the final analysis, to raze the building.

"If we keep adding improvements to the building, it will be hard to explain why we want to do away with it," he said.

Mayor Lloyd Reid said he plans to partition off an office for Mrs. Bain in the upstairs courtroom near the Rotary club dining school would have to be moved elsewhere. The mayor also called for some investigations into the moving of the Department of Transport motor vehicle bureau office from upstairs to the downstairs boiler room at the rear of the market building.

Sweden paid out more than $202,000 in life insurance to relatives of seamen killed in accidents aboard Swedish vessels in 1963.

Council Spends Considerable Time in Discussing Items Related to Real Estate

TRENTON — Trenton town council was last night very much concerned with real estate, with almost every item on the agenda devoted to some phase of (proposed) building, zoning or street naming.

A proposal to change the residential zoning on one piece of land in west Trenton to commercial, to permit the building of a medical centre on the land now occupied by Fitheret Manor, will be discussed at a meeting in the council chambers to-night, starting at 8 p.m. The manor, a commercial use, has been tolerated as a non-conforming use in the residential area, but now that the building has been sold, and sub-tenanted for rental, the land reverts to residential and must be changed to commercial if the centre is to be built.

Also to be discussed Wednesday night is the change of zoning on Blocks B and C on Trenton Street, from open space to residential. The land is owned by a Mr. Childerhose and is a small triangle of land, located near the CNR station, north of Trenton. Mr. Childerhose proposes to build a house on the lot.

Councillor Ernest W. Lavry gave notice of the public meeting at last night's council meeting. Persons living in the vicinity of either of the pieces of land concerned, may come to the meeting to express their views on the proposed change in zoning. If no opposition is registered, the town will move to have the Official Plan changed in respect to these properties. And once this change is approved by the Ontario Municipal Board, the zoning regulations will be changed accordingly.

Mr. D. Masters of West St., who has asked that the land on which his parts store stands be changed from residential to commercial, so owner can say that may continue to operate, was told by council "sorry, but there is nothing we can do about it." The Trenton Planning Board is opposed to the change in zoning as the much travelled street is narrow.

GIVEN ADVICE

The planning board feels one more commercial outlet in the area would lead to traffic congestion as cars would come and go, to and from, the premises.

Mr. Masters said that when he bought the building from the Belleville realtor a year ago, he was told he could operate a business there, and he was advised by council to seek redress from the realtor.

Stanley Reid of Trenton has submitted an offer of $300 an acre for the 2.9 acres in Leslie's Island located on the H.S. Camp factory in North Trenton.

However, as the land here is "prime" industrial land, and one of the two serviced industrial sites owned by town, the committee of industry and economic development headed by Councillor Jack Graham, will consider the offer in the light of the fact that the realty company proposes to build a 2,500 square foot sash and door factory on the site. While such a factory would provide some local employment, a larger factory built on the site would provide more. The realty company may be offered an alternate site somewhere else in the town.

A Belleville realtor, a Mr. Bell, has asked council to approve a sub-division plan for Reid Street, formerly North Byron Street. The land is owned by Cecil Marchen. As this area is not serviced with sanitary sewers, Mr. Bell proposes to develop only eight lots fronting on Reid Street, at the front of the sub-division. He would pay council $1,200 a each lot, a sum with which council will represent the owner's share of the cost of installing curbs, roads, and sewers. Until the sewers were installed, the eight home owners would have septic tanks.

Town solicitor Roderick Campbell, town engineer Eric Alexander and the joint work committees of council headed by Councillor Joseph Gould on the ramifications of council "piling off more than it can chew" if it approves all plans as proposed by Mr. Bell.

MAY SEEK SERVICES

Councillor Weaver thought that one or three of the lots furthest north might be sold and the owners may seek services for services. This might mean council would be obliged to put sewers and water mains in the street. And the persons who had built, and paid their $1,200 for the lot, might be benefied in asking for the services.

Mr. G. B. Landis of 71 Sidney St., who had appeared earlier in the month to ask that his address be changed to 1 South Street, came again last night to say he had been a little nonplussed to find that council had not only changed his address to South Street, but had changed the entire section of the street to South Street. Mr. Landis said, and his remarks were borne out by Councillors Gould and Weaver, that he had been known as South Sidney.

Mayor Reid chaired the residents of the former Sidney St. section were incensed at the proposed change of name for their street, and were, in effect, casting the blame on Mr. Landis.

Council could see no object in changing its mind again, and the section of the street, known in the past as "Sidney Street," and running between Princess and Front Sts., and past the community gardens, will be known as South Street.

And shades of Jimmy Day. Mr. Jan Bullee had written to council that council's plan to get rid of town-owned land on the mountain side of Lorne Ave. North, by selling property to build a garage next the mountain to service his Lorne Ave. lot. It was the opinion of Councillor Graham that Mr. Bullee himself had enough land for the garage, but that he would be glad to purchase for Ross Burtt resurected the story of Mr. Day, who gained notoriety in Belleville at the end of six months, if a chief is hired from within the department, then the commission majority will presumably authorize the hiring of another constable. If a chief is brought in from the outside, the force would then be up to 20-man strength. The mayor said that the men are continuing to work overtime and will continue to do so until the additional man is hired.

The mayor also said Herrington and Kidd had been awarded the contract to supply two cruisers for the department at a cost of $6,000. As soon as the cruisers are available, the police department's rental contract with Card Motors will be cancelled.

C of C to Get Building Lot

TRENTON — Trenton Council last night gave third and final reading to a by-law, by the terms of which the town will sell for $1 a waterfront lot, measuring 22 feet by 97 feet, to the Trenton Chamber of Commerce. The lot is located almost directly across from the new federal building site, in the near vicinity of the proposed second bridge across the Trent, and will have access from the rear to water traffic.

The members of the Trenton Builders' Association, who have offered to put up the permanent chamber office on the site, are expected to swing into action almost immediately. The only cost to the chamber will be for the building materials. These will be financed by a mortgage, taken out by the chamber, and while at first it was thought these might cost around $5,000, the figure mentioned at last night's council meeting was closer to $2,000.

On Road Body

TRENTON — Paul Tripp was last night appointed by Trenton council to sit on the Trenton and Suburban Road Commission, to replace retiring Harold Turney. Other commission members are: Gordon Mills, Reeve Vipan and Northumberland County engineer, George Totten.

4-H Members Attend Peterborough Fair

Twelve 4-H boys from Hastings County, accompanied by Mr. Douglas Tupper, agricultural representative, Mr. Lyall MacLachlan, assistant agricultural representative, and Mrs. Wood, secretary, travelled to Peterborough to attend the Junior Dairy Judging competition there.

Contestants were required to judge and give reasons on a class of Holstein cows, a class of Shorthorn cows, a class of Ayrshire cows and a class of hay. In addition they were required to identify twenty-five objects connected with agriculture and answer a quiz on farm management for 4-H clubs.

Following the judging competition the members had a short time to visit the exhibits before returning to the Memorial Centre to attend the evening banquet as guests of the DeLaval Company of Peterborough. Members were also presented with tickets to the Ex grandstand show in the evening.

Although none of the boys from Hastings won any prizes, all did well and most were in the prize money. The top boy in the group was Ronald Hall of Tweed, Ontario.

Mayor Explains His Views On Police Force

TRENTON — Mayor James MacDonald explained at last night's Trenton council meeting his stand on the hiring of a new chief constable for the town, a stand which did not meet with the ideas of the majority of the Trenton Police Commission.

The commission is composed of the mayor, ex-officio, Judge J. C. Anderson of Belleville, and Magistrate W. R. Philp of Frankford.

The mayor said he was in favor of hiring a chief of police with the qualifications of F. J. Taylor, within a three months' period. The other commission members have placed a six months' minimum period on the hiring. Meanwhile, Inspector Rutherford, who has been carrying on a "day-to-day" basis as acting chief constable of the department, has now been appointed inspector-in-chief for the next two months.

In the eyes of the majority of the commission, the force is now sufficiently efficient and in the eyes of the mayor, the force is only one man short. However, Judge Anderson and Magistrate Philp have empowered the inspector to advertise for an additional constable. At the end of six months, if a chief is hired from within the department, the commission majority will presumably authorize the hiring of another constable. If a chief is brought in from the outside, the force would then be up to 20-man strength. The mayor said that the men are continuing to work overtime and will continue to do so until the additional man is hired.

The mayor also said Herrington and Kidd had been awarded the contract to supply two cruisers for the department at a cost of $6,000. As soon as the cruisers are available, the police department's rental contract with Card Motors will be cancelled.

IN MEMORIAM

GARRISON — In memory of a dear mother and grandmother Ann Dodson Garrison who passed away August 18, 1962.

We often sit and wonder,
What you would say and do,
If you only knew the changes,
Since God parted us from you.
To some you are a memory,
To others part of the past,
But to us who loved you,
Your memory will always last.
Sincerely remembered by Ruth and family.

On the park area at the entrance to the fairgrounds four other auto dealers have displays.

North Carolina Caravan Pays Visit to City

A caravan of 17 cars polled into the new YMCA this morning as more than 606 campers from Greensboro, North Carolina stopped to say "hello" and t. freshen up.

The caravan is part of the International Family Campers Exchange Program. This group was set up to promote exchange camping between members in the United States and Canada.

The 17 families set out from Greensboro August 8th and after spending four days at the New York World's Fair came up through northern New York State and crossed over into Canada at Ivy Lea, near Gananoque. The campers spent last night at the Outlet Provincial Park and then proceeded to Belleville to partake of some of the Belleville Y's hospitality and "to wash off some of the travel dirt."

The group left Belleville around noon and proceeded onto Toronto. Tonight they will be entertained by the Scarboro chapter of this international camping organization. From Toronto the campers will go to Niagara Falls and then through Pennsylvania and arrive back in Greensboro sometime Sunday.

Jack Nantz, the leader of the caravan, when asked how he found Canada, summed it up in an exclamatory "beautiful." He also said that he was particularly impressed by the friendliness of the people. Coming from a southerner, used for hospitality, this was quite a compliment to the people of Canada.

Two Trapped Miners Believed Dead in Shaft

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — Eight-man teams, working in shifts, began the slow and laborious job Monday of trying to reach two men buried under tons of rock at a Kirkland Lake mine, but mine officials feel it will be several days before workers a p r o a c h the spot where the men are buried.

Because of the fear of further rock blasts, officials of the Wright-Hargreaves Gold Mine ordered that only pick and shovels be used to remove rock and debris.

The two men, Donald Yavorski, 45, and Edouard Duchesne, 35, both of Kirkland Lake, are believed dead.

The missing miners were digging in a stope 40 feet long, 70 feet high and six feet wide at the 4,000-foot level when the gold mine was shaken by a rock blast Friday. A shift of 65 miners was at work when the blast ripped through the mine.

Only Yavorski and Duchesne were reported missing when the men were called to the surface.

Immediately following the blast, the captain of the night shift and mine manager Frank Buckle led a crew to within 15 feet of where the men had been digging. But further tremors forced the crew to abandon efforts and a short time later tons more rock fell in the same area of the mine.

WORK SUSPENDED

All other work at the mine has been ordered stopped by officials until the men are reached.

The first burst was followed within three hours by five more bursts. The most severe of the later shocks was felt 15 miles away in Larder Lake.

The children of widower Yavorski, Mrs. Christine Webster, 22, and her brothers, Arthur, 16, and David, 17, accused Wright-Hargreaves officials of not keeping them informed of rescue developments.

They said they were shocked to hear that rescue operations were not to begin until today, however, Buckle had said earlier that tunnelling would have begun sooner if conditions had been considered safe enough.

Duchesne's four sons, all former miners, volunteered to join rescuers.

Officials said the rock bursts, caused by underground upheavals, are common in the area but usually take place in abandoned shafts.

The last fatal rock burst at the mine killed two persons in May, 1950.

After excavating loose brick fill for a distance of approximately 20 feet, workmen have reached the bottom of the old well on the former post office site.

The old well was discovered last week during preparation work for the new Ontario Intelligencer building at the corner of Bridge and Pinnacle Streets and since has created considerable interest on the part of city old timers.

When discovered there was some thought the old well may have been spring fed, but this morning there was only about eight inches of water in the bottom, most of it believed to be the result of seepage.

But aside from its historical interest the old well created a bit of a problem for Andre and Son be Kingston, general contractors for the new newspaper office.

This means that if a solid foundation is to be provided for the new building the well has to be completely excavated, then filled in with stone and concrete.

The old well was hand drilled through solid rock for a depth of about 20 feet.

An old well driller said the drilling would be a three-man operation with one man holding the drill and the other two striking alternative blows with sledges.

Dean Richards Of OAC Is Rotary Speaker

Dean Richards spoke on the purpose of an agricultural college, being of service to agriculture and rural Ontario. He outlined the curriculum of the new university's department of agricultural science, pointing out the challenge of organizing a department that is science-orientated to meet the needs of agriculture and rural Ontario.

This challenge is to be met at Guelph, according to Dean Richards, by designing programs to prepare students for ready adjustment to today's rapid rate of technological change.

This talk of Dean Richards on agriculture and the new University of Guelph was particularly appropriate as members of the Belleville Agricultural Society and Fair Board were guests of the club yesterday.

Will Curtail Openings of Bay Bridge

The swing bridge on the Bay Bridge here will operate at half-hour intervals during the day time, starting Friday. This was announced this morning by J. L. Forster, district maintenance engineer for the Port Hope division of the Ontario Department of Highways.

Mr. Forster explained that difficulty is being experienced with the swing mechanism of the bridge. At present the bridge is swung on demand, for all craft. To reduce the number of times the bridge is operated, it is proposed to open it at half-hour intervals, between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. for pleasure craft, if required. The bridge will still be opened for commercial vessels during the day. At night, from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m. the bridge will be swung on demand for all vessels.

This change in operation will come into effect on Friday and will continue until further notice, until the mechanism of the bridge is repaired. Because of anticipated delay in procuring parts, it is expected that the changed schedule will be in effect for a month or longer.

Napanee Girl Hurt in Crash Still Serious

A 14-year-old Napanee girl, Sarah Marie Rankin, is reported as being in still serious condition at Belleville General Hospital.

Miss Rankin was the sole survivor of a two-car crash Saturday night at Shannonville which took the lives of three men, 19-year-old Paul Rogers of Napanee, Donald E. Spencer and Angus Robichaud both of Shannonville.

Man Suffers Severe Burns In Apt. Fire

A Belleville man, W Hinze, believed to be in his 20's, was taken to hospital late last night by City Ambulance of Belleville as the result of a fire in his apartment on Victoria Ave.

The Belleville Fire Department received a call to 264 Victoria Ave., about 11.30 p.m., the home a Mrs. E. J. Duffy.

Mr. Hinze occupied the upstairs, apartment in the Duffy residence.

Police entered the smoke filled apartment and found Mr. Hinze lying on the bed. He was removed by ambulance attendants to hospital where he is believed suffering from burns to his face, arms and hands. The extent of his burns is not known.

As a result, considerable fire, smoke and water damage was caused to the apartment.

The booth — and the pelts — are the property of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests and form one of the most valuable exhibits at the 1964 Belleville Fair.

"We want people to become familiar with Ontario fur," explains Con Ducharm, the Lands and Forests official permanently in charge of the exhibit. "Both the Ontario and federal governments are promoting the idea here and in Europe."

The display, set up here beneath the grandstand and drawing scores of interested spectators, boasts pelts from the beaver, otter, lynx, fox, even timber wolf and — oh yes, mink. Lots of mink.

Valued in thousands of dollars, the pelts shown in Belleville are only one-third of the actual display organized by the department. It varies according to the space available at each location.

Local game warden George Warner and Sally Lambert from the department's Napanee office are on regular duty at the booth and ready to talk about the exhibition and Ontario wildlife.

The rich display of pelts are the centrepiece for an aquarium of the province's fish, including pickerel, pike and bass.

Puzzle for Philosopers

A leading geneticist, Dr. Bentley H. Glass of Johns Hopkins University, predicts that embryonic human life will soon be produced artificially in laboratories.

This, he says, will create new legal and ethical problems and he wants medical, legal, religious and philosophical experts to start now to consider them. If the scientist disposes of an embryo he has produced in a test tube, is that murder? Would experiments with these embryos—and obviously scientists would be eager, to conduct them—be illegal. And, if not illegal, would they be immoral?

If these seem difficult questions, what about those which will arise if the embryos ever become fully developed and emerge from the test tubes as human babies? Will it be legal to kill these babies or to experiment with them? The layman and the lawyer are likely to reply promptly in the negative. A baby is a baby. But have we any proof that the test tube baby would be exactly the same as the normal baby? Would it have a soul? At what point in its development would it acquire it? And what about pre-natal influences? Is talk of such influences all nonsense? And if not, what would be the pre-natal influences which would help determine the nature of a test-tube baby? Would its disposition depend in part on the leisure-time activities of the laboratory technician who cared for it during the embryonic state? What about those states which have a law against miscegenation? Would it be legal for scientists to produce a white baby or a black baby but illegal for them to "manufacture" a baby of mixed test tube parentage?

It is one to call these questions frivolous, nor to argue that they can wait until there is some prospect of the embryos produced in test tubes developing into full-grown babies. How we permit these scientific "daddies" and "mommies" to treat these embryos will, in at least some measure, establish precedents which will do much to determine how we treat "manufactured" babies if and when they ever arrive on the scene.

Are Maritimers Lazy?

Racial discord being not unknown in Canada at this time, there will be those who will not be surprised to learn there are almost twice as many lazy people in Quebec as there are in Ontario. But how can we explain the fact that the incidence of loafers in the Atlantic provinces is over twice what it is on the Prairies? Maritimers, after all, are predominantly of Anglo-Saxon stock.

That they are lazy, though, is the only conclusion one can draw from the latest figures on unemployment in Canada if one accepts the view that there is work for everybody who wants it and that those without jobs are shiftless ne'er-do-wells.

One of the disturbing features about unemployment statistics for some time past has been the differences which they reveal in economic conditions in various parts of Canada. We in Ontario may feel sure the country is booming, that prosperity is breaking out all over, but figures for Quebec and the Maritimes have provided striking evidence the good fortune we are enjoying is not shared in full measure by all other Canadians.

It is comforting to find the Prairies are in busy as Ontario, but this, we may be sure, is closely linked to last year's good harvest and the success enjoyed in finding markets for this grain.

Such differences in prosperity, while they involve obvious hazards to national unity and understanding, might almost be considered an asset if they serve to kill, once for all, the persistent contention that unemployment is a matter of individual choice, rather than the result of economic conditions over which the individual worker has no control.

When youth is gone, every man will look back upon that period of life with infinite sorrow and regret. It is the bitter sorrow and regret of a man who knows that once he had a great talent and wasted it, of a man who knows that once he had a great treasure and got nothing from it, of a man who knows that he had strength enough for everything and never used it.—Thomas Wolfe.

Young people always have erected their own artificial barriers between their generation and their elders: you can look over the barrier, but you win no respect by climbing over it. There are few more pathetic sights than that of a [illegible] ng to be "with it."—Walter Wright, a Staffordshire headmaster.

Ottawa Offbeat
Fellow-Liberals Squirm When Ralph Cowan Speaks

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Roughriding Ralph Cowan, Liberal MP for the Toronto constituency of York-Humber, must surely be the most outspokenly independent-minded Member of this or any Parliament since that old political firebell, Jean Francois Pouliot of Temiscouata cooled off and retired to the Senate.

Each time he rises to speak in the Comons, the Liberals, from Prime Minister Pearson down the line to the most obscure Government backbencher, sit and squirm, cringing, and trying quietly and hopelessly to "sashhh" the Roughrider.

And each time, the gleeful Conservatives beat their desktops and joyously cheer him on, hoping to fan the flames of his burning indignation.

Equally oblivious to both, he came to Parliament Hill in the 1962 election, firmly believing that the secrets of all their MPs to Ottawa to speak their minds.

And Ralph Cowan has been speaking his in what are the loudest, clearest and freest-swinging tones to rock and often shock the Commons.

Loudest and clearest, at times, even to his fellow Liberals, Ralph Cowan, free and independent individual MP, and not, like so many others in all parties, Government and Opposition alike, as a cog in the Party machine.

"THE YOUNG PUNKS"

On that basis alone, this dogged determination to speak his rather blunt mind, he's a rare bird indeed.

Roughrider Ralph believes two things, politically.

He hates the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as much as he loves the Canadian Red Ensign and the Union Jack.

Over the years the Prime Minister and party panjandrums have tried to stifle Ralph but you might find, even by fortunate accident, how to use the soft pedal.

But it's been two years of fortissimo, with a crashing crescendo just the other day.

Up in the Commons he stormed with a furious hour-long demand that the CBC be sold lock, stock and microphones to tax-paying commercial interests.

Either the Government had to "get rid of CBC and its bloody outfit," he has warned, "or we taxpayers will end up the most broadcast-to people in the world, of bankrupts in the world."

The CBC currently is arguing that the deficit this year will be picking up a tab for "only" $88,000,000.

But because Ralph figures it—and the Government's own cool-eyed money-men in the Finance Department—in his calculations — that including other and various charges such as "losses" in taxes never paid back, the tab runs to precisely $102,500,000 for the current year.

The CBC is startled by what he calls "these young punks," who, he feels, have transformed his right to ask "what in hell they think they're doing in sending a man at enormous cost to Patagonia to study the love life of South American mice."

VOLCANO

Those are some of the things Ralph Cowan has said publicly, both in and out of Parliament.

Privately, many of his colleagues are so sulphuric as to be impossible for reproduction in the printed page — the paper would go up in smoke.

About the only Christian thing he so far has found to say about the CBC is that it's "a rotten influence on the body politic of Canada."

But that $102,250,000 it's costing the taxpayers this year to discover, among other things, the love habit of Patagonian rodents bothers a great many more MPs than just Roughrider Ralph.

The difference is that most o. them do a slow burn, politically, and seldom flame up so spectacularly.

They seem to prefer to simmer away more or less privately rather than boil over publicly.

"The Prime Minister has let Quebec go to his head," says Ralph Cowan, "he's gone crazy over French-Canada."

Bilingualism and biculturalism?

"What's bicultural about it?" he wants to know. "If it isn't French, the Prime Minister doesn't want any part of it. Hell, the Quebec MPs go home nights to dream up things they want. Then they ask for it next morning. And Pearson gives it to them that same afternoon."

So you suspect, perhaps, that Roughrider Ralph Cowan is a little extreme? A bit on the odd side, maybe? Even, could be, with a slight touch of the political nut about him?

Not so.

You can't brush off the success story like Ralph Cowan that easily. For he was the hyper - dipper hustler, they concede, down at 80 King Street West, who, as circulation director, made the Toronto Daily Star into big boy of the Metro press. And that takes brains, and guts and work.

Froth Part Of Guinness

Brantford Expositor

The word "froth" generally regarded as a term of contempt to denote something of little value, has won a plaft for itself in legal terminology as a result of a High Court decision by British Lord Chief Justice, Lord Parker ruled recently that the froth on the top of a glass of Guinness is an integral part of the measure served in British pubs.

A weights and measures inspector had brought what appeared to be charges on froth pretences against a Bristol publican for serving two pints of Guinness with too much froth. He alleged that this practice was short-measuring the customer who should have received draughts that were an liquid, not liquid topped off with froth.

Lord Parker's decision, however, that the point about Guinness pint is that it is a composite drink containing liquid and gas which was what the customer asked for and got. The decision has been welcomed by British licensed trade and by the Guinness firm whose pride has been the creamy top to its product.

The stout fellows among British drinkers have always known that it's what's up top that counts. They have a hien regard for a pint with a good head to it. They are less interested in the legal semantics of what constitutes a pint than in the substance itself. They can be relied on to let the publican know if he spot too much froth in the glass and not enough liquid.

The froth was the conversation in the pub, what about the filter on a cigarette?

Famous Trains

Kingston Whig-Standard

When we see old films of the Charlie Chaplin or Harold Lloyd type of comedy, we are reminded that railways should have played such an important part in our lives. The famous trains in those days provided superb service. They were well-patronized. There was a special charm in going to meet someone at stations which were not melancholy and deserted as they so often are today, but crowded with people coming and going.

Population Statistics

By Philip M. Hauser in the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists

With the present population of three billion, the current rate of world population growth would give a population of 50 billion in 142 years. This is also the highest estimate of the population capacity of the globe ever calculated by a responsible scholar.

This estimate, by geochemist Harrison Brown, is based on two extreme assumptions.

First, it assumes that solar or nuclear energy will be developed to a point where the cost of power is so low that it approximates zero. Under this condition, it would be possible to obtain the "things" we need from rock, sea, and air to support a population of this size economically.

Second, it assumes that mankind would be content to forego both meat and animal products, and be content to subsist on food-products from algae farms on a year round basis.

In 237 years, continuation of the two per cent rate of world population growth from the present population of about three billion would provide enough people, in lock step, to reach from the earth to the sun.

In 650 years, it would give one person for every square foot of land surface on the globe, including mountains, deserts and arctic wastes.

In 1,566 years it would generate a population density that would weigh as much as the earth itself.

Three periods of time may seem long when measured by the length of the individual lifetime but they are small measured in the time perspective of the evolutionary development of man.

Projections of this type, of course, are not to be interpreted as a prediction that they long into the future. Given a finite globe and excluding the possibilities of migration of population to outer space, any ...te of population growth would in time saturate the globe and exhaust space itself.

In the long run, man will necessarily be faced with the problem of restricting his rate of increase to maintain some balance between his numbers and the finite dimensions of this planet.

Where to Go?

Hamilton Spectator

Modern cities are becoming concrete jungles, whose streets, perfumed with carbon fumes, are more motorways. In the years ahead the desire to escape from them will grow. Where will man go to find peace when even the remoter places offer no refuge from his fellows urgently seeking the same intangible commodity?

Scalenus Anticus Syndrome Muscle Lies Deep in Neck

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain scalenus anticus syndrome? — G. T.

The anterior scalene muscle is one which lies deep in the neck. It runs from the neck vertebrae to the first rib. It is, in fact, the muscle we use when we want to bend the neck forward. . .

Since it is so deeply placed, it can under certain circumstances put pressure on the nerves emerging from the spinal cord, or, even more commonly, press on the deep arteries of the neck under the collarbone.

The consequences? Discomfort in the arm. This may be tingling, numbness or blanching of the arm — an interruption in control of the circulation. This is one of the various causes for the fairly common complaint of tingling and numbness of hands and fingers. (This isn't the first thing a doctor thinks of, when he hears the complaint, but it is one which sometimes turns out to be the answer.)

There are two things you can do to ease the discomfort. First, avoid sleeping with an arm up over the head, as this increases the tension. Second, avoid pulling your chin down toward the collarbone as much.

If the problem is severe enough to require surgical treatment, this is possible by freeing the muscle to some extent at the point at which it is attached to the rib. . . .

Dear Dr. Molner: Our daughter, 15, who is always worrying about her weight, has developed the disgusting habit of sticking something down her throat to make herself vomit every time she feels she has overeaten.

This has been going on for seven months now. We tell her that forced vomiting could lead to a hernia or cancer but she doesn't pay much attention to it. — Mrs. R. H.

Now I've heard everything. But the things teen-agers will think up never cease to amaze me.

It boils down to the fact that this girl has a terribly warped concept of weight control and she needs professional help. Start with your regular physician. Let him decide whether she is or isn't overweight. If she is, he can explain what she ought to control it. If she isn't that ought to help her quit this ridiculous practice. Many teen-age girls think they are overweight when they aren't. (While others think they aren't, and are.)

Dear Dr. Molner: Please settle an argument between my husband and me and also some of our friends. Is it possible for a virile only one day of the month, or can she become pregnant every day? — Mrs. F. F.

Pregnancy can occur undoubtedly during days when the ovum is not ripe for fertilization. It is not been possible to prove exactly how long this interval is but, like other things, it varies among women, and also according to unpredictable circumstances.

Both the male cell and the ovum have something of a survival time, but this probably varies, too. It is probable that intercourse can occur before the woman is fertile — and pregnancy can result because of sperm remaining active for a time and fertilizing an ovum which appears later. This survival time is perhaps 48 hours for each. Hence fertility can't be pinpointed on one day. The fertile period is about two weeks before the succeeding cycle.

"You Can Stop Sinus Trouble!" is the title of my booklet explaining what sinus trouble really is, and encouraging sinus sufferers to do something about it. For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed unstamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Strictly Personal
Politics per Se Leads One up Blind Alley

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

As my readers know, I almost never comment on politics per se, for I think it leads one intellectually up a blind alley. But what interested me while watching the Republican convention last month (and will be equally true for the Democratic convention) was the dramatization of the political scene.

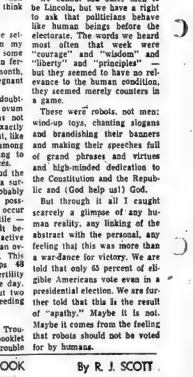
It was not merely the circus atmosphere, the loudness, the silliness, the organized "spontaneity" — so absurd that even the prudent General Eisenhower characterized it as "infantile" on the final day.

It was, rather, the fact that, with the exception of one speaker, I saw and heard no one who seemed a person, in the deeply existential sense of the word. This was equally true of those I agreed with, and that my reaction was not narrowly partisan.

Lincoln's name was invoked many times during that week, for good or bad reasons. But the whole point of Lincoln's greatness during that period was to become to his presence — even in retrospect — as a person more than as a politician or as a political or national leader. It is the essence of the man we respect, even when we disagree with particular acts or attitudes.

When Lincoln spoke, he spoke as a man — in the intensely personal way, and not as the abstract symbol of some "position." He had a profound sense of the tragic, and a tremendous sense of the comic, and knew that the two are often intertwined. He had no pomposity, no public mask for ceremonial occasions; he was open, vulnerable, and always himself.

We cannot ask other men to be Lincoln, but we have a right to ask that politicians behave like human beings before the electorate. The words we heard most often that week were "courage" and "wisdom" and "decency" and "statesmanship" — but they seemed to have no relevance to the human condition, they seemed merely counters in a game.



These were robots, not men; wind-up toys, chanting slogans and brandishing their banners and making their speeches full of grand phrases and virtues and high-minded dedication to the Constitution and the Republic and (God help us!) God.

But through it all I caught scarcely a glimpse of any human reality, any linking of the abstract with the personal, any feeling that this was more than a sardonic game for victory. We are told that only 65 percent of eligible Americans vote even in a presidential election. We are further told that this is the result of "apathy." Maybe it is not.

Maybe it comes from the feeling that robots should not be voted for by humans.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Stocks made a generous advance in active trading on the stock market today.

In the industrial list, gains were small as investors appeared to take a "wouldn't miss" attitude. Canadian Utilities was ahead ½ to 36 and Bell Telephone to 56⅝. Traders Finance A was ahead ½ to 13½ on news of increased first-half profits. Imperial Oil tacked on ¼ at 50½ and Massey-Ferguson ⅛ to 28¾.

Base metals continued to move ahead on a combination of excellent earnings reports by two key companies—Inco and Falconbridge—and the increasing price for copper. Inco was ahead ½ to 86 and Falconbridge 1¼ to 76¼. Hudson Bay climbed 1¼ to 67⅛. Labrador the same amount to 34½, Conso ¼ at 38 and Noranda ¼ to 48⅝. Campbell Chibougamau was up 10 cents to 54.70.

Speculative mining issues were indexs with little interest shown in the group. Ragian was ahead two cents to $1.86 while Windfall eased one cent to 56.

Golds and oils were quiet and mixed.

On index, industrials gained .15 to 159.74, golds .30 to 134.50, base metals .05 to 67.25 and the Exchange index .14 to 149.14. Western oils were down .34 to 96.53. Volume at 11 a.m. was 784,000 shares compared with 987,000 shares traded at the same time Monday.

Trading was moderate with 3,819,600 shares changing hands compared with 4,286,000 shares traded Friday. The light volume reflected a continued lack of interest in the speculative mining market where only a handful of issues generated any excitement.

In the industrial list, Chemcell was off ⅛ to 15¾, while Ontario Steel dipped ¼ to 19¼. Last week's big favorite, Supertest ordinary, was off ⅛ to 20⅝ as investors lost interest on the denial by the company that a takeover bid is being considered.

Weston A and Bell Telephone were down ¼ each, to 18¼ and 56¼, respectively.

Increasing copper prices on world markets gave base metals a boost, although by far the greatest amount of the best gains had been halved and in some issues erased. Noranda was up fractional ¼ to 66¾, Labrador ½ to 34, Noranda and Inco ¼ each to 48⅝ and 85¾, and Opemiska 25 cents to $9. Falconbridge, which moved to a 1964 peak of 76¾ early in the session closed with a ¼ loss, at 76.

In the speculative group, Ragian surged 20 cents to $1.82 and Canadian Dyno, which holds a large block of Ragian, was off 14 cents to 60. Uranium-area issues were all but ignored. Windfall eased five cents to 57 and Consolidated Coniagas Lode one cent to 64.

In golds, Dome and Giant Yellowknife were up ¼ each to 30¼ and 12.

On index, industrials were down .15 to 159.59, western oils .30 to 96.77 and the exchange index .14 to 149.14. Golds were up .33 to 134.41 and base metals .73 to 67.21.

Credit Accounts Under Study By Committee

TORONTO (CP) — A retail merchants' association told the Ontario legislature's select committee on consumer credit Monday that merchants make no profit from service charges on credit accounts.

But the New Democratic Party leader, Donald C. MacDonald, said he couldn't believe that merchants make nothing on credit accounts, although he was prepared to believe that they make only a marginal profit of perhaps two per cent.

J. T. Weir, counsel for the Retail Council of Canada, said surveys in the United States and Canada indicate that merchants are supplying credit facilities at slightly above cost, resulting in "some slight subsidy of the credit buyer by the cash customer."

Mr. Weir said large retailers would welcome ways to reduce the service charge so that the subsidy could be eliminated and diverted to the purchase of merchandise.

Mr. Weir said it would be impossible to state the interest a customer is paying on revolving credit accounts because of the additional purchases a customer can make on such accounts and the variety of payments that can be used.

He said any move to make merchants state the simple annual rate of interest would bring an end to revolving credit accounts.

Strikers Allow Boxcars to Be Removed

THOMPSON, Man. (CP)—Local 6166, United Steelworkers of America (CCL) has decided to let railway boxcars loaded with processed nickel ore move out of the strike-bound International Nickel Company of Canada operation here.

Ken McMaster, president of the local, said the decision was made Monday by the union executive in the face of persistent rumors that Inco planned to apply for an injunction against picketing across a CNR connection to Inco property.

"We have removed our pickets and the barricades of rocks and logs that blocked the track have been eliminated," he said in an interview. "If there is the possibility of an injunction against us, we're not going to take a chance."

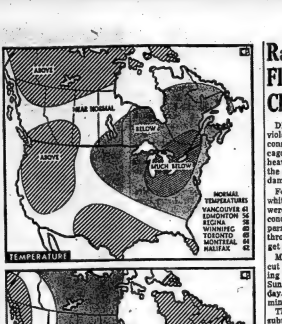
Mr. MacMaster said a CNR crew was completing repairs on a section of track torn up during the weekend.

Meanwhile, members of the Steelworkers' local went on strike against the $185,000,000 Inco operation in this wilderness community 400 miles north of Winnipeg on Aug. 10. The union followed six months of negotiations on a contract to replace one which expired March 1.

About 650 of the striking workers voted Monday not to reconsider the union's last offer.

The offer, agreed to by union negotiators at a last - minute meeting in Winnipeg on Sunday before the strike began, called for an 11½-per-cent wage increase over a three-year contract.

Meanwhile, local 6166 said it will send representatives to a meeting of delegates to talk to 14,000 steel workers employed there by Inco.



Cabinet Member May Be Barred From Sitting

WINNIPEG (CP) — Maitland Steinkopf, Manitoba's provincial secretary, was served with a writ Monday, three hours after the third session of the 27th Manitoba Legislature convened, asking him to show cause why he should sit as a member.

This was revealed during the afternoon session when Gordon Robiin as he spoke during second reading of a bill, the intent of which is to clarify Mr. Steinkopf's position.

The question of the cabinet minister's eligibility came to a light last spring just before the legislature prorogued. It involved a possible infraction of the Legislative Assembly Act in view of work Mr. Steinkopf did as an unpaid agent of the government in arranging the purchase of property.

House Approves Report Over Objections

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons voted over Creditiste objections Monday to approve a report declaring there was no bribery or breach of parliamentary privilege involved in MP Gerard Girouard's break with the Social Credit party.

The Commons defeated, 148 to 9, a motion by the Creditiste group to refer the case back to the Commons privileges and elections committee and have it submit conflicting testimony to the Ontario attorney - general's department.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette and his deputy, Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe), said that since conflicting testimony was given under oath by members of Parliament, someone must have committed perjury.

After defeating the Creditiste motion, the Commons approved the report without further debate. One Liberal backbencher, Lucien Cyr (Argenteuil - Deux - Montagnes), supported the Creditiste motion in the vote.

Larry Pennell (L—Grey-Bruce-Haldimand), acting chairman of the privileges and elections committee, urged the house to approve the report quickly and definitely.

He said "the healing power of time" should end the controversy which started last April 27 when Mr. Girouard, MP for Labelle, said after joining the Progressive Conservative party that he had been offered inducements by Keith Davey, national organizer, to join the Liberal party.

Mr. Girouard, who listened without comment to the debate, left the chamber just before the vote on the Creditiste proposal was taken and returned afterwards.

Racial Violence Flares Again in Chicago Suburb

DIXMOOR, Ill. (AP)—Racial violence flared for a second consecutive time in this Chicago suburb Monday night, but heavily armed police put down the disturbance with only minor damage and injuries.

Forty persons, 27 of them white, were arrested. Most were charged with disorderly conduct or inciting a riot. Two persons were injured as rock-throwing Negroes made a target of passing vehicles.

More than 50 persons were cut and bruised by rocks during a five - hour disturbance Sunday night and early Monday. Two persons suffered minor gunshot wounds.

The predominantly Negro suburb of 5,000 population is two miles south of Chicago.

Civil rights leaders and 40 clergymen who attempted to avert a second outbreak of violence Monday night were critical of police work, particularly the use of dog patrols to disperse the mob.

Canadians Take Up Positions In Kyrenia Pass

By RUSSELL PEDEN

KYRENIA, Cyprus (CP)—The United Nations peace force's Canadian contingent Monday announced Monday it has placed troops again on the key pass through the Kyrenia Range known as Gin following a request to do so by Greek-Cypriote and Turkish-Cypriote leaders.

The outpost was among 11 from which Canadian troops were withdrawn on Saturday last week in the Kyrenia area 15 miles north of Nicosia to provide the Canadian contingent with mobile reserves for emergencies.

Maj. Roger Boucher of Quebec City, operations officer of the 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, said a sergeant and five men of the regiment have reoccupied Gin, a rocky outcropping between two other mountain crests holding the heavily fortified Greek and Turkish - Cypriot positions.

Another side tried to occupy Gin after the original outpost of 14 Canadians departed last Friday and one was fired.

The area has been the scene of heavy, although generally light, fighting between the opposing camps. There have been no incidents reported since the Canadians left the mountain pass.

Boucher said none of the other 10 outposts from which troops were withdrawn on the mobile force has been reoccupied, despite protests from both Greek-Cypriote and Turkish-Cypriot leaders. Areas involved were being covered by mobile patrols at irregular daily.

Both sides had argued that withdrawal would leave villages exposed to attacks by opposing forces.

Mrs. Jean Wadds Welcomed Back To Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Mrs. Jean Wadds, formerly Mrs. Jean Casselman, was welcomed back to the Commons Monday by Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

Mrs. Wadds, MP for Grenville-Dundas, waited in the Conservative lobby until the House took official cognizance of her marriage Aug. 8 to Toronto stockbroker Robert Wilson Wadds.

Eric Winkler (PC — Grey-Bruce), Conservative whip, asked Speaker Alan Macnaughton to have necessary changes made in Commons records "in view of the fact the member for Grenville - Dundas has changed her name."

There was a burst of applause when Mrs. Wadds took her seat.

Mr. Pearson said all members joined in Mrs. Wadds' happiness, and added that his own exuberance was based on the thought that with her new domestic responsibilities Mrs. Wadds might not stand for re-election.

Mr. Diefenbaker said all Conservatives members were confident that she would continue to be the MP for Grenville-Dundas.

Interest High in Displays at Fair With New Listings in Many Classes

By RETA LAWRENCE

A tour through the Agricultural building at the Fair leaves no doubt that interest in homemaking with all its many facets is not waning. In every section the number and quality of exhibits far surpasses other years and those in charge were having great difficulty in finding the necessary space for display.

The entries under fine arts and handicrafts included many fine paintings. A number of these pictures are the work of new Canadians and they add much to the display. Mr. Manly Macdonald was the judge of the art.

At the north end of the building a cooking show is in progress every afternoon at 2 o'clock and again at 4 o'clock. This is the fourth year for the show which has as instructor Mrs. Eileen Hickman, a graduate of Macdonald College. Mrs. Hickman is employed by Ontario Hydro and comes to the fair by courtesy of her company. Prizes given at the cooking show are donations from district firms.

ROCK COLLECTIONS

A new listing of elementary schools has produced some fine rock collections. There is also a record number of entries of puppets, plasticine models, nature collections, sewing, handwriting and non-competitive art.

Mrs. W. J. Woods, judge of homecooking, has acted in this capacity for the past three years and finds that her work this year is much more difficult due to the fact that the number of entries has doubled and the overall quality is much better than previously.

A new category of "Junior Homecooking" has several entries by boys, and they are not outdone by girls in concocting salad plates and tasty fillers for lunch baskets.

Mrs. W. Doxtator of Point Anne, though not competing for prizes, has on display a beautiful three-tiered wedding cake as well as the fancy sandwiches and cookies so necessary for the trousseau tea.

In the needlework department new listings for millinery, pyjama bags, barbecue sets and bouncer cushions, plus the former listings of quilts, spreads, tablecloths, bulky knits and clothing have taxed the available space to its limit.

There is a fine showing of work by 4-H Club members.

Every variety of garden flower, houseplant and floral decoration can be seen and these, together with the panorama of artistically displayed houseplants by the Women's Institutes of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, beautify the building.

The capable people in charge of the exhibits in this building all expressed their satisfaction and appreciation for the apparent renewed interest in the fair.

One medium-size carrot provides all of the vitamin A recommended for the daily diet of a normally active man, woman or child, say Nutritionists at Macdonald Institute, Guelph.

More vitamin A is provided by a cup of cooked carrots than a cup of raw carrots because, due to water loss, it takes more cooked carrots to fill a cup and vitamin A isn't lost in cooking. Vitamin A is stored in the body, so if we take in more than is needed for one day, the body will use it up later.

Belleville Girl Tells Of Work in Mississippi

Following is part of a letter received from Miss Diane Burrows, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Burrows, Belleville, by a friend of her family. The letter is concise and self-explanatory.

Miss Burrows is one of nearly 900 volunteers who are working on behalf of the Mississippi summer project in the southern States. The project is sponsored by the Council of Federated Organizations which includes SNCC (Student Non-violent Co-ordinating Committee), NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People), Dr. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, CORE (Congress of Racial Equality,) and the Council of Churches.

Few young people have either the opportunity or the courage to carry out their high idealism. These volunteers have grasped the opportunity presented to them and have demonstrated that they have the courage to carry it through. They feel that the civil rights issue in the southern United States is not only a local matter but also part of a world-wide moral problem of immediate concern. Because of the long-established white apathy to the colored problem, and because of the incredible reprisals imposed on any liberal-minded white citizens in the South, any initiative for change must come from outsiders. The volunteer workers hope to lay the groundwork for this change.

A start has been made through a voter registration program for Negroes and through the establishment of 25 Freedom schools. Fifty hundred of the summer volunteers are teaching in these schools which augment the curriculum of the regular schools or which provide the main instruction which colored children in some areas receive.

The most important part of the COFO program is the Freedom Democratic Party which it sponsors. From this new branch of the Democratic party delegates will be sent to the Democratic Convention in Atlantic City where they will challenge the regular delegation from Mississippi which does not represent all Democrats in that State nor support the policies of the National Democratic party.

Our white community project is perhaps the least known of the COFO projects but I feel it is one of the most important. There is little publicity about it for two reasons, the feeling that there are only 60 out of five hundred volunteers involved and the other reason is that it is really not of the mainstream of the movement. It is the only project concerned directly with the white community and because it is essentially a pilot project, it has no structural framework within or within to operate. Our approach is experimental and our efforts difficult to evaluate. We are working at the grass roots level in a new direction.

WHITE SOUTHERN VOLUNTEERS

Most of the volunteers in this project are white southerners who have made a great deal of personal sacrifice to fight for what they consider their freedom as well as that of the Negro. They feel that the ayes have been the blind while the people as much as colored because they are unable to associate with those they please and cannot express their ideas freely. Frequently their parents are segregationists — those whose parents are more sympathetic than we have to worry about the harassment that their families are subjected to because of their activities.

Our program is an effort to establish a dialogue with white Mississippians and to encourage to act as a voice of moderation to ensure that the present social revolution proceeds peacefully.

We are trying to interpret to moderates what COFO is doing and why, to make them aware that the problem existed before we came and will not disappear when we leave. We are trying to counteract our image within the state of being outside agitators and meddlers, backward children, college students out for a lark, by pointing out to good concerned people that we are doing that which they cannot do because of social repercussions. Our work in the Freedom Schools and Community Centers and the voter registration has a very real immediate value to the Negro community but in the long run, the lasting effect of this activity can only make things better for the total community.

CONTINUE FREEDOM SCHOOLS

This is not something that will just last for the summer. For instance, money is to be Freedom Schools has been so great that plans are underway to continue them in the fall to supplement the regular school experience. These schools will provide courses that are not taught in Mississippi elsewhere, for instance special language courses, Negro history and political science. Most of the students are high school age although they also hold adult education classes. As you can imagine, this is very much of a learning experience for the teachers as well as for the students.

Most of our contacts with white moderates are through churches and civic groups - we are trying to interest them in the Human Relations Council which is just beginning to come to life in Mississippi. We are working on the basis that the myth of the moderate is that when conflagration comes he will somehow be able to stand in the middle and reconcile, but he can only do this if he is in communication with both sides and if he has worked out a strategy. Most Mississippians do not realize that if they sit tight and do nothing, the problem will eventually go away or solve itself with time, that they are only perpetuating a system that is de-humanizing and in the meantime they can only be receiving the benefits of that system.

ASKING SACRIFICES

We are listening sympathetically to the dilemmas in which they are themselves and realize the sacrifices we are asking them to take and how hard it is to step out from a tradition which is the root of their culture. But we are urging them all the same to take action as individuals to stand up for what they believe is right or at least against what they believe is wrong. We are trying to get the sympathy which we have expressed sympathy with us to act collectively; we are asking them for people in their congregations who will invite us into their homes and listen to what we have to say.

EXTREMELY AFRAID

The most valuable thing we can do is to convince people that we are not all long haired weirdos who don't bathe, as most of the state believes. The way the press in this state represents us is incredible! People are extremely afraid to have any contact with us at all and the fear is well justified — those that have offered us a warm southern hospitality have suffered for it. The mayor of Biloxi told me he wished that they could extend to us the usual courtesies to visitors but because of the nature of our work, because all we were doing was making trouble, he was forced to do everything in his power to make us leave.

Another phase of our particular project is working with poor whites, trying to show them that this system is keeping them down too - that they can improve their condition by uniting politically with the Negro and not by fighting with him.

A group of us are living in a fishing community in an attempt to, start a fishermen's union - some of them are realizing that if the union is to work, that is, if they aren't going to be threatened by fishermen outside the union, that the Negroes must be included. This same group of community workers are planning to begin a freedom school for whites in the poor areas, teaching such things as literacy, typing, training in addition to sewing, remedial reading, etc.

The accomplishments at this point seem negligible and sometimes we all wonder why we are here but all of us have a great deal of faith in spite of these frustrations . this faith is regenerated by the freedom songs "ain't gonna let nobody turn me round" and "we shall overcome some someday".

God bless you.

Stratford Concert Season Ends With Bach Program

By ROBERT TANNER

To Mr. E. Power Biggs, it is obvious that the organ is not necessarily the vast and complex instrument most people believe it to be. Give him a small positif organ, scarcely bigger than a large upright piano, with one manual, no pedals, and five stops, and he will happily perform, in concert with a singer and other instrumentalists, a program of great charm and variety. However, last Friday's concert in the Stratford Festival Theatre would not have been something of a disappointment to many if the organ had been just a little larger and more powerful. The program began with Handel's Organ Concerto No. 13 in F, a delightful work which has been subtitled The Cuckoo and the Nightingale from the amusing imitations of the second movement. Mr. Biggs was accompanied by three string players from the National Festival Orchestra in a performance which would have been little less than perfect in a more intimate environment.

Elizabeth Benson Guy, soprano, and Robert Oades, trumpet, then joined the ensemble for a Cantata "On the banks of the Tiber" by Scarlatti, which was followed by three French Cantatas by Mozart, in his brightest vein. In the second of these, Mr. Biggs displayed his innate modesty by almost completely subordinating the organ to the strings, while in the third, its tone was allowed to contrast more strongly with that of the other instruments.

A gay concerto by Haydn, written when he was only 24, included a slow movement of quiet beauty, and was followed by Psalm 130 by Bernhard, sung by Miss Benson Guy with a warmth of tone. The program concluded with a spirited performance of Telemann's Suite from "Heldenmusik" for organ, two trumpets and strings, which was notable for the particularly smooth interplay between the trumpets.

The small organ was much more appropriately employed on Sunday afternoon for the continuo in a Bach program which brought this year's concert series to a close. The Festival Singers, which first came into being at Stratford several years ago, opened with a joyful Motet 'Praise the Lord, all ye nations', with their director Elmer Iseler conducting. In the next work Cantata No. 21 "My Spirit was in Heaviness', the chorus was joined by Lois Marshall, Patricia Rideout, Jean Bonhomme and Maurice Brown in a performance of great beauty and tenderness. Miss Marshall in particular was in splendid voice and in the great final chorus with its triumphant trumpets, could not refrain from joining in with the Singers, to the joint moment later by Miss Rideout, in a surprise tribute to the composer's greatness.

This genius shone even more brightly in the concluding Magnificat in D which left the theatre ringing and won a standing ovation from the capacity audience, led by Canada's Grand Old Man of music, Sir Ernest MacMillan. The soloists, who were joined by Mary Morrison as second soprano, displayed a great musicianship, although there were a few moments when the work seemed to lose cohesion. Once again, the final Gloria provided a magnificent climax not only to the afternoon, but also to a very successful season of concerts.

Although the concerts are over for this year, the two operas continue until August 22nd, and the four plays until October 3rd.

Father Has Forgotten Sensitivity of Teenagers

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My father is a wonderful person and I love him very much but he makes such insulting remarks to my friends I'm afraid no girl or boy will want to set foot in our house if he keeps it up.

Dad is a carpenter. Mom says all carpenters are blunt by nature and that Dad has a singing kind of humor, besides. She says I shouldn't pay any attention to him.

ANN LANDERS

Yesterday Dad told my girl friend she was geeting mighty fleshy — that her dress was getting mighty fleshy — that her dress sausage. Tonight he told my date (first time out with him and I'll bet it's my last) that if he didn't wear his pant legs a little looser he might get varicose veins.

If you can help me I will be very much indebted to you. — NANCY.

• • •

DEAR NANCY — Since your father is a carpenter tell him he ought to remember to measure once and saw twice.

Critical remarks of a personal nature can be hurtful, even though they are intended as a joke. Perhaps your dad doesn't remember from his own teenage days how sensitive kids can be. Ask him to please take it easy on your friends.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband and I are having an argument about what to name our second child. Our first baby was a girl. We named her after my husband's mother because he thinks the world of her.

Our second child is a boy. I want to name him after my father but my husband has different ideas. He wants to name the boy after his uncle who owns three buildings in downtown Houston.

We are also having trouble over a middle name. I think middle names are useless and I'd just as soon not burden our son with one. How can you come to the rescue and settle this squabble? — LANDERS FAN.

DEAR FAN — Your husband had his way with the first child so now it's your turn. Name the baby after your father.

Middle names are not exactly useless — especially if the name is connected with three buildings in downtown Houston. Besides, what are you going to yell out the door when you mean business and want the boy to come home?

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a girl 20, and almost out my mind because of the unhappiness I have caused my parents As well as myself.

I started to go with an older man I met on the bus. Nick was very romantic and talked about marriage. My folks did not like him and said so from the beginning. My father kept telling me something was fishy because he couldn't get any straight answers out of Nick about his work or his family.

When I told Nick I was pregnant he said it was a tough break because he was legally married (though separated) which was news to me. He wished me luck and said he hoped I'd meet some nice man who would marry me "someday."

I became hysterical and ill and I lost the baby.

I think about Nick all the time. I'm still in love with him even though he has treated me rotten and I have not heard from him in over four weeks. I need your help. — STARDUST.

• • •

DEAR S. D. — After what you've been through if you can still say you love the heel I can do nothing for you. People who enjoy punishment are sick and need to see a head doctor.

Girls Pay More for Insurance

TORONTO (CP) — Statistics have caught up with unmarried women drivers under 25. As a result, their car insurance rates have gone up since the first of the year.

A Toronto auto-insurance executive says that in recent years companies have had more statistics on which to base their rates for young women drivers. They indicate that if girls drove as many miles as boys in a given period, they would have as many accidents.

Charles Holman, who is chairman of the public action committee of the Canadian Highway Safety Council as well as public relations director for his firm, says people under 25 in Canada do 18 per cent of the driving and have 30 per cent of the accidents.

He says rates for people under 25 who are married go down, perhaps because marriage has a stabilizing influence that affects their driving.

In the Toronto area the basic liability charge for $35,000 coverage for a single woman under 25 who has had three accident-free, ticket-free years of driving would be $75. For a man with the same qualifications it would be $124.

Anyone over 25, married or single, with the same record would pay $46.

Rates vary in other parts of the country, but the basis is the same.

One of the reasons for the differences in rates for young men and women is that women drive less between 7:30 a.m. and 3 a.m.—the critical accident time.

Mr. Holman says Canadians have more accidents than Americans and speculates it may be because of the number of driving courses given in U.S. schools. "In Canada there are only 234 schools with such courses. Canadian youngsters seem to have to drive by osmosis. They learn by watching their fathers' mistakes."

Patience Needed For Croissants

by Mary Moore

The fundamental ingredients for today's offering are one-half-lb. butter and a whopping measure of patience. But the results are..30 Croissants, those famous crescent-shaped French rolls that come on your breakfast tray when you are in a Paris hotel.

I need not coax the patient cooks to make these layered wonders, nor those who have munched them in their Continental travels. But I shall urge the impatient girls to simmer down and give these a fair trial.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Homemade cream of spinach soup, skewers baked on sauerkraut, French mustard, crusty French bread, smooth summery applesauce, oatmeal cookies, tea.

CROISSANTS (crescent-shaped rolls)

A yeast dough layered like puff pastry,

1 cup scalded milk,

1 tablespoons sugar,

1 teaspoons salt,

1 package granular yeast,

¼ cup lukewarm water,

1 teaspoon sugar,

3½ cups sifted all-purpose flour,

1 egg yolk,

Scald milk until it bubbles around edges. Remove from heat and stir in the 1½ tables spoons sugar and salt well and let cool to lukewarm. Into a large bowl measure the lukewarm water, sprinkle yeast granules and 1 teaspoon sugar over and let stand 10 minutes. Stir and measure flour. Add lukewarm milk mixture to yeast liquid and beat in about 2 cups of the measured flour. When well mixed add remaining flour. Turn out on well-floured board and knead 100 times until dough is smooth and elastic. Roll out to measured rectangle 20 x 12". Spread evenly with butter to within ¾" of edges. Fold over ⅓ crosswise, overlapping center third. Fold remaining ⅓ over them to make 3 layers. (This neat layering is important.) If necessary sprinkle more flour on board. Roll carefully to 20 x 12" rectangle, again pushing back in any butter which squeezes out. Fold again into 3 layers, making 6 in all. Wrap dough without bending it, in clean towel, slip it into a big plastic bag and chill overnight.

By morning dough will have risen a little. It is a lovely texture and rolls out more readily. Roll out on floured board to 20 x 12" rectangle, fold into 3 layers. Roll out once more and fold into 3 layers (thus making 12 layers). Wrap carefully and chill 1 hour.

Roll out to 20 x 12" rectangle. (Dough has little air bubbles under surface now.) Use a ruler to roll out at this stage because it is cold.) Using ruler lightly mark lines into fifteen 4" squares then cut out squares with sharp knife. Cut each square diagonally into 2 triangles. Roll each triangle up starting at long side. Place on ungreased cookie sheet point under, curving ends to form crescent. Place at least 2" apart. (I filled 3 cookie sheets.) Stir together the egg yolk and milk and neatly brush all exposed surfaces of crescents. This glaze produces the golden flaky crust characteristic of croissants. Let rise at room temperature until well puffed and doubled (see my note below). Bake at 425 deg. Fahr for 12 to 15 minutes but if you are baking 2 pans at once, as I did, after 5 minutes switch pans to avoid scorching bottoms of lower croissants. Bake until gold. Remove to racks to cool. Bake third pan at centre of oven but watch carefully as 425 deg. Fahr. is very high heat, but necessary to achieve maximum puffiness. One of the best products I have ever made and gives you. Notes: 1) I delayed the rising of my shaped croissants by storing them in refrigerator for 6 hours, then I brought them out and let them rise at kitchen temperature for 3 hours until 5.30 p.m. when I baked them so they would be hot when served for dinner. 2) Wrapped in triple plastic bags these freeze well.

QUESTION: I've been invited to a dance at a private home. It's in honor of the hostess' niece. Her daughter, who is a friend from school, also will be there. I've been asked to escort another girl who lives nearby. Am I obliged to dance only with her all evening, or is it permissible for me to dance with other girls I know? Your help will be appreciated. — J. B., Stamford, Conn.

ANSWER: Your first obligation is to the girl you'll be escorting. Naturally you shouldn't leave her alone while you join the stag line. When other fellows cut in on you, in turn, may cut in on another couple, but you should return your partner to her escort and retain your own date at the end of the dance. You also should have refreshments with her. During the course of the evening, in addition to dancing with girls you know from school or the neighborhood, you should try to get in a whirl with hostess, her daughter, the niece who is guest of honor and any other female relatives, who may be present.

QUESTION: When a man and woman are on a staircase, is the woman supposed to be in front of him or behind? — T. E., Kew Gardens, N. Y.

ANSWER: A woman precedes her escort going up the stairs, but coming down, the man usually goes first so he can prevent her falling if she should slip or be jostled.

Conservative Women Plan Coming Season's Activity

Meetings for the fall and early winter were discussed. A bulletin will be sent to all members outlining the various meetings and activities. A reminder will be made in the bulletin of the the third Tuesday in each month, due to the Kiwanis club meeting the Mondays.

The first meeting in the fall will be on Tuesday, September 15th and will be in the form of a general meeting followed by an auction sale of useful miscellaneous articles.

A bus trip to the northern part of the riding will be organized for October 1st when the leaves should be in full color.

The executive discussed plans to hold a work meeting in November to get ready for the Christmas project of providing dolls, toys and comforts for the needy children in Belleville. A concentrated effort will be asked to provide as many dolls as possible as this is the item usually in short supply. The ladies will dress the dolls for any who can't sew, so all out effort will be made to make this drive a success.

Greek-Cypriot Weekend Soldiers Well Entrenched Near Edge of Karmi Forest

A valley near the edge of the Karmi forest separates Greek and Turkish Cypriot troops in Mountainous northern Cyprus. In this story, Canadian Press reporter Peter Buckley describes the situation from the Greek side.

By PETER BUCKLEY

KARMI FOREST, Cyprus (CP) — The "front line" for many Greek - Cypriots in the strange war in Cyprus is a series of heavily fortified outposts connected by a man-made wall of rock near the edge of Karmi forest.

Each outpost sits on the side or top of a mountain crest in the Kyrenian range of northern Cyprus, protected by bags filled with sand or stone. Each has an opening for rifles or submachine-gun fire.

A thin piece of sturdy cord runs from post to position, hanging loosely but conspicuously inside each. When one soldier sees suspicious movements among the pine trees below he can pull the cord and ring a bell to warn the neighboring outposts.

The rock wall allows the soldiers to run, crouching, between dugouts without being exposed to fire.

From almost every position, looking across a shallow valley, a Greek-Cypriot can see the outposts of his complex of fortifications. Straddling one side of a high peak opposite—like wax dripping from a candle—is St. Hilarion Castle, a long-ruined fortress built before the 12th century which has been altered a force of Turkish-Cypriots since fighting broke out in Cyprus last December.

HOLD MAIN ROAD

More armed Turks are concealed among the trees and in dug-out positions immediately below the castle, as well as on adjacent mountain crests. The Turks want to assure continued possession of the main road between Nicosia and the Kyrenian Mountains, the only substantial territory in Turkish-Cypriot hands.

It was held by Turkish-Cypriots until the night of April 25-26, 1963, when a mortar Greek attack in force drove back the Turks. The Greeks stopped at the edge of the forest their present position, then tried half-heartedly to take St. Hilarion the next day. They were rebuffed and international pressures helped create the present stalemate.

Although the campaign included hundreds of armed men, fewer than half a dozen were killed on both sides.

It is one of the oddities of this thoroughly peculiar war, in fact, that there have been few casualties in battles or in exchanges of fire The daily UN reports about incidents on the island, for which the Karmi Forest, - St. Hilarion area figures largely, are all of a piece: "Heavy firing was reported during the night. No casualties were reported."

WEEKEND SOLDIERS

Most of the Greek fighters are "weekend" soldiers leaving their offices in Nicosia and Kyrenia or their farms all over Cyprus to spend from two days to several weeks in the battle against the "Turkish rebels."

One of these men, a 28-year-old government clerk with the resounding name of Neophytos Neophytou, was in temporary charge of a section of the front line during a lull in the firing recently. He was in the mountains for three days, one of a series of such tours of duty.

With the help of an interpreter, he explained why.

"The end will be what we want. We will be what we want — enosis (union with Greece)—because there is no other solution."

Neophytou is a native of the farming village of Asyos Epiktitos, 10 miles east of Karmi Forest on the edge of the Mediterranean. When not fighting he works as a clerk in the income tax office at Nicosia.

A stocky, built bachelor of medium height, dark complexion, black hair flecked with grey and a trim moustache, he wore a uniform of faded, badly matched khaki pants tucked into worn, calf - length leather boots.

Most of the time his eyes were friendly, but given an opportunity to pose with Bis Bren gun for photographs, he narrowed his eyes and set his jaw, a almost wiping out the laugh lines around his mouth.

GUARD DUTY

His determined stance against the skyline was intended to remind one of the heroes of classical Greece—of Thermopylae and the other pages of Greek history which the Greek - Cypriots absorb into their blood from birth.

Neophytou's day is comparatively full. He's up at 6:30 to breakfast on bread and butter, marmalade, cheese, tomatoes and cucumbers. The morning is spent improving fortifications, physical training, cleaning weapons and other odd jobs.

A vehicle arrives at 1 p.m. with a hot lunch of macaroni or a meat dish and vegetables. The afternoon goes into guard duty and a two-hour rest. Supper at 6:30 is similar to lunch.

Shortly after sunset, Neophytou rolls up in a blanket in the dugout to sleep. Some time during the night he is awakened for two hours of guard duty.

Karmi Forest, once a favorite picnic spot for tourists and Cypriots, is blessed with fresh, cool air. The Greeks claim to have 700 men in the forest and say they must turn away volunteers because so many men want to escape the dust and heat of the plain.

Most of those who come bring their own uniforms, and the result is a melange of badly fitting khakis, olives and tans of varying ages and degrees of wear. Most seem to leave their razors behind so they can grow beards in the best guerrilla tradition.

Their arms are generally provided at the camp. The few who have regular army status receive their usual pay. The majority apparently have no regular fighting salary, although sympathetic employers are known to continue playing those who go to the hills. Well-heeled friends of the government also contribute.

The atmosphere at the camp is barely military. No one wears a badge of rank, there is no saluting, and officers are known only by appearance.

One is Alexiou, the commander of Karmi Forest. He is just Alexiou—no personal questions, no photographs.

A handsome man of about 45, clean-shaven and dressed in a tailor - made, freshly pressed uniform, he has the bearing of a professional soldier.

He is also given to emphatic gestures of the hands and head, irrepressible laughter and lowering rages, undoubtedly a figure to be reckoned with.

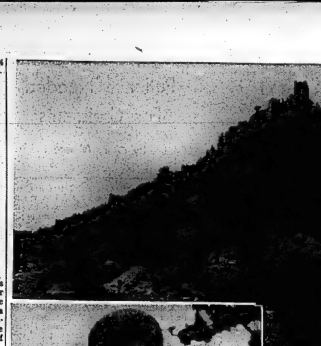
Conducting a visitor by Land Rover and on foot in a daylong tour of his command—a series of encampments in the centre, a long string of guard posts and fortifications on the perimeter—Alexiou found a stage for his whole personality.

FREQUENTLY UPSET

Behind the bluster was proud of the sturdiness and location of his armed positions, of the training of his irregular troops and other projects he had under way.

And since the war in Cyprus is often a political battle, he is a politician, larding his commentary with contemptuous references to Turks and Turkish policies.

But as a disciplinarian, Alexiou was frequently upset. He publicly ignored the sight of men sleeping under trees in the front line ("there are too many people and not enough for them to do"). And he was merely irritated when he found men playing cards or some game like backgammon, when they should have been on watch.



But he boiled over with anger when he found a group of men, who had been ordered to clear the underbrush from a front-line area, cutting down all the trees and threatening to expose their flanks.

Alexiou openly admires the disciplined Canadian troops stationed in his area. Lieut. Yvon Blanchard of Montreal and a section of the Royal 22nd Regiment live in two tents on the edge of Karmi Forest, serving as trouble-shooters and liaison men between the Greek-Cypriot riots and the UN.

"They are very good men, these Canadians," Alexiou said, looking at Blanchard during one of the officer's frequent visits to the Greek headquarters tent. Then, laughing impishly, he added: "It will be nice to come to Canada in the United Nations force when the French and English start to fight."

The patient Blanchard, who had heard that line often before, merely smiled and went back to learning simple Greek phrases from one of the Cypriot officers.

GETTING AWAY FROM IT ALL — Neophytos Neophytou, a 29-year-old government clerk from Nicosia, is one of many Greek "weekend soldiers" who leave their offices or farms and head for the hills to face the Turkish Cypriots. Service may last from two days to several weeks before they return to their regular jobs. Neophytou is serving in the Karmi Forest on the edge of the Mediterranean, 10 miles west of the farming village where he was born. (CP Photo)

GREEK AGAINST TURK IN FIGHT FOR 12TH CENTURY CASTLE — The ruins of St. Hilarion castle, a fortress built before the 12th century, tumble down one side of a hill near the Karmi Forest. The castle shelters a force of Turkish - Cypriots who want to assure continued possession of a road north from Nicosia. The Greeks attempted a raid on St. Hilarion in April but were turned back. They now have dug in with a series of heavily fortified outposts on the side or top of mountains. (CP Photo)

No Guesswork In Tax Bills Says Assessor

PICTON (Staff)— There will be less guesswork in Prince Edward County tax bills this year. County Assessment Commissioner A. W. Jennings says a new assessment manual for the province will be in use starting this week. It is designed to do away with the last trace of the traditional "eyeball" method of appraising, he said. Almost all of the county has been assessed. Now only some of the cottages have to be appraised. The assessment rolls must be returned by September 30, Mr. Jennings said. There are still problems since the county took over the assessment job from local appraisers.

Poring over the records he has uncovered many a mistake — some of them transposed, wrong for more than 50 years. By the end of the year he hopes to have all the property ownership deeds and lot numbers straightened out so that the assessment job will be an easier one in 1965.

Outboard Club Sponsors Meet At North Bay

PICTON (Staff) — The Picton Outboard Club is again sponsoring Provincial Championship outboard races at North Bay, near Conecon, again this year. This event last season was a tremendous success and it is expected to be even bigger and better this time. The races are sanctioned by both the American Power Boat Association and the Canadian Boating Federation. This means that U.S. drivers can gain points toward their own high point championship by competing in these races. The local club hopes to attract many U.S. entries this way.

There will be ten classes in all, the first three across the line in each class will be awarded trophies. Admission is 75 cents for adults, children will be admitted free. This is a popular annual event at North Bay and it is hoped many will turn out for the exciting afternoon of speedboat racing. Events begin at 1 p.m.

ONLY MINOR MISHAPS

Police circles are quiet in the county for the past 24 hours, no accidents having been reported, Ontario Provincial Police investigated three minor accidents early Monday evening, there were injuries in two of these accidents however none were of a serious nature.

—A three-cent increase in gasoline and diesel fuel tax to 17 cents and 20 cents a gallon respectively.

Changes in mining royalties, aimed at collecting more from large producers, are expected to provide an additional $400,000 annually.

Mr. Roblin, who doubles as provincial treasurer, said the new taxes will take effect as soon as possible. His massive revenue bill was given second reading as the house voted to suspend rules and sit morning, afternoon and evening.

The report of a royal commission on local government organization and finance—headed by Roland Michener, former Commons Speaker and now high commissioner to India—earlier this year recommended the province take over a broad range of municipal responsibilities in the fields of health, welfare, education and roads and pay the cost with a retail sales tax.

The 56-year-old Banks was deported as Canadian SIU boss of 7,500 sailors in March but remains a $20,000-a-year SIU of North America vice-president. He is out on $25,000 bail awaiting appeal this fall of his conviction last year sentenced for conspiracy to assault a rival union officer, Henry Walsh, with intent to wound, maim and disfigure.

Would his absence affect his $25,000 bail?

The question is under study and we will take the best course in the interests of justice."

Earlier, he told Creditiste Leader Real Caouette he has no information of the present whereabouts of Banks.

DIDN'T APPEAR

After Banks did not appear in court Monday—a formality to get a date for the hearing of inclement charges against him and 13 other SIU members—his lawyer said he didn't know his client's whereabouts either.

His bail of $1,000 was cancelled. It had been allowed on the charge of conspiracy to violate the Canada Shipping Act by inciting sailors to walk off their ships to attend a demonstration in Ottawa last October.

In the interior, a superior court bailiff again vainly waited in an attempt to serve the contempt charge warrant. Banks had unsuccessfully appealed the contempt case to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The action was initiated by Upper Lakes Shipping Company Limited in the Toronto Court of Admiralty in 1962 in Trois-Rivieres, Que., despite a Super Court injunction against such union action.

One of the UAW's top priority demands was included in the Liberal proposals but was denounced as inadequate. There was a provision covering earlier retirement and increased pension benefits.

Union spokesmen, however, said the offer did not meet demands for more money for those workers already retired.

Malcolm Denley, Ford vice-president for labor relations, described the proposals as "the most generous we have ever made to the UAW. But Gene Prato, chairman of the UAW's national Ford negotiation team, said the company's offer did not come close to meeting union demands.

Big Three profits have been described as "fantastic" by UAW President Walter Reuther, who has demanded that some of the earnings be channelled into economic improvements for the workers.

Reuther has suggested that the automakers could pass along some of the profits to the buying public by reducing prices on their 1965 cars. This was an issue raised during the UAW's formal negotiations, however.

Records profits were chalked up last year by the companies as auto sales reached new heights, and even higher earnings are indicated for this year —if there is no strike and the U.S. economic boom continues.

the emergency meeting of the Greek Supreme Defence Council, at which the decision was taken.

Before he left Athens, reporters asked Kyprianou if he intended to go to Moscow to negotiate an arms deal following the Kremlin's offer of aid. Kyprianou said he might go but added that the offer is still under study by his government.

A special Greek-Cypriot envoy, Dr. Vassos Lyssarides, returned from Moscow Monday and said the Soviets had told him they intended to give the Greek - Cypriots effective support against any new aggression.

Good Place to Save Money Is at Arctic Weather Station

By ALLEN SACKMANN

MOULD'SAY, N.W.T (CP)— Money is a major attraction for workers coming to this isolated Arctic weather station, even though cash is next to useless here.

Even with a pocketful of cash, the dozen men posted to the base spend it. Nearest bar is 300 miles away at Resolute Bay and the nearest store 800 miles southwest at Inuvik.

Clayton Wheeler, 43-year-old officer in charge of the station, says the men buy a year's supply of clothing before reporting. "If he brings $50 with him, he's got more than enough spending money for the year— If he smokes. If he doesn't, half as much is enough."

Gambling is forbidden and accommodation and food are supplied.

Mr. Wheeler, a native of Weyburn, Sask., says the isolation makes working here a lucrative proposition, and many return after their initial 12-month posting The average wage, with overtime and isolation pay, is about $8,000 a year and "there's something wrong if a man can't save $5,000 a year."

Aside from the money, Mr Wheeler has a good reason for staying in the Arctic He suffers from asthma when he goes as far south as Edmonton, 1,000 miles away. He has spent seven years in the north.

Mould Bay, on Prince Patrick Island, is relatively crowded this summer. The federal government's Polar Continental Shelf Project has its main camp here, and the weather station, bumping the population to 65.

Usually, however, the 12 men use no buses except during the spring and fall airlifts when supplies for six months are flown in by the RCAF. They also get to wave to the pilots during the Christmas air drop.

On rare occasions, a plane is forced to set down on the dirt airstrip. Then Mr. Wheeler puts on his customs and immigration hat to give the plane and its occupants clearance if they're from outside Canada.

During the summer months the five sheep owned by the Canadians are too busy to be bored. Buildings are repaired, clocks checked and a host of chores done before the long six-month night closes in.

Summer hobbies include hunting fossils, photography and target practice. All of the western men is a great marksman and Mr. Wheeler is the game warden to the men can't hunt.

STATION'S HISTORY

The weather station is one of 29 in the Canadian Arctic, set up "girdle knowledge of the circulation of the earth's atmosphere in the northern hemisphere and to provide bases for scientific expeditions."

CAMPBELLFORD — The Ladies' Bowling Club held its last scheduled tournament of the season on the Campbellford greens on Monday, August 17.

by the unions for today with the Star and the Telegram.

In another development, the striking printers, who were promised "substantial support" by the ITU international after a meeting in Colorado Springs, Colo., during the weekend, were told that a strike director is being sent to Toronto. Strike benefits to strikers now total about $80 a week.

Carrying large white placards, the new pickets were from the local 767 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CLC), local 43 of the Toronto Civic Employees Union (CLC), and the International Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators (CLC).

A firm of bailiffs hired by the paper served copies of an injunction on the three outside unions. The injunction, granted earlier by the Ontario Supreme Court, limits pickets outside the newspaper plant.

Some ITU pickets moved across the street to comply with the injunction.

Would-Be Teacher Asks If Esperanto Is Practical

DEAR DORIS — I want to further my learning and am very interested in languages. At the moment I am interested in Esperanto. Is this language really useful? Is there a group I could join? — WOULD-BE TEACHER.

DEAR TEACHER — Esperantists see three practical aspects of this world language:

(1) It is absolutely regular and provides an excellent linguistic skeleton for picking up other languages easily.

(2) Esperanto clubs are to be found in every country; you may visit kindred spirits when you travel.

(3) Pen pals are listed in the handbook; they live in all countries, and are grouped under special subjects of interest.

Non-Esperantists point out that since English is spoken by such a large proportion of the people in the world, it is meeting the need. Esperantists answer that their language is politically neutral!

If you learn a living language (like French, Spanish, German) you acquaint yourself with the literature of another race of people, which is broadening.

Decide for yourself. There are Esperanto clubs in many Canadian centres. I am sending you the address of the one nearest you.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR DORIS — Last year during the summer holidays I didn't go out of the house. My mother told me to go outside and have fun.

This year I go out and have fun and do the necessary chores. My mother then tells me that I shouldn't go out, that I should stay home. But I do, I either stay on the front steps or go to the park only a few blocks away.

I am going on 14 in a few months. I want to meet this certain boy, but how can I get to know him if I stay inside the house? — FAMILY PROBLEMS.

DEAR FAMILY PROBLEMS — Meeting "a certain boy" is not quite what you mother had in mind. Try having fun with some girls and see whether she obects!

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I have been saving old nylons and I am very anxious to make something out of them. — LOVES HANDICRAFTS.

DEAR HANDICRAFTS — You can make rugs, dolls, animals, out of old stockings. And when nylons are used for stuffing, the toy is washable. Isn't that something? I'm sending you the names of some instruction books.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BROKEN HEART AND WET PILLOW — I have no magic formula for spiriting your guy back to you from the summer cottage. And I wouldn't if I could! The more you cry yourself to sleep, the more you prove you need an assortment of boy friends. Otherwise you may later find yourself joining the gals who write in to say they are crying themselves to sleep because they married the wrong man.

Choice of Running Mate For Johnson Causes Trouble

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The choice of a running mate for President Johnson is the only major element of mystery going into the U.S. Democratic party's nominating convention next week at Atlantic City.

But while the selection of the vice - presidential nominee in theory is a matter for the presidential candidate, in fact Johnson's hands are less free than he might like.

There might be a genuine surprise in store, however, for those observers who have settled on either of Minnesota's two senators, Hubert Humphrey, 53, and Eugene McCarthy, 48.

The very fact that so much prominence has been given these two names might explain why President Johnson would choose somebody else on the theory that this would be less disruptive for party unity.

KENNEDY IS OUT

The vice-presidential sweepstakes narrowed considerably when President John on removed Attorney-General Robert Kennedy as a runner. That was done before Kennedy's backers really had achieved much momentu m. Politically, it had merit because the kennedy name is mud in the south where Senator Barry Goldwater's Republican following outstrips Democratic strength.

Since then, Senator Humphrey's supporters have been building up a steady head of steam for the liberally-minded man who suffers from some of the same political disadvantages as Kennedy did, even though he is the favorite of most party figures—blue labor.

The Humphrey name is no attraction in the south, he was a co-sponsor of the Civil Rights Act among other things. On a more personal level, while he has been praised often by President Johnson, he may be too ebullient, talkative and full of ideas which he throws off on the run to win the unqualified admiration of the president.

LIKES McCARTHY

He is an old and good friend of the president, a supporter in the 1960 nomination fight with the late president Kennedy. Also important, observers who view the president as a man with an abundance of ego and a desire to run his own show, Senator McCarthy is a quiet but effective operator who probably is closer to the type of vice - president Johnson wants.

But his choice might alienate important sections of the party on the eve of the elections—forces which have been drumming steadily for Senator Humphrey and who include elements disgruntled when Robert Kennedy was scratched.

BOOTS OLD HAT

AUCKLAND, N. Z. (CP) — When an Auckland shoe shop displayed a high-buttoned shoe in its window as part of an anniversary celebration, it had a stream of youths in Beatle-type garb asking to buy footwear of this type. They were crestfallen to discover the boot was made 70 years ago.

New Record Is Established As Local Fair Opens Gates, Rain Did Not Deter Crowds

Asks Countries To Seek Friendly Trade Solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Philip A. Hart (Dem. Mich.) urged the United States and Canada Monday to seek a friendly solution to their current automotive tariff duty row and avoid any damaging trade war.

"I hope and expect," Hart told the Senate, "that the United States and Canadian representatives will urgently and promptly seek to reach an agreement on a program which recognizes both the need of the Canadian government to find a solution for its vexing goods and services deficit, and the interests of U.S. workers and U.S. businessmen. . ."

Hart said he hopes for an agreement "avoiding, insofar as possible, discrimination against U.S. production."

He said Canada's "order-in-council" last November offering Canadian automotive manufacturers certain tariff remissions as an incentive to increase their export trade was unilateral and "most unfortunate." Hart said it seemed designed mainly to increase Canadian sales on the U.S. market.

But he warned that U.S. action in impose retributory tariff against the Canadians could backfire and bring a counter-action "much less palatable than the duty remission program."

A thrilled full house bade goodnight to the premiere of the 1964 Belleville Fair last night — unaware it had witnessed violent tragedy.

While 1,500 watched from opening event — Ontario's the grandstand, 26-year-old Wilfred Hillson, a Peterborough entrant in the Fair's star championship motorcycle heats — was fatally injured midway through the tourney.

Two other riders were injured in a succession of spills during the races that predictably packed the grandstand.

The young rider's death — he was dead on admission to Belleville General Hospital — was kept a well-guarded secret from excited fans while the remainder of the heats was run off.

For Fair Board officials the incident quietened what otherwise would have been an enthusiastic reaction to first-day rewards for their year-round effort.

Last year with the glittering attraction of the RCMP musical ride both afternoon and night, opening day brought in 5,660 adults and 2,150 cars and youngsters. Yesterday, with no such matinee program, the Fair drew 6,200 adults and 2,746 cars and kids.

JUST SLIGHT DROP

Last year on opening day the grandstand grossed 2,935 paid admissions for two shows, against 1,800 last night.

Yesterday's opener began indecisively as far as weather was concerned.

Early morning cleared after a shower, were warm and sunny. By 11 a.m., they had dulled and sudden, heavy showers threatened the Belleville district.

By early afternoon the picture again reverted to clear skies, — and stayed that way for the balance of the day.

Spectators started thronging the grounds before noon, and additional crowds surged idly until pavilions, barns, midway attractions and show rings were teeming over.

By nightfall, with more and more spectators pressing the big exhibition, the Fair was no place for someone in a hurry.

One thing it was though earlier in the day — a definite rendezvous for the small fry. MOPPETS FILL GROUNDS

With admission free, the moppets scurried to the grandstand at 2 p.m. for a children's fun show. Hustled into place by officials Ben Bleecker and Harry Dafoe, the kids were put through their paces in pie - eating and baby - bottle contests, pony musical chairs and potato races.

Meantime, the small, small fry were scrambling for their ration of fire in the competitive arena at the baby show under the watchful eye of Sandy Sandercock. The West Hastings MPP, who supervises the show every year, claimed it the big. gest one yet.

Today the horses take the spotlight with the big event slated for 8.30 p.m.

The hum of local industry quietly insinuated itself into the Belleville Fair yesterday.

For the first time, city manufacturers have been gathered under one roof, giving district citizens an opportunity to see the processes that guarantee their economic well-being.

The display in the Fair's manufacturer's building is small when despite its name has hitherto mainly been given over to merchandizing exhibits — is proving a success.

The theme of the display was the acquaintance of the community with the products of its industries, most of which are shipped unseen to outside customers.

Its organizer, Chamber of Commerce secretary Earl Dickonether, felt the public would show interest in his idea — and apparently he has not been disappointed.

The heartening result can be seen around the different stands as spectators query local company representatives on products and processes, ranging from alloys to electric coils.

Not all available space could be filled in time for this year's show — a situation which Mr. Dickonether says can be remedied in future, now public enthusiasm is indicated.

NO EMPTY SPOTS

However, there are no empty spots. The few vacancies have been farmed out to such groups as the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the city chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation.

And, providing a dash of old-fashioned color to the trim designs of modern industry, is a handicraft exhibit by the Belleville Historical Society.

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

MONDAY, Aug. 17, 1964

A committee report finding no wrongdoing in approaches made to Gerard Girouard, MP for Labelle, to join the Liberals was adopted.

A Creditiste motion to refer the whole matter back to the committee for possible legal proceedings was defeated 164-6.

Speaker Macnaughton ruled the flag debate must stick to the limits of a Conservative sub-amendment outlining four plebiscite questions.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker hotly protested this ruling but it was upheld by the House 94-59.

Harold Danforth (PC—Kent, Ont.) criticized the government's "mad pursuit" of the maple leaf flag, saying it will solve nothing.

Robert Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said the flag design "not characteristic of Western Canada, so why not a buffalo?

TUESDAY, Aug. 18

The Commons meets at 2 p.m. to resume the flag debate. The Senate stands adjourned to Sept. 15.

PROPOSE CENTRE

HALIFAX (CP) — A proposed retardation research centre for Halifax, to serve the four Atlantic provinces, was discussed here Monday at a one-day meeting of the Canadian Association for Retarded Children. Robert F. Shaw, president of the national association, said the subject was brought up so the four provincial governments would know what was planned when they were approached for support.

Escape Plot At Manchester Prison Foiled

LONDON (AP) — An escape plot, aided from the outside, has been foiled at a Manchester prison where one of the great train robbery gang is serving his term, the home office disclosed Monday night.

The announcement followed the escape of Charles Wilson, another of the train robbers, from Winson Green Prison in Birmingham last week. He has not been caught and is believed to have been brought out by a gang which had obtained copies of the prison's master keys.

In Manchester's Strangeways Jail has been Douglas Gordon Goody, who is serving a 30-year term for his part in the $7,800,000 robbery a year ago.

The home office did not say whether the escape plot involved Goody. Its announcement said:

"What appears to have been an outside plot to secure the escape of a prisoner at Manchester was discovered by the prison staff yesterday and the matter was immediately placed in the hands of the police for investigation."

Want to Play 'Real Jazz' In America

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Two "cats" who defected from the Soviet Union last week said Monday they would like to go to the United States to play "real jazz."

After arrival in this Danish capital by plane from Tokyo where they left a touring Soviet variety troupe, the defecting musicians said they had been practicing jazz more or less secretly in Moscow for several years.

Bassoonist Igor Berezhnin, 31, said the urge to play "real jazz" overwhelmed him and his companion, clarinetist Boris Midney, 27. He said they met American jazz men during baudleader Benny Goodman's visit to the Soviet Union two years ago.

"We joined the Americans in a late-night jam session in a little Moscow cafe," Berezhnin said.

Normally, Soviet musicians play jazz in private apartments. Berezhnin said, to avoid the wrath of the authorities.

Both men left wives in Moscow. They did not want to talk about their families and did not give clear replies to questions of how they intended to take their wives to the U.S.

U.S. officials accompanied the musicians from Tokyo, where they requested political asylum Thursday.

Beatles Leave For Visit to U. S., Canada

LONDON (Reuters) — Hundreds of screaming, shouting teen-agers today gave their popsinging idols, the Beatles, a tremendous sendoff on their second tour of the United States and a first visit to Canada.

As the commercial jet carrying the quartet began its long takeoff run at London Airport, the teen-agers ran madly past smiling policemen to a nearby viewing gallery.

"Beatlemania" gripped the airport. Some 500 fans—most of them teen - age girls wearing Beatle badges over their sweaters and carrying Beatle dolls—screamed hysterically as their idols arrived in dismal, rainy weather to board the plane.

For many of the fans it had been a hard day's night on the roof of an airport building, where sympathetic officials had allowed them to sleep under tarpaulins in heavy rain.

Bedraggled but undaunted, they carried banners saying "I love you," "Turn left at Greenland" and others, which they waved exuberantly.

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto City Clerk Edgar Norris said Monday that 420,000 names will be on the municipal voters' list to be posted throughout the city Oct. 12.

Peterborough Rider Killed At Ontario Motorbike Meet Held at Fair Monday Eve

One rider died during last night's Ontario championship dirt track motorcycle races at Belleville Fair, and another was injured. Two other riders cracked up during the evening without injury.

Wilfred Hillson, 28 years old, of Peterborough was dead on arrival at Belleville General Hospital after a top-turn accident during the semi-final race of the 250 cc class. Three of the four accidents of the evening were on the top or fourth corner, the same one on which a rider was killed during the 1961 championships. A Road Captain with the Lift Lock City Riders, Hillson had been racing little more than a year. He was unmarried.

Lucien Lamoureux of Iberville, Que., spent the night in hospital after an accident, again on the top corner, during the first elimination heat in the Expert 500 cc class. He fell at nearly the same place during last year's championships, but last year was able to finish the race. This year, he broke a small bone in his foot.

FASTEST YET

Officials of the Canadian Motorcycle Association sponsored races said last night's championships were the fastest yet, and but for the death would have been the best.

Champion in the Expert 500-cc class is Yvon Duhamel of Montreal, riding a B.S.A. He also rides a B.S.A. in the championship in the 250cc class. Don McHugh of Brampton, riding a B.S.A., was second in the Expert 500cc class; Sandy Freeman of Hamilton, riding a Harley Davidson, was third, and Herb Eckersley of Mystic, Conn., rode a Harley Davidson to fourth place.

Larry Ross of Hamilton won the Senior 500cc championship, riding a Triumph machine. Stuart Morin of Montreal, came second and Roger Boutard of Quebec City, was third. The race was cut from eight laps to six on the half-mile track after a crash disabled Yvon Generoux of Scarborough and damaged the machine ridden by Keith McElroy of Peterborough. The consolation race in this class threatened disaster when a machine ridden by Jack Generoux of Toronto showed sudden signs of trouble during the first two laps. The machine wobbled violently on the straights until Generoux was able to tighten the steering dampers.

JUNIOR CHAMPION

Dave Sackbrunoe of Oshawa won the Junior 500cc Championship. Frank Dizon of Oshawa came second, Malyn Jones of Bonarlaw was third and Robert Noel of Montreal was fourth in the class.

Maurice Fraser of Burlington, running for the second time in his life nearly won the 250 cc championship riding against several experts. He led for five of the eight laps in the race, then retired with engine failure. Winner in the class was Yvon DuHamel of Montreal, second was Herb Eckersley of Mystic, Conn. William Brown of Don Mills came third and Barry Whitmore of Willowdale was fourth, riding a 200 cc machine. There were not enough 200 cc machines out to make a class of their own, so Whitmore won the 200 cc trophy by leading the 200 cc machines in the 250 cc class. He also beat several 250 cc machines.

The Piston Pushers Motorcycle Club of Belleville organized the races, with Larry Basteds of Hamilton as referee and Bob Kelly of Hamilton as his assistant. The Canadian Race Communications Association provided marshals for the race and Garry Sherman of the Piston Pushers announced the events. City Ambulance of Belleville provided two ambulances for the races, the St. John Ambulance Brigade supplied first aid attendants. Belleville Fire Department had a truck on stand-by duty.

Most of last night's riders will meet again on Labor Day for the National Championship races in Three Rivers, Que.

Sheik With 39 Wives in Past Has Enough

BEERSHEBA, Israel (AP) — Sheik Suleiman El Hozeil, with 39 wives in his past but looking fit beyond his advanced years, said Monday he had not heard of an offer by a pretty Dayton, Ohio, divorcee to join his harem.

He denied he advertised recently in the United States for another wife.

But he admitted in an interview that back in 1938 he advertised in a U.S. magazine for a wife. This, he said, had led to correspondence with various American ladies — aged 17 to 39—but none measured up to his requirements.

"Tell everyone I've had enough of all that woman nonsense and want to be left in peace," he declared at his home in the Negev Desert.

Sheik Suleiman said he knew nothing about Mrs. Marie Miller, 23, an electronics assembler in a Dayton plant who said Sunday she had offered to accept an offer of joining his harem for a year for $50,000.

She said she had seen an advertisement in a U.S. magazine and sent the sheik a cable in response. She stated she made the decision in order to provide financial security for her two young daughters.

FOLLOWED GOLD

Rabbi Feinberg Fears Victory By Goldwater

STRATFORD (CP) — Rabbi Abraham L. Feinberg of Toronto, vice-president of the Canadian Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, said Monday Canada must indicate its fundamental opposition to the principles of "Goldwaterism" in field of foreign affairs.

He told about 40 persons at a coffee house meeting, sponsored by a group called the Toronto Peace Centre, that no one should write off the chances of United States Senator Barry Goldwater, Republican presidential nominee, to win election to "the most powerful elected office in human history."

Rabbi Feinberg described the presidential nominee as the "standard - bearer of a philosophy, fascist in practical results and destructive of the Judeo - Christian ethic which many of his bible-belt evangelical supporters have not even the literacy to understand."

If Goldwater wins, he said, Canada will be affected as she were in fact the 51st state of the U.S. instead of a sovereign land.

"Canada's economy would be strained by import restrictions already previewed in the Republican platform and by the certainty that our relatively advanced welfare legislation would brand us with radical socialist' tendencies."

He suggested that a non-partisan statement on foreign affairs be drawn up by all political parties in the House of Commons and the Senate to be delivered to the next president of the U.S. This would serve notice that "his authority as chief of the western alliance and commander of its armed forces does not include the right to incinerate millions of Canadians in nuclear war without their consent."

Woman Says Dog Always Called Laddie

Mrs. Harvey said the dog, always called Laddie, was stolen from her porch July 30.

Fillion, father of eight children, said a collie he owned called Lassie disappeared July. When a neighbour's daughter brought a dog to his home July 28, his children welcomed it back as Lassie.

Mrs. Harvey said she saw the dog outside Fillion's home Aug. 10. It jumped all over her, she said, but Fillion wouldn't let it loose.

She said the dog has distinctive markings and she had never seen a similar one. "I know my dog," she said.

Fillion said he had some doubts the dog was Lassie after it appeared more docile than usual. He said he was willing to hand the dog over to Mrs. Harvey.

Canadian Direct Investment In Industries Abroad Was $2,619,000,000 End of '61

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian direct investment in industries abroad reached an estimated $2,619,000,000 at the end of 1961.

However, close to 40 per cent of this foreign investment was made by Canadian corporations under the effective control of Americans and other non - residents.

The figures are included in the latest review of the Canadian international investment position, made by the bureau of statistics.

Not included in the tally of foreign investment abroad are two large blocks of Canadian money:

1. Nearly $6,000,000,000 that Canadian banks and insurance companies must hold in other countries to cover their liabilities there.

2. Another $3,000,000,000 excluded because it has no real significance in the Canadian balance of payments. This money includes, for example, the foreign holdings of some Canadian corporations which are owned abroad and do all their business abroad.

Between 1954 and 1961, the foreign direct investment rose by $1,000,000,000 to $2,619,000,000.

Of this total, 67 per cent of the investment was in the United States, or approximately $1,747,000,000. This is an increase since 1954 of $516,000,000.

Investment in Britain rose in the same period from $119,000,000 to $288,000,000, while direct Canadian outlays in industries in the rest of the Americas—excluding the U.S.—rose from $132,000,000 to $229,000,000.

Canadian direct investment in the six-nation European Common Market at the end of 1961 totalled $60,000,000. This included about $28,000,000 in France, $16,000,000 in West Germany, $12,000,000 in Italy, $2,000,000 in Belgium and Luxembourg and about $2,000,000 in The Netherlands.

F. Burnham, British Guiana Leader, Detained

No explanation for his detention was issued.

Police Commissioner Peter Owen said "there will be very important developments."

The move was the latest development in four months of unrest between Indians and Africans in this sugar and rice colony in which more than 160 persons died and 1,300 houses and millions of dollars worth of sugar crops went up in flames.

Owen said in an official statement Monday that police were inquiring into more than 1,000 murders. Among them were 22 committed in Georgetown, including cases in which women were bombed in a shop and a cinema and children were burned in their beds.

Farm Equipment Displayed Inside Track at Fair Here

Mechanized farm equipment continues to take the work out of farming.

Proof of this is at the farm machinery exhibit at the Belleville Fair where the latest in mechanized equipment is being shown.

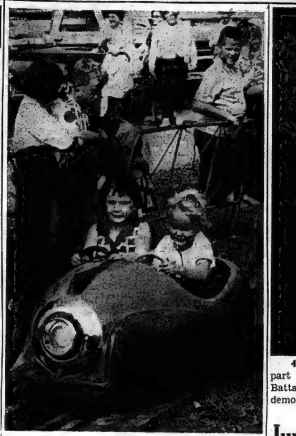
Alton Hadley, Massey-Ferguson dealer, has possibly the largest machinery exhibit set up in the racetrack infield. Mr. Hadley has a full line of farm equipment with emphasis on tractors, but also featuring various types of harvesting equipment.

Further along the infield, the local George S. White agency is demonstrating the Jamesway mechanical silo unloader which also doubles to ease the silo filling operation.

Riverside Construction of Frankford is exhibiting the Patzelio unloaders and other automatic feeding equipment and barn cleaners. Beattie farm equipment and Roscoe building products are also on show.

Another exhibit on the infield is that of General Lawn Tray Ltd., which offers a complete professional lawn service.

Texaco Oil Company has a trailer on the grounds where Texaco service to the farmer is demonstrated. Fifteen - minute movies in the trailer and free gifts are among the attractions.



Ontario Hydro also has an information trailer on the grounds, providing fair visitors with up - to - date information pertaining to Hydro and many of the new electrical uses, both at home and on the farm.

And the position which the growing of grain corn has attained is demonstrated by two displays on the fair infield.

POULTRY EXHIBITORS—Jack Reymes of Grafton and D. Bruce Smith of Odessa, discuss the merits of their prize-winning birds at Belleville Fair Poultry Show. Poultry exhibit is a "full house" with the number of pigeons shown being the highest on record. Mr. Reymes holds a Cornish cock, while Mr. Smith poses with his White Rock cock.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CANYON, Sports Editor

This is the "week that is" for the minor baseballers across Ontario.

The Ontario Baseball Association has declared August 15-22 as "Minor Baseball Week" and hopes that, the eyes of the province's moppet fans will be focused on the future Babe Ruths.

"Minor Baseball Week" is designed to acquaint more parents and interested adults about the worth of these young fellows playing in local baseball associations.

Baseball takes a back seat from none other sport in the development of youth sportsmanship and other assets that will make him a good citizen of the future.

Here in Belleville we are fortunate to have a group of men who devote a lot of their time, energy and finances to the promotion of baseball for the younger fellows.

The Belleville Minor Baseball Association is well organized and controlled by a group of adults dedicated to the sport and what it does for the minors.

An outstanding evidence of their ability, interest and all-out efforts is seen in the fact that the city is represented in the Ontario Baseball Association finals by peewee and bantam teams.

Headed by President Ron Lapinette, vice-president Don Eves and secretary Gord Burnett, the BMBA is doing an outstanding job.

Backing up the administration are the coaches, managers, umpires, scorekeepers and others who also are men dedicated to their jobs.

In "Minor Baseball Week" full tribute is paid to Rene Lajoie and Gerry Debnop of the "Red Boy's" team, Ed Christopher and Al Jones of Fountain Park and Bill Coughlin of the Bollers.

Also to Ed McQuaid, Carl Brimblecome and Jack Assetine of the Jaycees; Bill Nolan of IBEW; Len Coughlin of Gary Sine and Ron Guest of DeMora's.

Not forgetting Leo Simard, George Mills of the Lions; Jack Oleveson of the Yankees; Don Eves, CNR and Harry Cole, Hugh Petrie and Harold Ackerman of Parkdale.

And a special tip of the hat to Russ Soules (who is still single) and Dick Ellis, who are justifiably proud of their all-star bantam squad, not forgetting Moe Hunter and his Belleville Merchants' prowess.

This week is the little fellows' "week to howl," so to speak. And no finer gesture of appreciation of the fine efforts they are putting forth as well as those of their elders' mentors can be shown than patronizing their games. You will find the dates in the sports calendar.

Province-wide from Marathon to Windsor, from Niagara Falls to Brockville over 15,000 boys and 2,000 coaches and managers put this fine game into action on the sandlots from early May to September.

Remember that boy of yours is the person who is going to carry out what you started. He is to do it right where you are sitting and attend to those things you think are so important. He is going to sit in your place in Parliament and occupy your place on the bench.

He will assume control of your cities, provinces and nation; your homes, churches, schools, universities and corporations.

All your accomplishments are going to be judged by him and praised or condemned by him. All your work is for him and the fate of the nation and of humanity are in his hands.

So, it might be well to pay him some attention.

Could Take Two Awards

Allen Leads Rookie Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Richie Allen, leading a charge that is moving Philadelphia Phillies to their first National League pennant in 14 years, appears to have a good chance to become the first major leaguer to win the rookie and most valuable player awards in the same season.

Although Johnny Callison, the clutch - hitting outfielder, has been more frequently mentioned as Philadelphia's representative for MVP honors, Allen's credentials are more impressive.

The two are tied for the club home run lead with 20. Callison leads in runs batted in with 70 to Allen's 63. However, the young third baseman heads the team in batting with .318 while Callison's average is only .273.

In last week's games, Allen moved into fifth place in the National League batting race as the Phillies won five of seven games and increased their lead over runner-up San Francisco.

Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh has a stranglehold on the batting lead although he dropped four points to .345. Chicago's Ron Santo, replacing teammate Billy Williams in the runner - up position, fell one point to .327. Williams slumped seven points to .326.

The Giants outfielder slammed five home runs last week and lifted his leading total to 37.

Mickey Mantle of New York Yankees advanced from third to second, changing places with Chicago's Floyd Robinson. Mantle picked up six points to .315. Robinson climbed one point to .311.

Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota heads the field in homers with 42. He had three last week.

CARPENTIER HONORED

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Veteran Boxer's Association said Monday that Georges Carpentier, former world light heavyweight champion, has been selected by the World Boxing Historians' Association to receive one of the three 1964 Hall of Fame scrolls at the association's convention here Sept. 27. Tommy Loughran, who fought Carpentier here in 1928 and who held the light heavy title when he retired undefeated, will be honored at the same time.

Phils Widen Gap; Sox Edge Yankees

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chris Short, hidden in the shadow of Sandy Koufax, pitched a five-hitter Monday night, posting his 12th victory and lowering his earned run average to a brilliant .01, as Philadelphia Phillies stretched their National League lead to five games over the Cincinnati Giants by walloping Chicago Cubs 8-1.

This season Short has been one of the top left-handers in the league, but has been overshadowed by Koufax's brilliant work for Los Angeles. Short has the 12-victory mark for the first time in his major league career and is second only to Koufax among National League starters in the vital earned-run department.

Short's victory gave the Phillies their biggest bulge of the season over the Giants, who trailed 4-0.

Only two other games were scheduled in the National League day. Charlie Smith hit two homers and Dennis Ribant pitched a four-hitter as New York Mets whipped Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 and St. Louis Cardinals made the most of two errors to defeat Houston, scoring three runs in the ninth inning and defeating the Colts 4-3.

WHITE SOX EDGE YANKEES

In the only game on the American League program, second-place Chicago White Sox edged New York 2-1, moving to within 1½ games of front-runner Baltimore while dripping the third - place Yankees three games back.

The White Sox capitalized on a muffed pick off attempt and Don Buford's two-run double for work in beating the Yankees.

The White Sox scored in the fifth on singles by Al Weis, Johnnies and Ron Hansen plus J. C. Martin's sacrifice fly, then scored the winning run in the seventh.

Floyd Robinson walked with one out in the seventh, then was trapped off first base by reliever Whitey Ford. In the run-down Bobby Richardson dropped a throw and Robinson raced home with the Yanks' only single brought him home.

Short, who has lost six games, was touched for a run in the second inning on a double by Doug Clemens, a wild pickoff attempt and a passed ball. He bore down in several serious jams to keep the Cubs scoreless for the rest of the way.

The Phillies put it away in the second inning against Ernie Broglio, sending 10 men to the plate and scoring five runs. The big blow was a two-run triple by Johnny Callison, who later slugged another triple. Tony Taylor collected five hits for the Phillies, including the 1,000th of his career.

Smith, an outfielder playing left field for the first time, cracked a three-run homer in the first inning off Bob Buhl and added a solo shot in the eighth, taking the Mets' team lead with 15 homers.

Ribant, meanwhile, won his first major league game in his second start, striking out six and allowing the Pirates only four singles.

The Cardinals shut out on six hits by 39-year-old Hal Brown in eight innings, then scored their runs with the aid of ninth inning errors by Eddie Kasko and Al Spangler, Dick Groat and Mike Shannon each singled home a run and Julian Javier's grounder got the other across.

Eastern Football Scoring

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

After two league games, a familiar face heads the list of Eastern Foot b a l l Conference rushers and an old standby has reached another scoring plateau.

These were the highlights following weekend games when Ottawa Rough Riders dumped Hamilton Tiger-Cats 13-10 in Ottawa Friday and Montreal Alouettes held on in their Saturday night game at Toronto for a 21-13 victory over the Argonauts.

George Dixon, Montreal's fleet - footed halfback, scampered for 126 yards against Toronto to boost his season's total to 158 yards. Two Ottawa players — quarterback Russ Jackson and fullback Ron Stewart — trail the Alouette player with 142 and 129 yards, respectively. Ted Collins, the Rough Riders' lanky wide end, scored both touchdowns in Ottawa's victory over Hamilton to move the league scoring race with 18 points.

Dixon and Montreal quarterback Vernon Cole and Ron Hatcher of Toronto are deadlocked in second place with 12 points each.

TD FOR PARKER

Jackie Parker of the Argonauts became the first player in the Canadian Football League to reach the 100-point plateau although his achievement was lost amid the excitement of the Toronto-Montreal contest.

The six points he scored for Argo's second TD gave him a lifetime total of 701, including 67 with Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Conference before arriving in Toronto last year.

Only one other player, Canadian Gerry James, appears to threaten Parker's record. James, a one-time boy wonder and place-kicking specialist for Winnipeg Blue Bombers, finished the 1962 season with 601 points. He sat out last year because of a contract dispute but returned to football this year with Saskatchewan Roughriders of the WFC.

Cardinals GM Resigns

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bing Devine, the soft-spoken guiding hand behind St. Louis Cardinals' at h l e t i c fortunes, confirmed with "emotion and regret" Monday his resignation as general manager.

The action surprised the baseball world. Devine, 47, was a career man with the Cardinals organization and had spent his 23 years since graduating from college within the St. Louis fold.

"Since it has been learned about my resignation prematurely," Devine said, "I have no choice other than to confirm it."

Devine said he would remain with the club "until or at least near the end of the season." He gave his decision, he said, because St. Louis president August A. Busch had become "disappointed and frustrated" over the team's inability to win a pennant.

Willingdon Cup

Sasky Team Grabs 5-Stroke Lead

By JOHN SHORT

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan representatives created two provincial golfing standards Monday when they romped to a five-stroke lead over Ontario in the first round of the 1964 Canadian Willingdon Cup team championships.

The Saskatchewan entry, directed by Keith Rever's brilliant putting as he compiled a stirring 68 to lead the field of 107, had never before led a Willingdon Cup competition after the first 18 holes.

In addition, the Saskatchewan total of 284 was one better than the previous provincial best, which occurred at London, Ont., when Rever led opening-day qualifying round rivals with a 69 in 1962.

Rever needed only 27 putts, including five one-putt greens on the back nine, as he edged veteran Ontario team member Nick Weslock of Toronto for low medal honors. Weslock finished with a 69.

Bob Wylie of Calgary settled for an even-par 70 over the 6,530-yard Saskatoon Golf Club course for sole possession of third place in the medal race. Wylie's effort was the best individual place in the team competition with 297, three shots behind Saskatchewan and one ahead of Ontario, with Wylie in the forefront, was third with 299 despite a disappointing 82 by Len Brayton of Calgary.

WINS BOOST SCORES

Brayton and several other golfers hampered by winds that gusted beyond 30 miles an hour were finishing their rounds precarious. Ontario's chances were harmed by an 80 contribution by Bruce Brewer of Toronto.

Behind the three leading teams came British Columbia and Quebec with 304, Nova Scotia 305, Manitoba 307 and a combined New Brunswick-Prince Edward Island team at 318.

British Columbia was led by Johnny Johnston of Vancouver with 74. Bob Kidd of Vancouver reported a 74, but he later was penalized two shots for moving a ball improperly on the fifth hole.

Quebec was led by Claude Clement of Montreal with 76 and Bob Stimpson of Ottawa, with 74 each. Peter Hope of Dartmouth directed Nova Scotia with 76. Bill Pidia-ki of Winnipeg paced Manitoba with 77. Ken Wilson of Fredericton of Sussex, N.B., led the combined Maritime entry with 78.

Behind individual standouts Rever, Weslock and Wylie came Georges Dussault, who holds included six Americans in the top 23. Leading A m e r i c a n was George Archer of Valdosta, Ga., reigning Georgia amateur champ who is a placekicking specialist for the Georgia Tech University football team.

ROSE WON'T COMPETE

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Australia's Murray Rose, winner of four Olympic titles, has also recently broke the world record for the 1,500-metre swim, will not compete in the Tokyo Olympics, an Australian Olympic Federation official said here today. W. Berge Phillips, secretary of the Australian Swimming Union, said a decision that would have been the first move towards including the 25-year-old star of the 1956 and 1960 Olympics on the 1964 team was defeated in a vote of Australian states. Rose has been living in Los Angeles.

Landscapers Defeat City Hotel

Barrage Landscapers rode the two-hit hurling of Gerry Greenwood to a 7-2 triumph over City Hotel last night, evening their 4-of-7 Commercial Softball League semi-finals at two games apiece.

Next game of the set is slated for King George School on Thursday night. Barrages will be presented with the O'Connor Trophy, as pennant winners, during Thursday's game.

Landscapers got Genereaux a 3-0 lead in the first and he took it from there. It was 7-0 after four frames before throwing errors gave City unearned singlestone in the fifth and seventh innings.

Genereaux neither fanned nor walked a batter and the only hits he allowed were singles by Gord Smith and Ron Archer.

Joe Harvey rapped a home run, double and single to account for three Barrage runs. Then Wood slammed a two-run homer while Tim Cook had a pair of base knocks. Gordie Duff and Cy Radford also hit safely.

Dave Feeney was the loser on the City Hotel mound. He gave up eight hits, struck out three and walked three.

The winners fielded well behind Genereaux, charged only with the two throwing errors. City players bobbled five times.

Point Anne, Lightfoots All Square

Scoring all their runs in the first two innings, Point Anne Centennials clipped Lightfoot Construction 7-3 at the Point last night to even their Commercial softball league semi-finals at two games each.

Next game in the four-of-seven battle is slated for the Adamite Field Wednesday night at 6.45.

Lightfoots opened the scoring with an unearned run in the first but fell behind 3-1 in the bottom of the inning. Starting pitcher George Young, usually one of the top-control hurlers in the loop, walked the first five batters he faced. He left in favor of Harry Powers at this point but the damage was done and Young was tagged with the loss. Powers got out of the bases-loaded, none-out situation with only one run against him, after a fly ball.

Powers allowed four hits, fanned three and passed one. Vern Whalen's homer, D. Akey's and H. Powell's doubles and singles by Jim Horwood accounted for the Point Anne hits. Lightfoot got only their three sixth-frame safeties.

Eskimo Sets Field Goal '58' Record

Stamps Win 39-6

CALGARY (CP) — Bill Mitchell, a rangy Canadian centre for Edmonton Eskimos, set a North American professional football record Monday night with a 58-yard field goal. His team had less success as it dropped a 39-6 Western Football Conference decision to Calgary Stampeders.

The wood bettered a kick of 56 yards by Bert Rechichar of Baltimore Colts of the National Football League against Chicago Bears in 1953.

It was the third straight loss for the rebuilding, rookie-laden Eskimos.

Mitchell, 27-year-old graduate from the University of Western Ontario, is in his second season with the Eskimos. He was traded to Edmonton by Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference as one of the players sent west in exchange for Jackie Parker.

Stampeders lost one of their most valuable halfbacks, Jim Dillard, out with a broken ankle.

BIT AFTER RUN

A crowd of 14,000 watched as Dillard was dropped after a five-yard run and then helped from the field favoring his right ankle.

Club doctors said one bone was broken and Dillard should be out for at least two months. Coach Bobby Dobbs said he does not have a ready replacement.

Calgary added 179 yards rushing, to their 245-yard air attack, to amass a total offence of 427 yards, compared to an Eskimo total of 153 yards. 62 on the ground and 73 in the air.

Import Lu Bain, a 22-year-old halfback from Oregon, led the Calgary steamroller with two touchdowns. Dillard and halfback Jesse Branch each picked up one touchdown.

ADDS FIELD GOAL

Dillard got his touchdown on a 34-yard, first-quarter toss from quarterback Eagle Day, capping a 53-yard march of five plays.

Minutes later, Robinson intercepted an Eskimo pass and lugged the ball to the Edmonton 12. A pass moved the ball to the seven and Robinson booted his first field goal.

Bain scored the first of his TDs midway through the second quarter on a seven-yard dash.

The Stampeders opened up the Edmonton defence in earnest in the fourth quarter. Robinson's fourth field goal opened a scoring barrage.

FIRES STRIKE

Leroy Whittle fumbled at the Edmonton 23 and six plays later Bain bulled over from three yards out. Relief quarterback Jerry Keeling, who came in after the start of the third quarter, fired a 33-yard strike to Branch in the Edmonton end zone to end the scoring.

Quarterbacks Lynn Amedee and Gary Hertzfeldt alternated for the Eskimos, with Amedee good on two of 13 tries for 66 yards and Hertzfeldt good on one of five for seven yards.

Day completed nine of 14 trips and Keeling four of eight.

Bain was the top ground gainer for Calgary, with 84 yards in 13 carries. John Bright led Edmonton with 37 yards in five tries.

Ottawa, Bombers Tonight

In the four games before the schedule started, Ottawa scored 98 points and allowed only 34. In the process they drubbed Winnipeg 25-7.

But after those four triumphs, they swaggered into Toronto for the Eastern Conference opener and lost 23-21. Their subsequent 13-10 victory over Hamilton Tiger Cats has not removed the nagging fear that the pre-season spree was just a dream.

When Winnipeg met Ottawa July 20, the Bombers were playing for the first time. Ottawa already had beaten B.C Lions 21-6.

Winnipeg started its season with a 17-16 win against British Columbia, then dropped a 37-29 decision to Saskatchewan and bumbled Edmonton Eskimos 37-7.

When Ottawa met the same Eskimos in exhibition play, the result was a 32-20 win for Riders. Yet that was a far better result than the hapless Eskimos have had in any of their regular season games. They've gone down 52-18 and 39-6 to Calgary.

After looking at the record and studying films of the Winnipeg games, Ottawa coach Frank Clair said Monday he expects to find Bombers with a "greatly improved" offence. What he's most mindful of are the deadly passes from quarterback Kenny Ploen to receivers like Ernie Pitts and Darrell Funston.

"You can't expect to hold them down too much," said Clair. "You have to prepare to outscore them."

Two possible changes to help bring this about are George Reis at offensive end, where he was subbed last game by Jay Roberts, and former New York Giant Chuck Killett at left half for Billy Harris.

While Winnipeg undoubtedly has improved since its exhibition beating by Ottawa. Bomber coach Bud Grant says the Riders have improved since then too. "They do a lot of things well and have a big front wall.

Toronto Sprinter Sets Canadian Mile Mark

TORONTO (CP)—Ergas Leps 25-year-old runner from Toronto, has established a Canadian native record mark of 4:01.1 for the mile. The previous best for a Canadian was 4:01.4 set by Bruce Kidd of Toronto a year ago.

Leps, who will compete for Canada in the Olympic Games at Tokyo in October, came up with his finest performance last Thursday, opening day of the three - day Carreras international invitation meet at Kingston, Jamaica.

He was one of three Canadians, all from Toronto, who competed in the meet. Others were Abigail Hoffman, who finished third in both the women's 220- and 440-yard events, and Dave Ellis, who was second in the 3,000-metre steeplechase in 9:23.0 and third in the three miles with a time of 14:04.0.

Miss Hoffman, also elected to represent Canada in the Olympics, was clocked at 25.4 for 220 and 56.4 for the quarter-mile.

"I think Leps could easily have got under the four minutes for the mile," said Paul Foce, who accompanied the athletes as their manager. "A third quarter of 62.2 seconds killed his chances. Nobody in the field apparently wanted to make a move."

Winner was Morgan Groth of the United States in 4:00.4.

En route to his fastest mile, the Estonian - born Leps was clocked in 3:54.0 for the 1,500 metres, another Canadian native record. The former mark of 3:54.6 was set three weeks ago by Bill Crothers of Markham, Ont., at the Toronto Police Games.

Suffers Injury Parker Will Miss Game

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The hopes of second place Toronto Argonauts in the Eastern Football Conference received a dash of cold water over the weekend with the announcement of an injury to quarterback Jackie Parker.

Acquired last year from Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Conference, the scoring, passing, running ace spent most of the remaining 1963 season on the limp and was of little assistance to Argos as they limped to a last-place finish in the EFC.

This year, the team started out with a surprise 23-21 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders in the season opener on Parker's late-game heroics, but Saturday night lost 21-13 to Montreal Alouettes when Parker was almost forced from the game after being kicked in the ankle.

Coach Bobby Wirkowski said Monday the injury may keep Parker out of action in the return match with the Alouettes Thursday in Montreal and the club may have to depend on reserve quarterbacks Don Fuell and rookie Karl Sweetan.

TRIMBLE PROTESTS

In Montreal, Alouette coach Jim Trimble stirred the pot of controversy a trace with the announcement he was writing in protest to CFL commissioner G. Sydney Halter of Winnipeg concerning a pass by Argo halfback Dick Shatto to Parker. He says the league rules forbid such a pass.

At the same time he was going to ask that no fine be levied against Montreal halfback Jesse Riopelle, of North Bay, for being ejected from the game following a fight with Argo corner linebacker Ron Brewer, who Trimble claims was doing all the fighting.

Coach Ralph Sazio of Hamilton Tiger - Cats Monday announced the release of Dick Easterly and the signings of running back Bobby Gaffers and linebacker Sam Tidmore, late cuts from the National Football League.

Sazio is trying to patch up his sputtering Grey Cup defenders who have lost their first two games.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

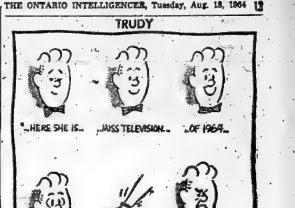
A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and quiets elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.



Just ask your druggist for Preparation H. Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special rectal tip).

Heads For Attendance Record

CINCINNATI (AP)—The National League is headed for a third consecutive season attendance record, league headquarters said Monday.

With the baseball season a little more than two-thirds completed, 8,084,304 paid admissions have been recorded at the 10 league parks.

At its present pace during the remaining seven weeks of the season, the 12,000,000 attendance mark will be reached for the first time in major league history, the league said.

Through games of last Sunday, the league showed a gain of 911,308 over the same period in 1963 when the league set an all-time attendance record of 11,382,257 paid admissions.

The Tracks

The largest return since the Jockey Club took over Ontario racing in 1937 was Nov. 10, 1956, at Toronto's Woodbine track when Disarmament and Tactful Line won to return $1,770.50 for a $2 ticket.

The record high in Canada was a combined payoff of $3,-635 by Noisette and Dancharo at Old Woodbine May 25, 1936, long before the Jockey Club was formed.

There were 23 $2 tickets sold on Monday's combination and two $3 tickets.

Puss 'N' Boots got back on the grass Monday and was the smash hit of the lawn party, running away to win the featured Variety Club Purse.

The "Big Cat," as trainer Frank Merrill Jr. calls him, never trailed in this gruelling 1% mile race and wasn't fully extended by jockey Avelino Gomez.

Owned by Roxie and Walter Glan, of Buffalo, Puss 'N' Boots will undoubtedly be the horse to beat in the $25,000 added Niagara Stakes Handicap, Sept. 3.

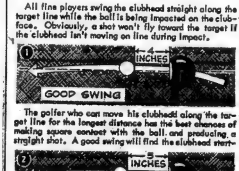
THE Arnold Palmer METHOD
Four-Time Winner of the Masters

A SUCCESS SECRET



All fine players swing the clubhead straight along the target line while the ball is being impacted on the club-face. Obviously, a shot won't fly toward the target if the clubhead isn't moving on line during impact.

The golfer who can move his clubhead along the target line for the longest distance has the best chances of making square contact with the ball, and producing a straight shot. A good swing will move the clubhead shorter ing its move along the target line about 4 inches before the ball (#1) and continuing a similar distance beyond. Some excellent swings may move from 5 inches (#2) to as much as 10 inches along the target line, while poor swings may touch it only for an inch or two (#3).

Visualize Illustration #2 as you swing. Also remember to take the clubhead back from the ball on your backswing along the same path you wish it to duplicate in the hitting area.

OTTAWA (CP) — Some of the world's finest young tennis players are ready to show their stuff at the Canadian Open junior championships — if the weather will let them.

Several of Monday's opening matches at the Rideau Lawn Tennis Club were postponed by an overnight rain which left the clay courts soaked well into the afternoon. Another downpour flooded the courts as the last matches in the day's shortened schedule were being played.

Foreign players led the way Monday while most of the top Canadian players who were entered in the closed championships last week did not play. They were advanced to third round action which begins today.

Two Mexican youngsters and a pair from New Zealand gave indications they may be around until the final stages of the championships.

Marcelo Lara of Mexico City, who has never been beaten in his age-class in matches around the world, advanced to the second round of the 18-and-under singles event by default over Glen Cushing of Deep River, Ont.

WINS TWICE

Fellow Mexican Luis Garcia of Merida, who, along with Lara and Jaime Fillat with Mexico's Davis Cup team, won two matches to advance to the third round. He beat Marcus Hollander of Montreal 6-0, 6-0 and then polished off Ron Sloan of Toronto 6-2, 6-2.

The New Zealanders, Graeme Elliot and Neil McAffer, also had a busy time.

Elliot advanced to the third round by beating Dave Ryan of Toronto, 6-4, 6-4 and Stephen Vezina of Montreal, 6-3, 6-1. Jim Behrend was disposing of McAffer 6-3, 6-1 to gain a berth in the second round.

Dave Hurst of Belleville upset Michel LeBlanc of Montreal 7-5, 6-3 in the first round, but fell 6-2, 6-2 to Tom Karp of Los Angeles in the second.

In the 16 - and - under class, John MacFarlane of Kingston scored a first-round 6-2, 6-4 victory over Blake Dunlop of Ottawa.

The tournament continues until Saturday.

One-Legged Polio Victim Swims Channel

DOVER, England (Reuters)—A French-Canadian polio victim swam the English Channel Monday with the ure of only one leg.

Robert Cossette, 37, made the crossing from Cap Gris Nez to St. Margaret's Bay, near Dover, in an official 19 hours and five minutes. Last week U.S. polio victim, John Starrett, 39, made the same crossing but took 12 hours and 45 minutes.

In the latter part of the swim, Cossette battled against 15-foot waves. Asked how he felt on arriving, he said: "Like hell" and that's where he went, after a steak dinner.

Cossette cannot use his polio-crippled leg in swimming — "it just floats." He walks with a limp, the result of polio at the age of three months.

Majority Favors Purchase

BOSTON (AP)—It was uncertain today whether American League club owners would meet to discuss the Columbia Broadcasting System purchase of 80 per cent of New York Yankees.

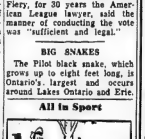
But this fourth was certain:

1. The sale became an accomplished fact last Friday after the necessary eight owners had voted their approval.

2. Cronin and the eight who approved are convinced there is nothing to fear from the entry of a radio-TV network into baseball ownership, nor is it a violation of anti-trust laws.

3. Allyn continues to demand that baseball withdraw from broadcasting rights and negotiations with the clubs in either league," Cronin said Monday.

"We in the American League want it understood we always have and will continue to decide all baseball matters in which we are concerned. We will make them on the basis of what is good for the league and the game of baseball.



"No communications organization will ever dictate to us, formulate our policy or influence our decisions."

Allyn says a valid vote would be one by two-thirds majority or the owner would have had to have 15 days' notice. Benjamin Fiery, for 30 years the American League lawyer, said the manner of conducting the vote was "sufficient and legal."

Cross-Canada Survey

Industry Preference by Provinces May Bring About 'Balkanization'

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

Taxpayers' dollars are being used by several provincial governments to provide a quiet behind - the - scenes reward for many industries that have settled within their borders.

In the increasing struggle by all provinces to attract new industries, widespread systems of preferences in provincial purchasing have developed.

Under the system, provincial governments will pay two to 10 per cent more for purchases from industries within their jurisdiction than they will when buying from other Canadian firms.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows only British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario claim to have no such preference.

It also shows only Manitoba's claim is likely to be accepted in other provinces with anything but incredulity.

Government and business officials in Ottawa and elsewhere both B.C. and Ontario of favoring their own industries at the expense of others, and even Manitoba gives contracts to its own industries, all else being equal in the bidding.

Under official policies in other per-cent more to its own industries, Saskatchewan five per cent, Quebec 10 per cent and New Brunswick up to 10 per cent.

PRACTICE DEFENDED

Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland have also set premiums, officials say, but give special considerations to bids from provincial firms.

There are no figures to show how much the preferential premiums cost the taxpayer each year. Gerard Levesque, Quebec's finance minister, estimates they add less than one per cent to his province's buying and since the actual preference paid on a contract might range from nothing to the full 10 per cent depending on how much outside firms underbid Quebec firms, it at all.

The premiums and the additional costs that can be involved are defended on grounds they encourage industries to set up plants within the province, resulting in more business and thus more local employment and tax revenues.

Opponents of the systems charge they will lead to large numbers of small factories with much duplication of facilities—meaning inefficiency, high production costs and loss of ability to compete internationally.

They also say the systems present a serious threat to national unity, with the ultimate prospect of the economic balkanization of Canada.

LOSES QUEBEC BUSINESS

Few businessmen, even those who report being squeezed out of sales in other provinces by the premiums, are ready to be quoted by name in commenting on them.

An Ontario manufacturer, who says Quebec's policy cost him $2,000,000 in lost contracts last year, adds:

"There's no use complaining —it's a fact of life. Why attack them and make them mad at us? The situation is bad enough as it is."

One executive who has spoken out in a newspaper interview is Ronald D. Southern of Calgary, president and general manager of Alberta Trailer Co. Ltd.

Speaking for our own company, we find it more difficult to sell today in some of Canada's provinces than we can. In fact, sell in such countries as Algeria and Venezuela.

"Certainly it is more difficult to sell in Canada than it is in the states of the U.S."

J. N. Turney, executive vice-president of Canadian Steel and Pipe Corp. in Regina, says: "We've lost contracts because of this type of policy—but we have had more instances where we simply weren't allowed to bid because we were told that the specification of the contract was being let."

Maitland Steinkopf, Manitoba's provincial secretary, says manufacturers there feel they are penalized in other provinces because they produce in Manitoba, and R. A. Bird, president of the Winnipeg Builders' Exchange, says Saskatchewan's preferential system has had a discouraging influence on Manitoba industry wanting to operate there.

Roy Parkhill Jr., sales manager of Parkhill Bedding and Furniture Ltd. of Winnipeg, says government preference for local firms still a serious obstacle in Alberta. Although Parkhill had two Alberta plants, preference still was a factor when Alberta firms became Parkhill's head office was in Winnipeg.

A Toronto electrical fixture company president, who asked that his name not be used says Quebec's policy, officially introduced last year, has cut him out of doing business with the Quebec government after 40 years because he is not a Quebec manufacturer.

Harry Hallworth, president of the Saint John, N.B. Board of Trade and of S. Symons and Co. Ltd., says his broom-cotton fig firm has been excluded from projects favoring locally produced goods.

"The principle is wrong and leads to break Canada up into small fragments. However, in the Atlantic provinces where the economy is below the national average there is some justification—more so than in the richer provinces."

Some governments are critical of the policies in other provinces.

George Jones, chairman of B.C.'s purchasing commission, expresses concern about Quebec's policy "which may well lead to the balkanization of Canada."

But he also says he has been promoting the idea of a preferential agreement among the four western provinces—so far without success. "What it would mean would be that each provincial government would give first preference to a western firm, subject to all other factors being equal."

Quebec officials say Ontario's industrial capacity has been built on protectionist policies and J. A. Bussieres, director of Quebec's industrial research services, notes wryly that when Ontario advertises Buy Canadian campaigns it does not, in Ontario, since 80 per cent of Canada's manufacturing industries are located there.

The Ontario government condemned preferential systems in the provincial legislature at the last session of the legislature, although the implementation of the Canadian market by preferential price treatment policies at the provincial level will render all provinces less competitive at home and abroad."

Premier Robert Bourassa (Liberal) of Quebec, however, supported the programs and most provinces using the systems say they have served to counteract complaints from manufacturing consumer or labor organizations.

Former Saskatchewan premier Woodrow Lloyd says the province's preference was "largely on the basis that we wanted to give encouragement to those industries actually factories who by virtue of their location in the province contributed something to the province both in taxe and in other ways."

Commerce Minister Levesque said of his province's preference system is "not another tariff—it is an incentive.

"We have to do something positive to protect our manufacturing industry. We're in bad need of boosting secondary industry."

A spokesman for the Nova Scotia Federation of Labor says provincial manufacturers should be given such factors as trade being a two-way street, she adds.

A P.E.I. government official says the cost of favoring provincial businesses is negligible, while it creates a few extra jobs.

In Newfoundland, the preferences are used to with new industries and officials say more than 20 firms have been founded that way since the island joined Confederation 15 years ago.

One of the largest is Golden Eagle Refining Co. Ltd., which operates a 25-spur oil-fired to supply all petroleum products to government vehicles and institutions before it even laid any pipeline.

One further—and perhaps ironic—twist was given the situation recently in Winnipeg when city council debated a motion to give firms in the metro area an advantage in bidding over outside concerns.

The motion was defeated 9 to 8.

Fifth Day
"Zulu" Director Also Co-Author-Producer of Epic.

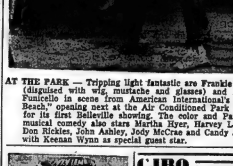
The only job in the world that can satisfy the complexities of Cy Endfield's nature is film directing, and in order to assure himself the best property and a free directional reign, he has lately become a producer.

Together with star Stanley Baker, Endfield has produced and directed "Zulu," which is now showing on its fifth smash hit day at two theatres, Centre, Trenton, and Park, Belleville, through Embassy Pictures release.

Filmed in Technicolor and Super-Technirama 70mm. the Joseph E. Levine presentation also stars Jack Hawkins, Ulla Jacobson, James Booth and Michael Caine.

Born in Scranton, Pennsylvania, Endfield was educated at Yale. Before entering the film industry he directed stage productions for the New York theatre. His knowledge of music led him to directing musical shows, including the choreography.

He began his film work in 1942 when he joined MGM in Hollywood and worked on documentary shorts. His work in this field established his reputation and gave him more important work, culminating in the tremendous impact of "Sound of My Fury." Cy then established as a screen classic.



He moved to Britain where his first major film was the "The Secret," followed by "Hell in the Pacific." This was Stanley Baker's first picture together with Endfield and was followed by "Hell Drivers" and "Sea Fury." Cy then directed the Jules Verne extravaganza "Mysterious Island," then "Hide and Seek." He has directed two plays: "The Teddy Bear" and "Come Blow Your Horn."

A prolific writer, Endfield has had numerous articles printed in the world's leading publications and has been responsible for scores of successful radio, television and screenplays. He co-authored "Zulu," with John Prebble, from Prebble's story.

Feature times: 7.10 and 9.45 p.m.

U. S. Advisers in Viet Nam Have Grown to 16,000 and Another 5,000 Authorized

WASHINGTON (CP)—United States military "advisers" in South Viet Nam have grown to 16,000 and another 5,000 are authorized.

Since Jan. 1, 1961, when the U.S. defence department first began issuing casualty lists, 181 of those soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines have died from "hostile" action. Eighteen are listed as missing and 1,200 have been wounded up to Aug. 10.

These men are members of the regular U.S. armed forces assigned to help South Vietnamese forces fight the Communist Viet Cong. Military spokesmen here are vague about their actual terms of reference but emphasize two points:

One is that the adviser's role principally is to help train the South Vietnamese. The other is that they do not command Vietnamese troops but make recommendations and take orders from the U.S. military assistance headquarters there.

They fly the U.S. helicopters supporting strikes against the Viet Cong. They are mixed in with South Vietnamese forces down to army squad level.

Originally, they had orders to return enemy fire only when shot at. But that stricture is understood to have eased by the boards in a theatre of war where advisers now accompany those who may be striking the first blow.

The advisory role is not new for members of the U.S. forces, although it appears to have expanded in South Viet Nam. U.S. advisers were attached to Chinese Nationalist forces down to the company level during the Korean War, ostensibly because the South Koreans lacked trained officers.

Girls Acclaim John Payne In Business for 30 Years

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When John Payne took his curtain call at the opening of Here's Love in Los Angeles, a shrill, unmistakably exultant cry rose from girls in the audience.

The reaction was satisfying to Payne for at least three reasons. The obvious one was that anyone actor with 30-odd years in the business would be pleased to evoke a Beatle-like response.

There was also the satisfaction of returning to the musical theatre from which he sprang and of succeeding in a role for which he "wasn't the type"—even though he originated it.

But most of all, he could savor the joy of scoring another success in a career that should have ended in a New York street three years ago.

The Virginia-born actor was crossing Madison Avenue in a twilight rain when a car struck him. He landed face down on the windshield, then was battered for 50 feet. He was knocked unconscious, his face was slashed, his eyes filled with glass and his left leg broken in five places. By all logic, his life—or at least his acting career—should have been over.

Surgical skill put him back together and he endured a long recuperation. Today the scars show faintly.

FEELS FINE NOW

"I feel great," he said in his Philharmonic Auditorium dressing room before a performance. "Oh, I may get a twinge in my bones in rainy weather, but otherwise I seem to be in as good shape as before."

Always an independent man, Payne took his time about returning to movies. His independence was bolstered by two season in Restless Gun, a television series of which he owns 50 per cent.

One job he wanted. He heard that Meredith Willson was writing a musical based on 34th Street and asked his agent to look into it. Payne had starred in the movie with Maureen O'Hara and the late Edmund Gwenn, who won an Oscar for his Santa Claus.

"I auditioned for the part several times," he said, "but they cast Craig Stevens for the New York company. They said it wasn't his type. Yet, I played the original role, but I guess they thought I had changed in the 17 years since the movie was made."

Payne doesn't give up easily, and he continued taking singing lessons, as he has done off and on over the years. His more recent fame in westerns and action films has obscured the fact that he first made his success as a singer.

DID 11 MUSICALS

"Goldwyn brought me out here in 1936 after I had been singing in Al Haves Abroad with Beatrice Lillie," he said. "I did Garden of the Moon at Warner Brothers as a role for Dick Powell, who was having a fight about the studio. Then I did all those musicals at Fox (with Betty Grable and Alice Faye)—and then we all."

When Here's Love was scheduled for a road tour, the producers thought of Payne. He broke in with three weeks in New York before the tour began.

"I felt uneasy at first because everybody in the show but me knew what they were doing," he said. "But I caught up with them and now it feels good."

He plans to stay with the tour until San Francisco in December, then consider other show offers that have resulted from his Here's Love success.

Meredith Macrae Acting In TV's Most Exacting School

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Pretty, blonde Meredith Macrae, 20-year-old daughter of Gordon and Sheila, is learning the acting business in one of television's most exacting schools, the ABC series My Three Sons.

Most series are filmed program by program, even though scenes are often shot out of sequence to save set-changing time.

My Three Sons is filmed in large, usually unrelated chunks. This is done under a special arrangement with the star, Fred MacMurray, who works on the show only for certain periods.

The rest of the regulars—the three boys who play the sons, co-star William Frawley and Meredith, the oldest son's fiancee—spend the rest of the time shooting scenes in which MacMurray does not appear.

"It does make your role a bit difficult," said Meredith. "You can't learn a whole show. Sometimes you'll be learning three different scenes for three different programs to be shot in the same working period."

Since last season, Meredith has become engaged to Richard Berger, a young mid-westerner whose career interest is business management. As the fiancee of Mike Douglas, played by Tim Considine, Meredith wears no engagement ring because, according to the story line, he can't afford one.

Off the set, she wears a pretty solitaire. She forgot to remove it for one scene and remembered the oversight with panic later.

"I was lucky," she said. "It was a long shot and I was sort of turned to one side, so my left hand didn't show at all."

"I used to think people were interested in me because of my parents," she admitted. "But now I don't feel that way. In fact, I'm glad I'm not working for the agent who represents them."

"That's not decided," she said. "But I'm going to marry Rick on Valentine's Day."

Burn Books In Indonesia

By WILLIAM GAISSON
JAKARTA (Reuters) — Indonesians, who are already facing a shortage of schoolbooks, have taken to burning those printed in the West because they might "poison" the minds of students.

The first batch of 500 was burned recently in a coffin-shaped box. More are to follow, according to officials of the Crush Malaysia Committee who are entrusted with the task.

The books and magazines in question were said to contain "liberal" thought in political science, and to expound economic principles which did not comply with Indonesia's own "guided economy."

They included United States news magazines, Louis Fischer's The Story of Indonesia and textbooks in English, German and Dutch.

The burning, Indonesians claimed, was part of a movement to "crush the influence of the old established forces in the field of education."

In its place, officials hope to build a new educational system to support the state's ideology, SUKARNO EXPLAINS

What needs to be destroyed, President Sukarno says, is "textbook thinking." Students and lecturers must be told education should be aimed at realizing the goals of the revolution.

Education officials have criticized university lecturers who still think they should be permitted to air their own views on various subjects. Officials feared this would lead to a head clash with the country's political manifesto.

Dr. Ali Sastroamidjojo, vice-chairman of the Provisional People's Consultative Assembly, said it is a recent feature that whatever was taught in a university should be dedicated to the cause of the revolution.

About 50 Americans teach science, engineering, medicine and agriculture in Indonesian schools and universities at present. There are also 15 teachers-in-exchange between Indonesian and American universities.

One of Indonesia's greatest achievements since gaining independence has been its progress in literacy. Indonesian volunteer teachers still travel to remote regions in what are described as "anti-illiteracy campaigns."

Thojib Hadiwidjaja, minister for higher education and science, said recently Indonesia had 38 state and 155 private universities.

But with this emphasis on education, Indonesia faces a shortage of teachers, school buildings and textbooks.

Observers here think Indonesia will now have to face another problem: That of a dissatisfied intelligentsia resulting attempts to restrict their thinking.

Business Briefs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
PLANS CHANGED

Chrysler Corp. Monday dropped plans to acquire Mack Trucks, thus ending a court injunction was filed in antitrust opposition to the acquisition. Federal Judge Dimitrius Weinbye in Newark, N.J., issued a preliminary injunction barring the acquisition on the request of the U.S. justice department, which contends the acquisition would tend to reduce competition in the truck field.

MAY STILL SELL WHEAT

W. C. McManus, chief commissioner of the Canadian Wheat Board said Monday he is "still optimistic" about the possibility of selling a Canadian wheat to Russia this year. He said if the Soviet Union follows up its pledge to double wheat purchases there is a "good possibility" it will buy Canadian wheat although not necessarily the amount it bought last year.

ANNOUNCE EXTENSION

Northern Electric Co. Ltd. announced plans Monday for an 18,000-square-foot extension to the office of its works in London, Ont. The company also announced that J. L. Armstrong, formerly design-control engineer at the London works, has been named to the new position of manager of the London laboratories.

Caracas: Town Deluxe

Caracas is a city of contrasts — magnificent buildings and shanty - town slums. In this story Paul Kidd, a specialist on Latin American affairs, describes the contrasts in the Venezuelan capital.

By PAUL KIDD

It was during the decade up to 1958, when the pudgy dictator Marcos Perez Jimenez ruled, that the capital of Venezuela exploded in architectural majesty.

Today it stands in glittering contrast to the rustic, mineral-rich country that surrounds and nourishes it.

With its ever-sprouting skyscrapers and leaping network of expressways — and the highest cost of living in the world, Caracas is a boom town deluxe.

Disturbingly, it is also a metropolis of squalor.

For beyond the opulence, on steep hillsides overlooking the sparkling city, wretched slums of packing-crate and sheet-iron shanties scar the landscape.

No one knows exactly how many people live in the barrios, as the slums are called, but it is generally conceded that at least one-third of Caracas' metropolitan population of 1,356,000 have homes there.

But Caracas hasn't always looked like this.

Up to 1940 it was a small city of white-washed stucco and red-tiled roofs, oozing in Spanish colonial charm, virtually unnoticed in the world.

Then, sparked by the hungry demands of the Second World War, Venezuela's rich oil fields began pumping at a record flow. And so the boom began.

$2,000,000 A DAY

Today royalties pour more than $2,000,000 into the national treasury every day.

As the city keeps on spreading, however, so do the contrasts of affluence and poverty. Only recently has the country felt the stabilizing effect of a growing urban middle class.

A superb six - lane highway, built during the Perez Jimenez era, links Caracas with Maiquetia International Airport 20 miles away on the hot, humid Caribbean shore.

The authorities so it knows climbs effortlessly for 3,000 feet from the waterfront to the verdant valley in which Caracas nestles.

The-lined, illuminated tunnels one more than a mile long carry the road through mountains. Three of the largest concrete bridges in the world swing it over huge ravines.

Travelling it, one glimpses soldiers guarding the bridges and tunnels against possible pro-Castro, Communist terrorist attacks.

MOVED AT GUNPOINT

But to thousands who live on the other side of the road, such invitations have little meaning.

For, living in a world of squalor, many of the barrio dwellers scarcely have enough money for bus fare downtown.

Towering alongside the shanties are more than 60 low-cost apartment buildings housing some 125,000 workers.

These colorful 15-storey dormito-shaped structures, known as bloques, were built under Perez Jimenez public housing program.

Many of the occupants were forced by the dictatorship, in some instances at gunpoint, to move from the barrios to the apartments.

Subsequently, some have rejected apartment living and have returned to their shacks and plots of land on the hillsides.

Since the fall of the dictatorship, the Democratic Action government has spent more than $210,000,000 on new, improved housing. But it does not appear to have had much impact on the barrios, which continue to fester and increase.

STRADDLES HIGHWAY

This is a glass - walled, 30-storey government office building complex whose twin-towers straddle a six-lane, multi-level highway that slices the old part of the city in two.

To construct it, the Perez Jimenez regime demolished 400 homes. Besides offices, the centre contains restaurants and shops. Four underground road levels and car parks run beneath it.

While the traffic stops and starts, and the horns continue blaring, vendors sell cups of coffee, razor blades and toys to the temper-fraying motorists.

There is no better place to escape the noise and clamor of downtown Caracas than from the gleaming $20,000,000 Hotel Humboldt, probably the biggest white elephant construction in Latin America's history.

Perez Jimenez had an obsession for building luxury hotels across the country, regardless of their economic sense.

HOTEL CLOSED

To reach it, one boards a cable car that whines up Pico Avila between the Caracas Valley and the sea.

The Humboldt, a tower of glass with 16 floors, has an indoor swimming pool, penthouse bar, tennis courts and even a skating rink.

Only one thing has been missing all along: customers.

Too inaccessible for all but the most determined tourists, and with huge maintenance costs, the hotel has finally been closed by the government.

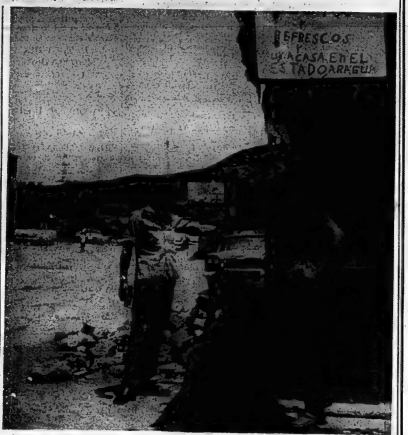
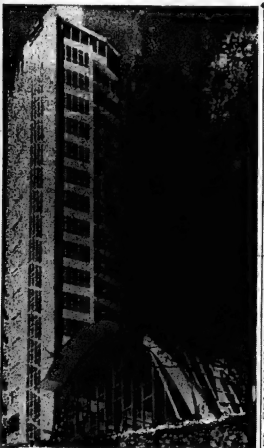
Spread over 60 acres in the heart of the city, the club has gardens, a swimming pool, a gymnasium, richly - furnished sitting rooms and guest accommodations which would put the finest hotels to shame.

It has a marble - covered courtyard, a huge ceremonial dining hall and museum-style rooms containing guns and cannons against a backdrop of sweeping 20-foot-high murals.



In a country where the military has traditionally made politics, the club was a gift of General Perez Jimenez to his fellow officers.

The cost: $30,000,000



From the entrance of this lush, ornate palace of military power, one has a view of the distant cardboard and tinplate shanties on the hillsides

On that spot, in a moment of truth, the past and future of Venezuela unfolds.

Tomorrow: New president has necessary instinct for compromise.

BLOQUES AGAINST BARRIOS — Bloques, 15 - storey, domino - shaped apartments built under a Marcos Perez Jimines housing program are losing out against barrios, slums of packing-crate and sheet-iron shanties. Many barrios occupants were forced to move at gunpoint during the Jiminez dictatorship. Now even the Democratic Action government of Raul Leoni is failing to prevent a return of the people to the shacks and plots of land on the hillsides overlooking the city. (CP Photo)

GLASS MONUMENT TO A SHATTERED GOVERNMENT — During the 10 years up to 1958, the dictatorship of Marcos Perez Jimines spent millions of dollars on construction of luxury hotels. This $20,000,000 glass tower called Hotel Humboldt stands useless and empty near the crest of a mountain because it was too inaccessible for tourists. (CP Photo)

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLER

In this article we will deal with charitable donations that are allowable as a deduction from income.

This is one part of the return that receives careful scrutiny by the income tax Assessors. In many cases a taxpayer will make a gift of money, that to him is a true charitable donation but it may be one that is not accepted as such by the income tax department. Such a disallowed gift could be the taxpayers assistance to an indigent family, such as buying some groceries or paying their heat and light etc.

Charitable donations to be allowable as a deduction from income must be of a nature where by the public as a whole derives a benefit. Donations made for religious, educational or community assistance are acceptable, providing the organization to which they are made is strictly Canadian.

Donations sent out of Canada are not allowable. Some organizations maintain an office in Canada just for the purpose of receiving donations, but the funds collected are used in another country. Such receipts attached to a return would be disallowed. I am referring mainly to money collected to pay for religious broadcasts in another country.

This does not apply to such organizations as CARE where the money is spent in Canada to send necessary items such as food and tools to the poorer people in foreign countries. If you are in doubt as to the validity of a receipt for income tax purposes contact your nearest income tax office or a letter to me will bring you correct information.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems please enclose a self-addressed five cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

QUESTION: I am assisting a neighbor's son to get through university by paying his fees. Can I claim this as a charitable donation?

ANSWER: No.

QUESTION: I escaped from a country behind the iron curtain some years ago. I send money to the U.S.A. for the Radio Free Europe Broadcasts, as I know of the good work this is doing. Can I claim this as a charitable gift?

ANSWER: No Donations must remain in Canada to be allowable.

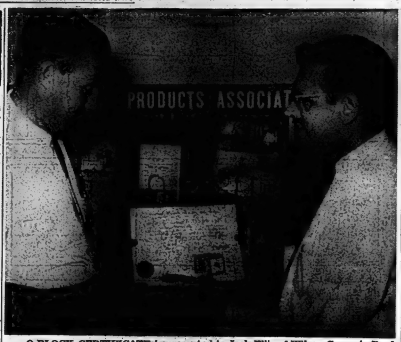
Construction Roundup

By Andy Turnbull

INTELLIGENCER BUILDING



The slots in the concrete on The Ontario Intelligencer building site are for steel beams. The building is being built on what engineers call a "structural slab" — concrete reinforced with steel below the actual floor slab. The structural slab is being anchored to the rock below by steel shafts going about eight feet into the rock. This type of construction is often used when architects get worried about "hydrostatic pressure." A modern building tends to float when water gets under it, and if water gets under just one corner, it can "float" that corner only and crack the floor. The structural slab will prevent this. But with a structural slab, the whole building might tend to float, if enough water gets under it. The rock anchors will hold everything in place.

Sidewalk superintendents all week have been wondering about the deep holes in the bottom of the foundation at the south end. The shallower of the two, near the middle of what will be the south wall, is the pit for the freight elevator. The deeper hole, west of the elevator shaft, is a sump to drain the first and to guard against any sudden flow of water into the basement area. Along the Pinnacle St. side, forms are being prepared for the bed for the big press.

The final slab (over the structural slab), for the building may be poured in about two weeks. It will contain about 250 cubic yards of concrete, all poured the same day, and if the bed for the press is poured the same day the total will be nearly 400 yards.

Jack Ellis of Wilson Concrete Products, tells us of a new quality control plan adopted by the National Concrete Masonry Association in the U.S. and by the National Concrete Products Association in Canada. Manufacturers whose concrete blocks come up to standards set by the associations are authorized to use the certified trade name "Q Block" provided they submit samples for testing by independent laboratories four times a year. The blocks are tested for compressive strength, water content, stability of dimensions and other qualities.

The new plan (Wilson's is one of the first few firms in Canada to qualify), is expected to boost the sales of concrete block by setting an international standard of quality. In the past some architects have been reluctant to specify concrete blocks for jobs in distant areas if they are uncertain of the quality of the blocks available in those areas. Now, as long as they specify "Q Block" they know what they will be getting.

Q-BLOCK CERTIFICATE is presented to Jack Ellis of Wilson Concrete Products Ltd. by T. C. Thompson of the National Concrete Products Association. The certificate authorizes Wilson Concrete Products to market concrete blocks under the trade name "Q-Blocks".

Because the trade name is registered, anyone selling substandard "Q Block" is letting himself in for a lot of trouble. Both associations plan to raise the general quality of blocks until all their members are able to qualify as "Q Block" manufacturers.

SMITH'S GARAGE

The grease pit was poured yesterday in the new garage at the Smith Transport terminal. Plumbers get a run at the drainage system now, for two or three days until the forms can be removed from the grease pit. Then she area will be backfilled and it will be ready for the floor. Meanwhile, superintendent Donald Newton is starting work on the mezanine floor, near the front of the building. He says it is a complex job and he will not make a guess at when he will be ready to pour.

STEVENSON FORD SALES

Last block in the service section of the new Stevenson Ford Sales building will be laid about the end of this week, according to Jack Wickens of Hugh Murrily Construction. Then bricklaying contractor Dawson Douglas has a few more to lay out front around the showroom area and one inside wall between the service area and the sales department. Work on the inside wall cannot start until the floor has been poured and work on the floor will start as soon as possible. Plumbing, drains and an exhaust system have to be installed before the floor can be poured. Steel joints and decking for the roof are supposed to be here by the end of the month, and the roof can be dropped on in a day or so.

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL SCHOOL

Walls are getting up to ceiling height now at the Sir Mackenzie Bowell School near Sidney Street. Dick Wickering of Miron Wiggers says the precast columns will be in place by the end of this week or the beginning of next week. Prestressed roof slabs will come a couple of weeks after the columns. Frank Edwards, foreman of the masons on the job, says his men will be through the main part in about three weeks.

Acme electricians are working on the site now as Slack plumbers have most of their work done.

WATER MAIN

Two of three men injured in a blasting accident more than a week ago on the Sidney St. water main have been released from hospital now. The third, William Simpson of Warkworth, may be out by the end of the week according to Norm Lightfoot.

The blast occurred when a stub end of dynamite did not go off in a blasting hole. Drilling again in the same hole, the men were injured when it went off. None of the injuries was serious, Lightfoot says. One man was in hospital overnight, another for a few days.

Nearly finished with the job, Lightfoot's men took the main around a sharp corner at the foot of Sidney St. yesterday and are now working parallel to the railway tracks, just north of them. About 13 yards of concrete were poured around the pipe at each sharp turn, to anchor it against the thrust of the water.

SEWER JOBS

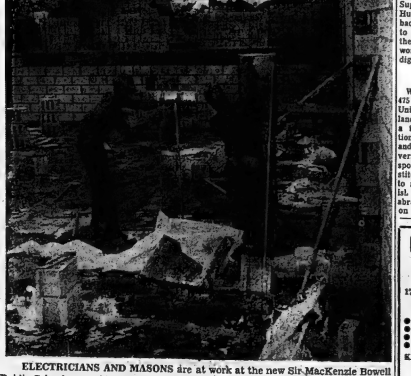
Beaver Construction should be finished by the end of the week on Lemoine St., where they have about 300 feet of sewer to lay from Tracey St. to just north of Maple. Another crew, working off the end of Jackson Drive toward the Fahey St. main will take a couple of weeks to get there, according to Archie Savery.

Next week the crew from Lemoine St. will be working on College, running a 10-inch sanitary line from Fahey St. to North Front. It will be about the fourth line running into the manhole on College at Fahey. The street has been torn up every year for the past four years and it will probably be torn up again next year - - for water main.

RICHARD ELLIS PRINTING

Richard Ellis will move Wednesday into the new building behind the Foley machine shop. Construction boss Herb Seamen laid tile in the office yesterday and other Foley employees are just finishing up details. Frank Foley says the lighting in the building now varies from 100 foot-candles underneath the fluorescent fixtures to about 60 foot candles between them. He plans to install three more rows of lights, to bring the whole work area up to the 100 foot-candles level.

GAS STATION - TIRE SHOP



Roy Dort of Harron Construction has the basement walls poured and waterproofed for the new gas station-tire store at Belleville Plaza. He hopes to be able to backfill today and get the footings for the rest of the building started before the end of the week. He couldn't start the footings today because some of them are over the area being backfilled now.

LIQUOR STORE

Prestressed floor slabs went on last Wednesday at the new liquor store site on Station St. Superintendent Don Jackson of Hugh Murray Construction is backfilling today and he hopes to have the masons at work by the end of the week. Men are working in the basement now, digging ditches for drainage.

MEET AT SCHOOL

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Some 475 students from Canada, the United States and one from Holland registered here Monday for a two-week interfaith, international summer school of liturgy and church music at the University of Windsor. The school, sponsored by the Gregorian Institute of America, is designed to assist those engaged in parish activities with a knowledge abreast of the latest legislation on the second Vatican council.

ELECTRICIANS AND MASONS are at work at the new Sir MacKenzie Bowell Public School near Sidney Street. The prestressed concrete roof will be on in three or four weeks.

Four RCAF Members Still Stationed in Turkey to Aid Air Force With Sabre Jets

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Four members of the RCAF still are stationed in Turkey to assist the Turkish Air Force in operation of Canadian-built Sabre jet fighters, informed sources said Monday.

Authorities said they have no definite knowledge that Canadian-made Sabres took part in Turkey's air attack on the northwest coast of Cyprus a week ago, but that this was a possibility.

The Sabres which participated in the attack on Greek-Cypriot positions in Cyprus reportedly flew from Eskisehir, where two of the Canadian airmen are stationed. The two other RCAF members are in Ankara, the Turkish capital.

Under Canada's mutual aid program to NATO allies in Europe, this country gave Turkey 107 Sabres and the same number to Greece. Up to 1959, Canada had supplied 30 per cent of the material strength of the Greek Air Force and 17 per cent of the Turkish. In money, these contributions amounted to $153,000,000.

External Affairs Minister Martin announced in the Commons July 9 that Canada suspended indefinitely all arms shipments to Turkey and Greece when the Cyprus crisis arose.

The RCAF announced at the same time that its logistics liaison office in Athens was closed June 25 after 10 years of assisting the Greek Air Force in maintenance of Canadian-made Sabres.

The counterpart liaison office in Turkey still is functioning, however, mainly because Turkey is continuing to use Sabres while Greece is replacing its Sabres with more modern planes.

The United States, meanwhile, had delivered to Greece and Turkey Canadian-made F-104 jet fighter-bombers during the Cyprus crisis.

Canada, though sharing in the costs of this program, has refused to make direct F-104 deliveries to the two nations.

STARTED IN 1951

In 1951, Canada and the U.S. agreed to produce 140 F-104s at Canadair Limited, Montreal, for NATO mutual aid programs. The U.S. put up $100,000,000 for this program, Canada $50,000,000.

When the Cyprus crisis broke in March, Canada and the U.S. agreed that all early deliveries of F-104s should be in the name of the U.S. only. Production is scheduled to continue until October, 1963.

When the United Nations force in Cyprus began operations March 27, the reconnaissance squadron of the Royal Canadian Dragoons began to patrol with British units the northwest coast area in the vicinity of Kokkina and Mansoura, villages held by encircled Turkish-Cypriots.

However, the Swedes later took over this area which was hit a week ago by Turkish Air Force jets in support of the beleaguered Turkish-Cypriots. An uneasy ceasefire now is in effect between Cyprus and Turkey.

A NATIONWIDE QUALITY CONTROL PROGRAM

FOR THE CONCRETE MASONRY INDUSTRY

WHAT IS Q BLOCK? –

Q Block is a new concept in the concrete block industry. It represents the first national standard for concrete block established by the industry itself.

HOW IS Q BLOCK QUALITY MAINTAINED? –

HOW DOES Q BLOCK BENEFIT BUILDERS? –

Since Q Block is a national standard for the entire block industry, it means that the users of block can specify this versatile material with full assurance that it meets high specifications everywhere. It is nationally uniform in structural excellence.

Architects and Builders now have in this building material, beauty and versatility, a distinctive texture for handsome wall effects both inside and out. Complete fire safety, sound absorption, self-insulation are other inherent qualities.

MAKARIOS PROMISES FOOD TO TURKS

Veiled Threat Given Students Of S. Viet Nam

Told They May Be Drafted Into Army

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Khanh broadcast a veiled threat to Vietnamese students today that they stand a chance of being drafted into the army if they demonstrate against the government.

The students plan a protest meeting late today which is expected to denounce the Khanh government. Police and a battalion of paratroopers reinforced by armored cars have been put on alert for trouble.

Other student meetings, possibly including street demonstrations, have been planned for the coming week.

Khanh told students they will be permitted to go on studying, but if they wish "to participate in the struggle of the whole Vietnamese people, the armed forces will welcome them "with open arms."

Authorities also braced for possible anti-government demonstrations by Buddhists. As a precaution, they quietly disarmed a monument on an isle president Kennedy in this tense capital.

AWAIT ANNIVERSARY

Authorities tensely awaited Thursday's observance of the first anniversary of the bloody pagoda raids when hundreds of Buddhist monks and nuns were rounded up by security forces of the late president Ngo Dinh Diem. A forewarning of trouble came Monday when Buddhist students staged an anti-government rally in Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon.

By removing the Kennedy monument, officials apparently also hoped to forestall possible action by Saigon student groups, which had threatened to pull down the big, white monument, a French war memorial last month.

Government officials are reported to be anxious to counteract Communist claims that the Khanh government is a puppet.

Officials said the monument was removed with the concurrence of the U.S. embassy.

Washington, meanwhile, continued to back Khanh. Henry Cabot Lodge, declared Thursday the country will not abandon South Viet Nam. Victory will be "slow and hard, but not impossible," Lodge said in Hawaii on a tour of allied capitals to explain U.S. policy in Southeast Asia.

REDS CELEBRATE

In Saigon, paratroop reinforcements and armored personnel carriers patrolled the streets with the lookout for a possible strike by the Communist Viet Cong, which is observing an anniversary of its own today.

Nineteen years ago, Ho Chi Minh said, the Red guerrillas started a revolt and seized Hanoi, now the capital of North

Countries Told Not To Use Sabres

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Martin said Tuesday Canada has told Greece and Turkey that their Canadian-built Sabre jet fighters must not be used in any Cyprus operations.

He said Canada has supplied Greece and Turkey with 107 Sabres each under NATO's military assistance program on the condition that the planes be used to strengthen the alliance's capacity to deter or resist aggression.

"The implications of this condition in the present circumstances are being brought again to the attention of the governments involved," Mr. Martin said in reply to a Commons question by T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader.

Prime Minister Pearson said in reply to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker that Canada proposed a special meeting of NATO foreign ministers to discuss the "very delicate and dangerous", Cyprus situation But majority of NATO members felt such a meeting shouldn't be held at this particular moment.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the "deteriorating" Cyprus situation and Greek and Turkish withdrawal of some of their military forces from NATO command are "full of menace to the continuing integrity" of NATO.

Defence Minister Hellyer confirmed, in a reply to Leon Balcer (PC — Trois-Rivieres), that there still are RCAF members stationed in Turkey to assist the Turkish Air Force in Sabre operations.

He said RCAF officers were stationed in both Greece and Turkey to facilitate the supply of Sabre spare parts. The office in Greece had been closed some time ago but the one in Turkey was kept open for liaison with both the Greek and Turkish air forces.

There were an RCAF squadron leader, two sergeants and two Canadian civilian aircraft technicians in Turkey. The officer had been instructed to cease visits to the Greek and Turkish air forces "pending further developments."

Mr. Hellyer said the tours of duty of the five men will expire in the next few months and that they will not be replaced unless the Cyprus situation is stabilized.

Mr. Hellyer said Mr. Martin repeated that all military as-

Play To Packed Galleries

by BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Playing to packed public galleries, the Commons flag debate rolled through its 10th day Tuesday with Conservative speakers again dominating the floor and Liberals continuing their "filibuster" interjections.

Only new development was the entry into the debate of the first cabinet minister to speak on the issue since Prime Minister Pearson introduced the maple leaf flag proposal June 16.

Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp accused the Conservatives of conducting an obvious filibuster and branded their demand for a national plebiscite on the flag as irresponsible.

"I can imagine what Sir John A. Macdonald would have done with the idea of a plebiscite on Confederation," he said. "Sir John A. was a more sensible man; he knew that these great decisions were settled in Parliament — and that is where this one is going to be settled."

Mr. Sharp called on Opposition Leader Diefenbaker to abandon his "negative role" and let the issue go to a vote.

GALLERIES FILLED

All afternoon and evening the 400 seats in the public galleries were filled with attentive audiences and at several points there were lineups in the corridors waiting for empty seats.

Tuesday's speeches brought the total in the debate to 78— 47 Conservative, 20 Liberal, 4 NDP, three Creditiste and five Social Credit members.

Mr. Sharp said Conservative speakers have implied that the

Providing Food World's Largest Industry Says CNE Head in Opening Fair

"Providing food for the people of tomorrow still remains the world's largest industry".

Canadian National Exhibition president, Jack Fraser, thumbed that statement in a brief address to a rain-splashed grandstand audience at the Fair Grounds last night.

Mr. Fraser officially opened the Fair backgrounded by a galaxy of political, municipal and district dignitaries.

He congratulated the Fair Board on the "fine strides made by "this Class 'A' Fair".

"It is not only a benefit to agriculture but also to consumers in general" he said.

"We, in Canada" he said, "do not realize that one-third of the world's population is hungry. We are helping produce, through agriculture the greatest commodity of all, food.

He compared Canadian agricultural production to that of several countries he visited on a recent world tour.

"Australia and New Zealand" he said "were among the best. Overflowing and increasing populations in such countries as India, China and Japan mount many problems regarding food production.

"He discovered," he said, "that Canada and the United States enjoy the highest standard of living of any countries in the world, because of their agricultural production.

The food situation in other countries, Mr. Fraser said, throws out to Canada the greatest challenge of all. "We must produce not only for ourselves but for those countries which are not so fortunate."

On a truck-borne stage in front of an almost quagmire track he presented Wardens Ken Hicks and Tom Burnside of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties; members of the Ontario Legislature Clarke Rollins, Hastings East and Elmer Sandercock, Hastings West.

Also introduced were Mayor Glen Herrington of Napanee, H. J. McFarland of Picton and Jack Ellis of this city as well as Fair Board directors, Dr. Harry Burns, Will Reid and Don Spencer, and the new Hastings County Agricultural Representative, Douglas Tipper.

There were no speeches other than that of Mr. Fraser.

Mr. Cooper is a rancher with 40,000 acres and Mr. Gundlock is a well-known western cattle and sheep producer.

However, Gall Chapman's majorettes and the band of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment gave outstanding performances on a rain-washed patch of the infield.

Felled By Weed Killer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of persons were routed from their homes by noxious fumes Tuesday night after a 55-gallon drum of underwater weed killer exploded at a chemical plant.

More than 100 residents were treated at jammed hospital emergency rooms for eye and nose irritations, cramps and nausea.

The fumes, from a chemical called acrolein, billowed from open doors and windows into the heavily populated, mostly Negro neighborhood. Mass traffic jams caused by curius onlookers hampered firemen and police trying to reach the area in gas masks.

Herbert Friedman, president of Southern Still Creek Chemical Company, where the explosion occurred, said the chemical fumes were not poisonous.

Friedman said he heard an explosion about 8 p.m. He said the chemical apparently built up pressure inside the container, blowing the top off and spewing snow-like size powder all over the store room.

Within minutes, the fumes blanketed the area around the plant.

FIREMEN OVERCOME

Firemen, wearing gas masks and rubber suits, entered the four-storey building to cap the drum. Many were overcome when fumes seeped through loose masks.

All available ambulances were called to take overcome firemen, policemen and residents to hospitals for treatment.

Acrolein, said Friedman, normally is stable. He said he did not know what caused the explosion.

APPROVAL NOT GIVEN

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer said Tuesday he is not aware that military cannon will be manufactured by matches depicting the government's proposed maple leaf flag design. Replying in the Commons to Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington South), he said if this is being done through the use of canteen funds it would be under the jurisdiction of the officers of the messes involved. It was not being done with the approval of the federal government.

Blockaded Folk Await Delivery With Scepticism

Cypriot Plans to Fly To Moscow to Get Arms

NICOSIA (AP) — Turkish-Cypriots waited with scepticism today for President Makarios to fulfil his promise to ship food, fuel and medicine to the blockaded Turkish - Cypriot areas.

A Turkish-Cypriot spokesman welcomed the pledge as "an encouraging first step." But he accused Makarios, a Greek-Cypriot, of breaking agreements before and said, "therefore, we will have to wait and see."

Makarios's pledge to the UN command Tuesday to allow movements into some badly-needed communities could eliminate a source of trouble, but other developments indicated the Cyprus crisis could come to a boil again.

After another round of talks with Greek leaders, Cyprus Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou disclosed in Athens Tuesday night that he would fly to Moscow to negotiate an arms deal with the Soviet Union.

Turkish Premier Ismet Inonu warned that his country would act again if the Greek-Cypriots renew attacks on Turkish-Cypriots. The new warning came in a message to heads of government released by Turkey's UN delegation in New York.

HOLD MANOEUVRES

Turkey underscored Inonu's words with a series of air and naval manoeuvres off eastern Turkey, 150 miles from Cyprus.

Canada, meanwhile has reminded Turkey and Greece that their Canadian-built Sabre jet fighters must not be used in any Cyprus operation.

In Nicosia, Lt.-Gen. George Grivas told reporters that Greek-Cypriots have captured Turkish documents indicating Turkish rifles are massing at three to four strategic points along the border at Lapkah (North Borneo).

In Kuala Lumpur the government went ahead with plans for the mobilization of the reserve army, believed to number 10,000. War executive committees" will be set up in the 11 states of the Malayan Peninsula.

The three southern states of Johore, Negri Sembilan and Malacca have already been declared "security areas" where persons carrying arms are liable to death by hanging.

Malaysia Hunts Invaders

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) Fresh fighting broke out today between Malaysian government forces and Indonesian guerrillas in the Pontian swamps of southeast Malaysia, a defence ministry spokesman reported here.

One more Malaysian soldier was slightly wounded, he said, bringing the Malaysian casualty list to two wounded in action.

The spokesman said that "Indonesians, or local Indonesian supporters, were captured, but declined to say how many.

Malaysian Federation forces have clashed over the last three days with a group of 30 or 40 Indonesian guerrillas who landed Monday in the Pontian swamps, 90 miles north of Singapore.

Malaysian forces claim to have shot dead two guerrilla and captured more than 16 in the clashes, in which small arms, mortars and grenades were used.

Defence Minister Tun Abdul Razak announced today after a cabinet meeting that "the situation is well under control. We have got most of them."

As the mop-up action continued, authoritative sources at Jesselton said Indonesian guerrillas were massing at three to four strategic points along the border at Lapkah (North Borneo).

In Kuala Lumpur the government went ahead with plans for the mobilization of the reserve army, believed to number 10,000. War executive committees" will be set up in the 11 states of the Malayan Peninsula.

Watusi Refugees Hack Two UN Men to Death

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP) — An account of savagery and murder has been brought back by a Congolese driver who witnessed the death of two United Nations officials on a mercy mission to a Watusi refugee camp.

The driver reported to UN authorities Tuesday that the two Frenchmen were hacked with machetes and hit with a burst of machine-gun fire by a mob of Watusi warriors and Congolese rebels.

As he crawled hurtled itself on them, Jean Pilcque, 33, head of the Bukavu branch of the International Labor Organization, pleaded:

"Gentlemen, we are here to help you and not for anything else. . . .

A Congolese rebel then fired four dum-dum shots at Pilcque and his companion, Francois Preziosi, 43, a Bukavu representative of UN High Commission for Refugees.

Pilcque and Preziosi had gone to the encampmnt just north of Bukavu on Lake Kivu in the eastern Congo to free 120 refugees held by authorities and investigate reports of threatened reprisals against Watusi refugees.

The tall and fierce Watusis had been fleeing Rwanda since 1959 when their former slaves, the Bahutu, gained control of the country. Some 60,000 Watusis are in The Congo.

George Yogolero, chauffeur of the UN officials, said the two men had been warned that the Watusis sympathized with Communist-supported rebels in the area, but that they insisted on carrying out their mission.

As they approached the camp, Yogolero said, they saw men armed with submachine-guns, rifles and gasoline bombs lurking along the roadside.

After continuing a third of a mile, the car was stopped by a group of the car, wielding machetes.

"The crowd began to howl, including the women and children who were a short distance away," the driver said. He stepped out of the car, wielding a white handkerchief.

Yogolero said he tried to tell the rebels he was a Red Cross driver and that the French were there to help. He was told to shut up. Some blamed the United Nations for The Congo's troubles.

The crowd ordered Yogolero to kneel and several men searched the UN officials. When they found no guns on the officers, the crowd rushed at the French men.

Yogolero escaped with only a knife wound in the arm.

Try to Put Satellite in Place To Broadcast Olympic Pictures

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) The Syncom 3 communications satellite rocketed today toward an intended stationary orbit high above the Pacific Ocean where it would be in position to relay pictures to North America of the Tokyo Olympics.

A powerful TAD—thrust-augmented Delta — rocket burst from its launch pad at precisely 8:15 a.m. EDT to propel the complex payload toward a planned elliptical path ranging from 700 to 22,300 miles high.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration hoped to know within an hour whether this preliminary "transfer" orbit was achieved.

Once in that orbit, Syncom 3 must execute a number of intricate maneuvers over a 12-day period to change orbit and shape and finally to put the world's first truly synchronous (stationary) satellite.

The payload's final target area is a point 22,300 miles above the intersection of the Equator and the International date line. It would appear to Orbiter Indians below because it would be travelling at a speed matching that of the earth's rotation below.

To dramatize space communications, U.S. and Japanese industrial and government about $600,000 to prepare facilities to televise the Oct. 10-24 Olympic Games from Tokyo to the United States.

Canadian and European broadcasting companies plan to invest nearly $300,000 to speed the transmissions from the United States to their viewers.

Admit Family To Hospital After Mishap

TRENTON — A 32-year-old woman from Keyville, N.Y., her husband, two small children and the family dog were all admitted to the emergency ward of the Trenton Memorial Hospital shortly after seven o'clock last night. They were involved in an accident on Highway 401, three miles west of No. 33 Highway.

Provincial Police Constable Allan Tremeer from the Brighton detachment, who investigated said the Liggon car was towing another auto owned by the Liggons when the tow chain went out of control. Both vehicles ended up in the ditch, with the car in which the American family was riding landing upside down.

Total damage to the two cars was $1,500. The Liggon family are treated for minor injuries and released from hospital. "Fido" was also given a clean bill of health.

NO INJURIES

A two-vehicle collision on the Dundas Street hill yesterday p.m. yesterday afternoon resulted in $300 damage to those vehicles but no injuries were sustained by the two drivers.

Police say a truck operated by Bodden Brothers, owner of Campbellford, and operated by Reginald Rozell of Campbellford, was travelling east behind by a car driven by James Clyde Boughan of Pine Acres. The truck slowed to negotiate a traffic line on the bridge when Mr. Boughan approaching behind the truck applied a load brakes. His car slipped on the pavement and struck the truck which was carrying a load of lumber at the time.

A passing traffic tie-up resulted and the cars were backed up for miles.

The court heard evidence from Const. S. Vickers that two stamp albums, 30 to 40 sheets of Canadian mint stamps and five day covers had been removed from the Hinton home on the night of Aug. 4. The albums, the day covers and some valuable stamps were recovered in Toronto stamp dealers' shops on Aug. 6th.

The youth also admitted taking 12 records from the Hinton home on July 31. The value of these did not exceed $50 and six records have been recovered.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills remanded Frud'homme in custody for one week before sentencing and asked for a presentence report from probation officer, Dennis Atkins. Frud'homme will be sentenced in Belleville court next Tuesday.

PLEADS GUILTY

In magistrate's court at Trenton on Tuesday, Eric Perry of Trenton, pleaded guilty to the theft of two barrels of beer from the Molson Brewer Company and was remanded in custody for one week. Mag. Harold T. Wills called for a pre-sentence report.

Constable S. Vickers told the court Perry had come to the police station himself and admitted that when in custody the officer was investigating the factory's loss of the barrels. Perry had arranged payment to sell the silver bars, (replacement value, $300) for approximately $100 to a Toronto firm but had received no money.

Ken Charlton Tops in Golf Tournament

TRENTON — K. Charlton, of the Trenton Golf Club, captured top honors at the second annual RCAF Invitation Men's Golf Tournament held on the weekend, although pushed two extra holes before getting his victory.

Charlton and R. Brown, of Kingston's Cataraqui Golf Club, tied for first low gross in "A" Flight with scores of 75. Charlton bested Brown on the second extra hole to take first, dropping Brown to second.

In "B" Flight, C. S. Olsen shot an 81 to win first low gross while first low net went to E. Oxford, also of the RCAF club.

L. White, RCAF, took "C" Flight's low gross prize with a 92 and low net honors went to J. Goodwin, also of the RCAF.

Alarm Proved To Be False

TRENTON — Two trucks and men from the Trenton Fire Department responded in quick order yesterday afternoon when the alarm connecting the Bowes-Coulter plant with the fire hall went off. The alarm proved to be a false alarm but a firm executive said it was comforting to know such efficiency service was available if needed.

Just as the factory alarm came in, fireman "Mo" Mitts was engaged in putting out a fire in the back seat of a car owned by Mr. Arthur Harvey, of 11 Bleecker Hill Hostel. Minor damage to the seat resulted.

Extend Hospitality To S. A. Officers

Corporal and Mrs. E. J. Brown of R.R. 1, Carrying Place have had the pleasure of entertaining Mrs. Brown's parents, from Poole, Dorset, England, Senior Major and Mrs. C. B. Swansbury, retired Salvation Army officers who are to sail August 21st on the Carmania to England.

Mrs. Brown's parents have been officers in the S.A. for 40 years and six of these have been served in H.M. Prison at Dorchester, capital town of Dorset. The eldest son, W. Gordon Swansbury is a Major of the S.A. and is principal of the S.A. Tuke Blind School. Notable visitors to the school this year have been the Governor's wife, Mrs. MacDonald (a Canadian) and the Emperor of Ethiopia,Haile Selassie.

Mr. Brown has taken the visitors by car to view Niagara Falls during their initial visit to Canada and to see many of various lakes of this great country. In these three months they have been entertained by Belleville S.A. and just prior to Captain and Mrs. Tuckaberry leaving for West Toronto appointment the parents conducted a service and also filled the breach receiving visitors at the open meeting at the Plaza.

On Sunday many of the congregation wished the visitors a bon voyage back to England, appreciating the fellowship of this couple.

DAY'S END at St. John's Ambulance Fair HQ sees Mrs. Margaret Reed (left) and Mrs. Gladys Wilson tallying total of day's mercy missions.

St. John Ambulance Group Fills Needed Role at Fair

They are the local St. John Ambulance Brigade contingent, unpaid, unsung but far from unneeded volunteers at the community's biggest annual event.

Staffing the Fair round-the-clock, men and women of the brigade patrol the acres and acres of fairland as personal safety checks against mishap.

Their headquarters also is the busiest spot betimes on the Fairgrounds.

However, it also is likely the smallest.

The brigadeers work from a small house-trailer loaned them by a friend. That, and a tent pitched alongside, is their whole emergency base of operations.

However, it is probably the most valued patch of ground at the fair, as a quick look at its services in operation will convince.

Take Monday night, for instance.

Crowded, the Fairgrounds turned out a succession of persons suffering shock and minor injuries. All were sent along to the St. John area for attention. While the men patrolled the nearby motorcycle track—and played significant parts in a series of pile-ups, brigade women tended to the ill and exhausted and hunted the parents of lost children.

There were ancillary chores too.

For instance, in the middle of it all Monday night, the lights failed in the ladies' washroom beneath the stands. One of the St. John Ambulance women stood duty by the door cautioning off males, making the wrong choice of locations in their haste.

However, the seriousness of the brigade's role also appears to be something taken for granted by the public at large.

Dystrophy Taggers Obtain Over $800

Forty-four taggers collected $800.05 Friday and Saturday, for the Belleville and District Muscular Dystrophy Association. Sponsored by the city fire department, the organization's two days of tag sales raised money which will be used to help muscular dystrophy patients in and around Belleville and for the support of research into the disease.

It's a lot of money because during two days at this time of year, according to Ted Wessels of the Belleville Fire Department, one woman per identity is being kept secret — paid $20 for a single tag bought through an internediary.

The Association has a booth beneath the grandstand at the Belleville Fair, and will sell tags and accept donations at the booth while the fair is on.

Special Day For Residents Of Blind Home

Sunday was a special day for the residents and staff of Quinte-St. Lawrence Hall, Kingston, as it was on that date in 1954 that the first residents moved into this newly-completed home for the blind to serve this six-county district. During the ten years a total of seventy-five blind people have made this residence their home for varying periods. Among these residents were many blind from Belleville, Trenton and Hastings County. Also during this period ten people from this Quinte-St. Lawrence district spent several weeks for intensive teaching or training and then returned to their homes or moved into occupations for the blind. This building is not only a residence for blind people who need a home but it is the C.N.I.B. service centre for the area.

The home operates under a Board of Governors made up of representatives from the seven C.N.I.B. advisory boards in the district. The full board meets four times each year but the executive committee meets monthly except for July and August. At these meetings the board checks over the monthly accounts, hears reports from the chairmen of standing committees and the superintendent and generally sees that the building is kept in good condition and that the home operates smoothly.

Members of the Board of Governors from Belleville and Hastings County are Dr. H. E. Welch, Mr. and Mrs. George Wishart and Miss Hazel Farley.

At present there are twenty-four in residence, five of whom are from Belleville, Trenton and Hastings County. Mr. P. I. Timmins, District Field Secretary for the C.N.I.B., has been the superintendent of Quinte-St. Lawrence Hall during the ten years of operation. The first matron was Mrs. Elsie Morris of Kingston. While the present matron is Mrs. Anne Nicholson, with Mr. Robert Nicholson as janitor. Mrs. Nicholsons are from Belleville.

Cheese, Butter Fair Display Best in Years

Belleville district cheese and butter makers shared a $550 prize list this week as the 100th anniversary of the cheese industry in Ontario was observed with a colorful cheese exhibit at the Belleville Fair.

Ten district cheese makers, and seven butter manufacturers had entries in the dairy display set up in the manufacturer's building on the fairgrounds.

On display are June and July, regular and block cheese, as well as stiltons. Prizes were also offered for the best display by factories.

Starting with last year, a concerted effort is being made by local dairy officials to revive the dairy show as a fair feature. Until last year there had been no cheese display at the fair for 38 years.

CHEESE WINNERS

Winners in the cheese display class were Harold Elliott of Foxboro; Roy Huffman, Bronk; E. Reid of Ewergreen and Charles Peake, UEL factory at Adolphustown.

Butter making prizes were won by Glen Roy Creamery of Belleville; Canada Packers at Bancroft; Belleville Creamery and Madoc Creamery.

Adding to the fair dairy show is the display of a century old butter making bowl hand carved from maple burl, along with pound and quarter pound butter print patterns.

Widely famed quarter-horses, the work horses of the cattle country, are put through their paces in Tuesday's fair judging. The quarter-horse—named for its speed over the quarter mile stretch — is favored by ranchers for its ability in cattle herding.

Team of dappled beauties stand on the alert during judging of the Percheron class yesterday at Belleville Fair. Minutes later the rains came and judging was discontinued for the day.

Cattle Judging On Schedule Despite Rain

The weather didn't exactly co-operate but cattle judging went on as scheduled at Belleville Fair yesterday despite the afternoon downpour.

Holsteins had their big day on Monday with the Black and White Day show being held.

Tuesday Ayrshires, Guernseys and Jerseys took over, but most of the judging took place indoors because of the rain. The classes were judged in the junior building and in a make-shift area behind the cattle in the Holstein barn. Holstein judging is continuing today.

Thursday the last day of the fair will see beef breeds judging, while sheep and swine are also being judged today and tomorrow.

Excellent Horse Show For Visitors to Fair

Mechanization may be taking over on the farm, but this doesn't mean there is a diminishing interest in horses.

This is more than proven by a visit to Belleville Fair which is becoming widely known for the excellence of its horse show.

Ten years ago Belleville Fair officials prided themselves on their horse show but they didn't even dream what was to happen in the future.

This year there were 320 horses and ponies of all breeds and descriptions entered in the fair competition. The number of animals far exceeded the accommodation and Monday night after the pony judging was complete 40 of the ponies were sent home to provide accommodation for heavier classes to be judged later in the fair.

MANY CLASSES SHOWN

Percherons, Clydesdales and Belgians are all included in the heavy draught classes.

There are colorful Palominos, Hunters, Quarter horses —the cow punchers' delight—in the saddle horse classes.

In addition there are the high stepping Hackneys to give machine age fair goers an idea of what it was like to go for a Sunday afternoon drive a half century or more ago.

Yesterday there were about 20 entrants in the afternoon English saddle horse class—10 of them ridden by girls.

"Every girl in town must own a horse," commented one fair official as the riders were being judged.

Exports Soar

It only seems as if our problems remain virtually unchanged from year to year. Sometimes we actually do something about them.

A case in point is our trade deficit. It has disappeared. True, we still have some worries about our exchange payments, because we have to meet other items beside the bill for our imports. But the unfavorable balance of trade which was plaguing us a few years ago has vanished and our exports are climbing in a spectacular fashion. Figures for the first six months of the present calendar year, released by the Federal Bureau of Statistics on Monday, show that our exports jumped by 23 per cent over the figure for the corresponding period last year. Moreover, this increase was real, representing a higher volume of sales and not just an increase in prices.

Another encouraging feature was that, while the United States remained our biggest market and our sales there increased 11 per cent, its proportion of the total sales declined, to 52.4 per cent from 56.7 per cent. This diversification in our customers is welcome, for it means we are slightly less vulnerable to any developments which may adversely affect our trade with our neighbor.

In large measure, of course, these results reflect the world economic climate. The prosperity which we are enjoying is shared by many other countries, which are our customers. But part of the increase has been earned by hard work, by the initiative of private business firms and by the leadership offered by governments, both federal and provincial.

We are far from being out of the woods; many troublesome problems remain and we may even be unable to hold all our gains. But at least we have proven to ourselves that we can do something about our trade, that it is possible for a high-wage economy to compete successfully in world markets. Providing we do not use this success as an excuse for resting on our laurels, our future should prove brighter than some of the forecasts we heard half a decade or more ago.

Eliminate This Hazard

Curves, on the highway as elsewhere, add interest to life. Sometimes, though, the surprises they bring are a little too unexpected. Take the curve which Front Street makes as it turns into Dundas Street East. One is driving along blithely when all at once one meets a car proceeding in the opposite direction. Since Front Street is a one-way street, this can be a trifle disconcerting.

Though motorists driving west on Dundas Street face a clearly-worded sign when they reach Pinnacle a sign forbidding them to proceed further on Dundas Street, some motorists overlook it. Not all of these are strangers to the city — it is surprising what tricks the mind plays if one is inattentive.

Some of the results can be amusing. One large trailor-tractor had got as far as City Hall before being confronted by an indignant honking motorist. The truck driver backed up — and then turned left onto McAnnany Street again travelling the wrong way on a one-way street.

Sometimes, though, the results are serious — people have been injured. And one day, they will be tragic unless some means can be devised of preventing motorists from crossing Pinnacle Street and popping around that curve to surprise some south-bound driver.

One way of ending the possibility of such surprises would be to build an island, or a concrete curb, from the centre of the Pinnacle-Dundas intersection northerly to a point level with the northside sidewalks on Dundas Street. That would still permit cars to turn north on Pinnacle from either the east or west sides of the intersection, but would stop all but the most absent-minded and inattentive drivers from proceeding straight through the intersection.

I regard a gentleman as someone who is fundamentally gentle. He may have to be tough, but he can be tough in a gentle way. He must be honest, polite and persuasive, and I think the idea of beauty comes into his actions as well as his morals. After all, an effective morality is quite often beautiful.—Professor A. N. Jeffares, Head of the Department of English at Leeds University.

There are books which I love to see on the shelf. I feel that virtue goes out of them, but I should think it undue familiarity to read them: —Samuel McChord Crothers.

Letters to the Editor

Criticizes Editorial On 401 at Marysville

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

For the past few months I have been reading of accidents on Highway 401 at Marysville, a stretch of well engineered highway which you childishly refer to as "Suicide Alley". Recently, I read in a similar editorial in your paper in which you suggested that the above mentioned stretch of highway should not have been opened until all four lanes were completed. This idea might have some merit (not much, but some) if No. 2 and No. 502 highways could be counted on for excellent fare. Either your editorial staff has a short collective memory or they have accepted as fact the tremendous toll taken by those two roads.

The south lanes of 401 east of Marysville are part of one of the best designed and engineered highways in the world. There are no sharp and/or blind curves, hidden intersections nor steep hills which excessively limit visibility. The older roads have all of these hazards. How can you conclude that traffic would be better off and driving safer if the newer roads is beyond me.

In spite of the ingenuity of Department of Highways planners and engineers, there is a fantastic number of accidents on 401, and the fact is, I contend that virtually all accidents are caused by careless ness and stupidity on the part of one or more of the drivers involved in the accident.

The beginning of the two lane stretch is extremely well marked with signs, and any motorist body can see all those signs and still plow through those bales of hay is beyond me. It must be the same type of screwball who will pull out to pass in the face of oncoming traffic. I can really believe that these careless people would be less of a hazard on an older and poorer highway such as No. 2 or 502?

Why blame DHO for all these accidents? Deplore the lack of sense.

If the editorial staff is capable (which I doubt) of producing a thought provoking editorial on the traffic situation generally and dail east of Marysville in particular, I would suggest you do so in the hope of preventing the slaughter. This, I think would be more sensible than the childish prating of Department of Highways planning in which you are now engaged.—J. R. Savage, (Driving Instructor).

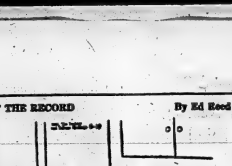
Editors Note: Mr. Savage talks sense. The difficulty is that many factors are not possible but, as he notes, are careless. The record shows that the accident toll on the two-lane stretches of Highway 401 is high. This is true not only of the strip at Marysville but at Brighton. Rates are lower on roads which are, in themselves, more hazardous. Apparently, many drivers can see that conditions are dangerous, they proceed with greater caution. Perhaps the Marysville strip could have been used for some time, traffic, with traffic travelling in the other direction being diverted to highway No. 2 or No. 502. This may not be a thought-provoking comment but it is the best we can make.

'Barbeque' Spelling Brings Objections



Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

In a recent issue of your paper, I noticed an editorial headed "Why the Beef" in that editorial you commended an address made by Mr. Diefenbaker at a Progressive Conservative "barbeque," at Petrolia.

Undoubtedly Mr. Diefenbaker's address was delivered at a barbecue. Some years ago there were quite a number of restaurants that offered barbecued meat, and to have an economical electric sign they used the Bar-B-Q abbreviation. From this, for some reason I cannot understand, people started spelling the word barbecue as barbeque, which, of course, would be pronounced so as to rhyme with Quebec, if there were such a word.

English spelling is absurd, but there is no point in added absurdity. I can see no point in changing the spelling of barbecue, since particularly the new spelling will cause certainty result in a new pronunciation of this word.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

August 19th, 1916

Colorado beetles, dropped on Britain's potato fields by Nazi planes, constitute merely a further evidence of the desperation of our enemies, less spectacular than the robot bombs, but nonetheless reliable. It is most ludicrous to believe, of course, that enough of the pests could be scattered to do serious damage, particularly when Germany's ability to send over planes is strictly limited. This new scheme of sabotage distinctly resembles clutching at a drowning man at a straw. We should be thankful for this further proof that the Hun is now convinced that his cause is hopeless.

Sources closely following the Finnish situation said last night that very intensive secret activity by the Scandinavian government indicated concrete steps toward an armistice with Russia may be in the making, perhaps within two weeks.

"Buddy" Flindall entertained 12 of his young playmates at an enjoyable party at his home in honor of his third birthday.

Anyone who has ever tried to purchase souvenirs such as Indian baskets, beadwork trimmed belts, dolls dressed as papooses, Indian moccasins or RCMP stalwarts have seen the obliquitous "made in Japan" stamp on even these unlikely items.

Even in top tourist locations such as Banff and our own northern lake resort, Waskesiu, these replicas are in plentiful supply.

There is no intention of minimizing the skill or ingenuity of the Japanese craftsmen who turn out these strictly Canadian items and sell them back to us.

More power to them and their promoters who spark this type of trade to Newcastle" sales, but it does seem that wholesale production at cheap prices ought not to be the criterion in these replicas of the Canadian way of life.

Surely Canadian artisans are capable of turning out our own souvenirs of the intrepid redcoated policemen who have patrolled our plains since first we were a country.

Ought we not to be making our own flags, however large or small and however controversial?

If not, then the only possible alternative seems to be that of Canadians going into mass production of Japanese kimonos ,obis, tabis and paper lanterns.

Where would we market them? In Japan, of course.

Turn about is fair play in any language and in any country.

Highway Menace

Port Arthur News-Chronicle

Hitch-hikers have adopted a new technique of edging farther and farther out into the road to try to induce passing motorists to stop. This forces drivers to swing out into the left lane to keep from hitting them and could cause a serious accident at today's high speeds. Highway officials and drivers in cars should take steps to put an end to this menace.

Proposed Flag Made in Japan

Upon inspection, it revealed that is was "made in Japan."

With the new flag design scarcely off the drawing board, it comes as something of a shock to find that already a foreign country has seized an opportunity for commerce.

Actually, the incident should not have occasioned surprise. It is happening all the time.

Anyone who has ever tried to purchase souvenirs such as Indian baskets, beadwork trimmed belts, dolls dressed as papooses, Indian moccasins or RCMP stalwarts have seen the obliquitous "made in Japan" stamp on even these unlikely items.

Even in top tourist locations such as Banff and our own northern lake resort, Waskesiu, these replicas are in plentiful supply.

There is no intention of minimizing the skill or ingenuity of the Japanese craftsmen who turn out these strictly Canadian items and sell them back to us.

More power to them and their promoters who spark this type of trade to Newcastle" sales, but it does seem that wholesale production at cheap prices ought not to be the criterion in these replicas of the Canadian way of life.

Surely Canadian artisans are capable of turning out our own souvenirs of the intrepid redcoated policemen who have patrolled our plains since first we were a country.

Ought we not to be making our own flags, however large

Strictly Personal
Physically Ill If Confronted By Color Green

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I remember meeting a woman some years ago who told me that a certain shade of green made her physically ill. She never knew why, until she underwent psychoanalysis, and recalled an unpleasant pattern of events in her early childhood that was intimately associated with that shade.

Can "prejudice" of this kind (in her case, a harmless prejudice against a color) become biologically imprinted upon the personality? I thought of her case the other day, while reading a paper by Dr. Howard Liddell, director of the Behavior Farm Laboratory at Cornell University.

"A simple experiment with a sheep," Liddell begins, "will disclose the essential features of the prejudiced mind." The sheep is brought into the laboratory, strapped, and given a brief electric shock of only mild disagreeableness.

A metronome adjusted to click once per second is placed out of sight near the animal. After the metronome clicks for a few seconds, a shock to the foreleg follows. After a few trials of such coincidences, says Liddell, "the sheep will be prejudiced against the click and will seek a home for life." More than 35 years of experimental work in the Cornell laboratory confirms his statement.

The animal could never again listen to the metronome without acute uneasiness; in fact, the clicking of a typewriter confined to hotel rooms in which Judice extended itself to all such noises as winding a watch and even tones of whistling and talking. for the creature's full lifetime.

Other studies made with baby lambs and kids show that they could be conditioned at a very early age, as early as four hours following birth. Isolated from the mother, or put into darkness for an hour, they developed a protracted tendencies "that are not only disabling, but that can be lethal," in Liddell's words.

Deep prejudice, he suggests, is a kind of conditioned reflex in the child, and is carefully implant itself in the biological mechanism to the point that it is not curable by any rational or rational means. This is doubtless the point of Dean Swift's keen stipulation that it is useless to try to argue a man out of something he has not been argued into."

These sinister findings should alarm us, but Liddell does make the observation that "the human baby is emotionally extraordinarily tough." We are not far masochistic in the matter of conditioning as sheep or goats — but we are susceptible enough, as the crimes of the Inquisitions we spend for mass destruction might better go for retraining our emotions.

She Has Lawn Dyed Green

Milwaukee Journal

This is the era of substitutes for nature. It is reliably whispered that Mrs. John Sherman Cooper, wife of the Republican senator from Kentucky, dyes the natural green lawn of her Washington lawn a delicate green in early Spring, before nature takes over. There are plastic flowers and shrubbery in restaurants, aluminum and plastic Christmas trees by the home.

In the wake of the cigarette health scare earlier this year, one firm came out with a smokeless cigarette made of plastic and containing menthol, but no tobacco. Wigs are all the rage; a woman may have a real hair hair her own. Fishermen may select from a mighty array of fish plastic lures, ranging from nightcrawlers and cockroaches to frogs.

There are fireplaces with gas flames to incinerate real logs, and electric starters to fire up charcoal in the grill. There is a genuine looking suntan may be bought by the bottle.

Even the crops with DDT to increase the yield of crops already in surplus, then ban milk from the market because its content of the chemical poison is too high for human safety. We simulate the weather. We aim to inhabit the moon. In man, nature built something of a Frankenstein creature who seems to be trying to take over.

To Your Good Health
People Should Decide When And When Not to Smoke

By JOSEPH C. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: In regard to your article on smoking in hospitals, why don't such hotels as ours display "no smoking" signs and be firm about it? If a patient is well enough to smoke, he shouldn't be taking up bed space in a hospital.

There is a doctor in California who has a "no" smoking" sign in his waiting room. Everyone respects him and no one comes near the entrance with a cigarette. — Mrs. B. K.

A New England friend of mine tells the story of the old-time Newburyport teacher who gave his flock a fire-and-brimstone sermon and then was seen on his own front porch Sunday afternoon, sipping a cup of rum and water.

When somebody asked him, "But didn't you preach to us this morning about demon rum?" he replied, "Yes, of course I did, but I don't intend to be bigoted about it."

Same with me, sort of. Everybody knows by now that I regard smoking as a filthy habit, and I've given it up myself.

But I still don't think we have the right to tell people they must not smoke.

Hospitals are big. I don't really see why it isn't possible to permit smoking in some rooms (if the occupants don't object) and prohibit it in others.

What about the patient with an injured leg, who may have to be in "retired" there's no use soo why he shouldn't smoke, if he wants to.

But smoking by visitors ought to be prohibited — this seems most obvious to me— if the patient is desperately ill with severe respiratory disease, for example.

I agree wholeheartedly with children's hospitals which absolutely forbid smoking in the patients' wings, but put ashtrays in waiting rooms and lounges.

As for doctors' waiting rooms some prohibit, some don't.

If a waiting room has adequate ventilation, I doubt that nonsmokers will be materially oppressed by somebody else's cigarette, and certainly won't be harmed.

But if it's a crowded room and the ventilation isn't good, then I'd say no smoking!

I'm in favor of letting people decide as much as possible for themselves, even though I still doubt the wisdom of smoking.

Dear Dr. Molner:: I am getting too fat and have had a few nervous breakdown two years ago and am taking tranquilizers now, my psychiatrist says I must want me to go on a strenuous diet. I would" appreciate your two leaflets "Lost Seven Lbs. Reducing" and "Calorie Counter" for which I enclose 15 cents in coin and one long unstamped, self-addressed envelope. — Mrs. O. W. L.

...ee your psychiatrist's point and I entirely agree. In fact, except in the most extreme situations, I oppose strenuous diets. The slow, steady ones get much better results.

Dear Dr. Molner: My 9-year-old son had some gunpowder explode in his face and it left him with a face full of black "freckles" or as the doctor called it, "tatooing." Can anything be done to get this powder out of his skin? I was told it would ultimately disappear but I can see little difference in six months. — S. W.

This is a job for a skin specialist and "skin planing" may be the final solution if you consider it that important. The black spots are particles of carbon which won't fade but may, in a long time, gradually work out.

Free Nurses

London Free Press

Exiting new hospital wings in this country have remained closed for lack of nurses to staff them. Before there is any further talk of a nursing shortage, let our hospitals and doctors take a long look at what nonnursing jobs they have imposed upon the profession. Any duties that could be borne by clerical help would free many more nurses for nursing.

She Did Not Just Grumble

Brantford Expositor

When Mark Twain said everybody complained about the weather but no one does anything about it, he was being more humorous than wise. His remark epitomizes one of the commonest human frailties — the readiness to grumble but not to act to remove the cause of the gripe. Yet many things that need changing can be changed — if someone will make the effort.

There is a lesson for every citizen in the story of Mrs. John Meisha of Milwaukee. While cooking a meal one day she thought of buying, she found the fires had left grooved to make room for new ones. Her inquiries showed that grooving is a regular sharp practice in the used car trade, and she determined to have it stopped.

Working single-handed for months, she gathered support for a law prohibiting re-grooving of iron cylinders. It meant visiting grooving shops for evidence of the extent of this crooked business, interviewing state legislators, testifying before legislative committees and persuading women's groups to support her requested change in the law. Now Wisconsin is a law against regrooving. Chief credit goes to one determined woman.

How many men and women in Brantford, for example, complain about some situation that needs correcting in the interest, and how many lapse into lethargy with the excuse that there's nothing one person can do about it?

Mrs. Meisha's story refutes them. One person with determination, perseverance and drive can do lois. That is the way the greatest reforms have been achieved.

Nobody outside the Goldwater camp. But it may have been a stunt by American Nazis to attract attention of the - roaders to the Goldwater banner to help elect a candidate to their taste.

Too devious!

Toronto Stocks

Losses and gains were about evenly divided as investors showed little interest in either buying or selling.

In the industrial list — it showed a minus sign on index — Imperial Bank of Commerce and Bank of Montreal were ahead ¼ each to 69¾ and 69¼ respectively. Imperial Oil was up ¼ to 50⅝ and Bell Telephone ¼ to 56¾. Aluminium was off ⅛ to 31¼ while CPR gave up ¼ to 47¼.

Base metals were stronger for the fifth session in a row. Hudson Bay, a one point gainer Tuesday, advanced ¾ to 68½ and Steep Rock 10 cents to $3.60. Falconbridge dipped ¼ to 76 while trading ex-dividend 65 cents.

Speculative mining issues were mixed. Ranges dipped 20 cents to $1.85 and Canadian Dyno three cents to $1.65. In Timmins-area issues, Windfall fell one to 60 cents while Goldale climbed 3½ cents to 41½ cents.

On index, industrials were down .15 to 159.71, golds .24 to 134.65, western oils .05 to 98.66 and the Exchange index .11 to 149.14. Base metals gained .26 to 67.63. Volume at 11 a.m. was 1,125,000 shares compared with 784,000 shares traded at the same time Tuesday.

Fractional gains were recorded in most sections of the stock market Tuesday.

Base metal stocks were strong on the combination of increased copper prices and good earnings reports by Inco and Falconbridge. The latter was ahead ¾ to 76¾, and the former ⅝ to 85¾. Hudson Bay advanced 1 to 67¾, Labrador ½ to 34½, Noranda ¼ to 68⅝, and Cominco ⅛ to 38.

Among juniors, Brunswick mining spurted ⅝ to 10¼, but Steep Rock sold off 15 cents to $3.50 in profit taking.

Speculative mining issues came to life late in the session after spending most of the day wandering aimlessly. Raglan was ahead 27 cents to $2.09 and Canadian Dyno, which owned 2,800,000 shares of Raglan at last report, eight cents to $1.68. Of the Timmins-area stocks, Windfall climbed four cents to 61 cents, and Genex three cents to 47 cents. United Comstock Lode dipped three cents to 61 cents in profit taking.

The industrial gain was paced by Laurentide Finance and Slater Steel which gained ⅝ each, to 15¾ and 18¼, respectively. Imperial Oil was ahead ⅛ to 50⅛.

Golds made a modest advance. Kerr-Addison was up five cents to $7.25.

On index, industrials were ahead .27 to 159.86, golds .29 to 134.70, base metals .16 to 67.37 and the exchange index .25 to 149.25. Western oils were down .26 to 98.57. Volume for the day was 3,183,000 shares compared with 3,319,000 shares traded Monday.

Mrs. M. Bakey Special Guest At Kiwanis Club

At the regular meeting of the Quinte Kiwanis Club held Monday evening at the Kiwanis Centre under the chairmanship of George Brown, Mrs. Margaret Bakey, assistant chief constable at the Bell Telephone Company in this city showed a film, "The Changing Years" and described the many changes that have taken place since the turn of the century.

Mrs. Bakey was introduced by Edward McKenna and thanks of club were expressed by Bruce Lynch. The speaker stated that the Bell office was located at 62 Bridge Street East in 1900 and at that time there were 282 subscribers. In 1914 the office was moved to Pinnacle Street and the 1000th phone was installed at that time. The company moved to their new, modern office at 75 Bridge Street East in 1950 and in 1956 the first direct long distance dialling was introduced. Her address was most interesting and instructive.

Increasing Popularity of Corn Reflected in 'Corn City' at Fair

Corn growing is fast gaining in popularity among Bay of Quinte district farmers and in recognition of this fact a special fair exhibit is geared to this interest.

Farm machinery dealers featuring corn harvesting equipment, and seed corn dealer representatives have combined to set up a "corn city" on the fair infield where local farmers can learn the best varieties of corn to grow and also see the machinery needed to plant and harvest the crop.

Corn planters, spray equipment and harvesters are on display along with ensilage cutters and silo loading and unloading equipment.

At the same time the Warwick Seed Co. Ltd. and the Pride Hybrid Company of Canada, both dealers in seed corn have displays offering free information.

It seems the growing of both grain and ensilage corn is rapidly growing in favor throughout Ontario.

More and more uses for corn are being introduced and increased quantities of corn, both grain and ensilage, are being used for feed purposes. The result is that not enough corn is grown in Ontario to supply the demand.

Also too, farmers are finding that in many instances more tons or pounds of feed per acre can be obtained when growing corn.

And another welcome feature is that with mechanization corn can be grown and harvested with relatively little manual labor.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN ARNOLD SOUVAGE

Souvage - Fox

Ferns and tall bouquets of white gladioli decorated the chancel of Trinity United Church, Madoc, when Sharon Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Fox, Madoc, was united in marriage with Mr. John Arnold Souvage, son of Mr. Stanley Souvage of Montreal, and Mrs. Souvage.

Reverend Alfred Foulter of Belleville officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Then side, given in marriage by her father, was charming in an Empire waisted gown of Italian peau de soie featuring a simulated blouse of re-embroidered Alecon lace with wide sleeves and the skirt slender in front, with a gathered back that fell from the high waist into a chapel train. Her head dress was a lace pillbox with tiered circles of silk illusion, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and ivy.

Miss Joy Ann Fox, maid of honor, Miss Lynda Fox brides-maid, sisters of the bride, were gowned alike in Copenhagen blue French crepe sheaths with overblouses of white Alencon lace. They wore matching pillbox headdresses with veil and carried crescent shaped bouquets of yellow roses.

Little Shelley Ann Fox, niece of the bride, was adorable in a bouffant dress of blue nylon and lace. She wore a hair bandeau of yellow and white button mums and carried a matching nosegay.

Mr. Hugh Eardley-Wilmot of Sudbury, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Jim Mayor of Noranda and Mr. Robert Main of Montreal.

At the reception held in the church parlors, the bride's mother received wearing a two-piece dress of forest green satin brocade with beige accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

For travelling to Vermont, the bride wore a two-piece dress of Dior blue crepe with tan accessories and white wool coat.

Mr. and Mrs. Souvage will reside in Estevan, Saskatchewan.

Out-of-town guests were present from Montreal, Ste. Agathe, Cornwall, Kingston, Belleville, Ottawa, Sudbury, Ajax, Port Hope and Toronto.

Successful Living

Wife Dreams Her Husband Is Having Another Affair

DEAR DORIS — My husband joined the army. On our tenth anniversary he was in Europe on service. He said he had started to have an affair there with a girl but couldn't go through with it. I was deeply hurt when he told me, but was sure I had forgiven him completely.

DORIS CLARK

Now he is away again, and last night I dreamed of him and to my horror I could see him so plainly in bed with another woman. Just as if I was talking to him I could hear myself plainly telling him to get out of my life and go on with this affair.

It hurts me desperately to have this feeling of mistrust, as I love him very much. When he told me about the near-affair eight years ago he said he would never do it again because an affair like that wasn't worth degrading our love for. I want to believe him and I do, but what in the world makes me have dreams like this? —HAUNTED.

• • •

DEAR HAUNTED — We dream about the things we deliberately "put out" of our minds. What we really do is bury them deep in our own subconscious! Then they come back to haunt us in our dreams.

Best way to rid yourself of the dream is to consciously review it, examine it, deal with it. And come to understand the deep loneliness of your army man — a longing for vital alone; as he realized when his physical being was tempted.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — Could you explain why my boy friend is set against girls wearing shorts? Whenever I mention shorts his face gets cloudy. We have discussed it many time. He is 17 and I am 16 and we live in a small community.

I have never done anything to make him feel this way nor do I wear tight short shorts. Just to indicate the extent of his disgust and hatred, he will not permit anyone wearing shorts to ride in his car and yet he is not against girls under 12 wearing shorts.

Please advise me and all quarrels between my boy friend and me. — SHORTIE.

• • •

DEAR SHORTIE — Shorts are o.k. on a beach or at a picnic. But on a date, with a boy who thinks of you as a lady? No! He wants his women feminine, and I don't blame him.

• • •

(A letter to Doris will get you a new slant on your particular human problem.)

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

MIRROR, MIRROR

I suppose everyone carries about with him or her an image of what he or she looks like. In our own eyes we probably flatter ourselves that we are presentable. But did you ever hear someone else describing you? This can be quite a deflating experience. It happened to me once a few years ago, but I've never forgotten it.

It was at a convention, and the delegates were lined up at the reception desk. A woman ahead of me was saying to the registrar, "She's quite tall, middle-aged and her hair is turning gray. She is wearing a suit and she is a little round shouldered." Then she turned around and saw me and said, "Oh here she is now." I must have had a "who, me?" look on my face, because the woman went on, "I was just telling Mrs. Blank that you would be here to do the press report."

I am quite sure that is not how I would have described myself and it was a revealing experience, but it did have the effect of reminding me to straighten my shoulders. What we see with our own eyes is not what others see with theirs.

Robbie Burns put it so succinctly when he wrote, "O wad some power the giftie gi'e us/To see oursel's as ithers see us/It would frae mony a blunder free us/and foolish notion." (I ask my Scottish friends to forgive the spelling which I am afraid is not quite authentic). This verse was written to a louse which the poet watched as it was running around the stylish plumes of a hat on a woman at church. The woman kept tossing her head with motions of vanity.

On the other hand perhaps if we create an image of ourselves which flatters us we may try to live up to it, and at least it might remind us to straighten our shoulders.

CARE OF SHEETS

Bleaching can remove strength as well as color, and even color-fast fabrics may affect whites if the lint shifts easily, so separate white and colored bed linens when you wash them, says the Canadian Consumer magazine discussing the care of sheets. This little magazine carries on research into all kinds of goods and services, and especially if there are a number of complaints about some particular article. When buying sheets they tell you to look for the finished size as some sheets give the measurements without hems. This happened to a friend of mine who bought sheets on a shopping trip to the States and thought she had bought a great bargain in colored sheets except that when she put them on the bed they were about six inches too short.

The magazine warns that weight is not necessarily a good way to judge sheets, because poor quality ones may be made to feel richly heavy by the addition of a lot of sizing or dressing. To check this rub the fabric together and if too much sizing has been used it will fall out as powder.

On the care of sheets the article says to be sure they are thoroughly dry before storing them in a dry, well-ventilated place, but don't leave them unnecessarily long in the drier. Rotating sheets will give longer wear, put freshly laundered ones at the bottom of the stored pile, and don't use the same ones always as bottom sheets when making beds. A good quality sheet well cared for should last about five years.

Bureau Will Be Set up to Take Survey

TORONTO (CP)—Women will be asked whether they work or want to work, why and at what, during the Canadian National Exhibition this year.

The survey designed to answer questions about women's jobs and job expectations will be conducted in a booth set up by the women's bureau of the Ontario department of labor.

Director Ethel McLellan said Tuesday any woman who wants to volunteer information and opinions will be invited to do so.

An anonymous questionnaire asks whether a woman has been employed, and at what type of work, whether she is interested in working—and at what. A key set of questions asks what type of training she would be interested in taking to get a job.

The answers will be tabulated to provide a picture of women in the working force, of how much women know about working, how realistic their attitude is toward their own skills and training, and what sort of retraining programs they would enroll in and use.

Coupled with the survey will be a job counselling service for those who want it.

Mrs. McLellan said the bureau is not trying to encourage women to go to work, "but if women are going to work, the object is to make them more effective members of the labor force."

Week-Long Course Will Be Held

TORONTO (CP)—A refresher course for women physical education teachers in Ontario will be given by the YWCA in September.

The week - long course is planned for two groups, those with little training and those with professional qualification who want to return to the field.

It will cover: the latest techniques, theory lectures in recreation and modern trends in fitness, practical sessions for the beginning teacher, including keep-fit materials and lesson planning. Advanced rhythmic and Olympic gymnastics will be taught, and nutrition and special exercises for those working with the over-50 group.

The course will run from Sept. 8 to 14 at the Y's Ontario Athletic Leadership Camp at Orillia.

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

Once baby passes the mid-year mark, each day sees new skills acquired. While ball-of-fire babies are apt to do things a bit faster than take-it-easy babies, most babies do these things at about these ages:

• 6 to 7 months. Eyes and hands co-ordinate. Hands hold security, explore eagerly, eyes examine intently. Sitting up starts, rolling over is easy now.

• 8 to 9 months. Creeping comes into its own. Cup feeding usually handled reasonably well. Can switch objects from hand to hand.

• Toothsome tale. Teething really starts in earnest after the 6-months mark. Gerber Teething Biscuits are extra-hard and waffle-surfaced to give baby the biting satisfaction he wants and needs. Scalloped edges make them easy to grasp and hold.

Fruitful ideas. Absolute favourites with little food fanciers: Gerber Strained and Junior Fruits. Know why? Because they're fresh-cooked in a matter of seconds to preserve orchard-bright colours and true-to-nature flavours. Has baby had Pears & Pineapple, lately?

Helping hand division. The baby who is encouraged to try things within his capabilities will reward you with a good progress report. The baby who is urged beyond his limits may lose his desire to try.

Vegetable review. Many different vegetables help build good food habits at an age when food acceptances are most easily established. Gerber offers wonderful vegetable variety with 9 strained and 3 junior choices. All are famous for garden-true colours and flavours. All are specially processed to preserve the utmost in precious food values. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Modeling Offer Taboo — Tell Friend to Get Lost

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I came to this rather large city from a small town in Kansas. I was unable to get the kind of employment I had hoped for and my money was running out, so I took a job as a cocktail waitress.

The lounge where I work is a favorite hang out for advertising and public relations executives. Their suit sleeves don't have crease-ers in them like the yokels I used to know back home. (My girl friend told me this is the first thing to look for).

Yesterday one of the best - looking men I ever saw asked me why a girl with such gorgeous legs was waiting on tables. He said I ought to be a hosiery model and that he could help me. But he doesn't want to talk about the job in his office. He prefers my place.

ANN LANDERS

Do you know anything about hosiery modeling? I used to read your column back in Kansas and I trust you, Ann. Please help me. — TOUGH SLEDDING.

DEAR SLEDDING — That model routine is strictly off the cob.

Model agencies have lists a mile long of girls with beautiful gams who are stepping all over each other trying to get jobs.

The man's sleeves may not have a crease but I think he's got something up it. Tell him to get lost.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our 13-year-old daughter, Mary Alice, is a sweet and innocent little girl. She received a necklace and some earrings from a 14-year-old boy who lives in the neighborhood. I would guess the boy paid about $7.00 for the set.

Mary Alice did not tell me about the gift when she received it. I learned about it from her older sister who tried unsuccessfully to blackmail Mary Alice into doing her household chores. I didn't want to make a big thing of the gift so I said nothing.

That was two weeks ago. Since that time I have discussed the matter with some friends and they all feel I should insist that Mary Alice return the jewelry.

I would very much appreciate you opinion. — A. I. R.

DEAR A. I. R. — I believe, and very strongly, that the jewelry should be sent back at once, and that you tell Mary Alice she may not accept gifts from boys.

The thought of earrings for a 13-year-old nauseates me. Such a gift clearly suggests that these two are playing at being grown up. Wake up and smell the coffee, mother. That "sweet and innocent little girl" has you buffaloed.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband would rather shoot craps than eat, and that's about the choice we've had for eight miserable years.

Before I married Jack I knew he was a horse player. He promised to give up horses if I would marry him. He kept his word, but now it's dice instead of horses.

We've been living on my pay cheque for the past two months because Jack got stuck in a game and borrowed from a tough bunch of monkeys. When I think that he has been working for those thugs instead of his family I get so mad I can't see straight.

I've tried to reason with him. When we talk, he says I'm right and swears he is going to quit gambling for good. But somehow he hasn't got the will power to stay away from the old bones. Jack is a swell guy and a wonderful father. I know I'll never leave him no matter what, but I need your help. — ARLENE.

DEAR ARLENE — Write to Gamblers Anonymous for literature. The address is P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles 17, California.

Gamblers Anonymous has helped many compulsive gamblers overcome their addiction. A 5c stamp could change your life. It's worth the gamble — I mean the investment.

Ann Landers will be glad to help with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Experts Say

Patience, Elbow Grease Key to Good Refinishing

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Elbow grease and patience are the most important requirements for a furniture refinisher. The others depend on the kind of wood and the type of finish you want.

The first step is cleaning off th- old finish, and it should be done carefully and completely.

"Don't scrape wood," ... Herb Edwards, foreman finisher at Helpath's, a Toronto furniture firm. "It does too much damage. Use a paint or varnish remover.

"The main thing is to get the wood clean. Get it all cleaned off and the battle is won. One of the greatest mistakes people make is not cleaning off a wax remover. They don't bother to wash it down well enough—the wax clings and varnish won't dry over it."

To take off wax or old paint that has worked into the grain, Mr. Edwards recommends using alcohol or lacquer thinner or a strong solution of soda or soluble cleaning compound after you have finished with the varnish remover.

If the old finish is really stubborn, use steel wool with the cleaners to get out the last specks. "It's hard work and it's dirty work," says Mr. Edwards, "but you can do it."

Once the wood is clean, sand it to take dents out. Fill any deep gouges with plastic wood. Mr. Edwards says professionals use a burning-in stick that isn't usually available at retail outlets, but a local expert may be able to tell you where to get some.

"You can use almost anything to fill a hole. Then smooth it down and color it."

A filler stain to put on the first color is next. "On mahogany use a spirit stain to bring up the golden glow or reds. There is another kind of filler which is smeared on like mud to shake up the grain. Use it mostly on walnut, mahogany or oak."

Mr. Edwards says some people fill the grain on real wood to give it the hard, glossy look of artificial woods, but he disapproves.

Less-expensive white woods with little natural color or grain are stained with a color stain. Wood that has been painted and to be painted should not need a filler, only two fresh coats.

By this time the wood should be nearly the color you want it. Now brush a coat of shellac on and scuff it down when it is dry. I'd suggest a coat of varnish on that. It's a little harder than shellac and more protection against wet rings."

Walnut and teak may be oiled. Mr. Edwards recommends Danish oil. He says boiled linseed oil is considered old-fashioned because it takes so long to dry. Oil is just rubbed into the wood, then usually waxed.

A wax coating provides a protective coating, so that when you dust the furniture you won't wipe off any of the finish. Mr. Edwards says, but too much wax will change the color and sheen.

Stack-It-Yourself Sandwich Party

by Mary Moore

August is Sandwich Time, and so is September and October and every month.

We have a neighbor who owns a genuine chef's cap and when he dons it it changes his personality. He sharpens the carving knife and in their garden at the picnic table he reigns over a rare roast of beef, carving it as if he were a crowned King Arthur with his good sword Excalibur.

His wife Vivian enters into the fun and games, amiably supplying different breads sliced thinly and all the trimmings for their guests to make their own sandwiches. At a recent party in their garden these "fixin's" were thinly sliced dille, Bibb lettuce, huge slices of tomato and horseradish. The guests helped themselves to plasticized paper plates, outsize thin slices of rye bread, then stood meekly before Arthur while he piled their bread with generous slices of his rare beef, then added the accompaniments they preferred. As they took their first jaw-breaking bites you could hear their "uhms" and "ahs" but very little else as they did some serious chewing.

If you husband does not favor carving the meat himself, you could cook a boned and rolled roast of beef or ham or even turkey and chill it and ask your friendly butcher to slice it thinly on his machine. Ask him to layer the slices neatly as they come from the slicer and then press them back into the original shape so they have an attractive appearance on the picnic table.

For a more modest stack-it-yourself sandwich party you could prepare the filling for

TRIPLE DECKER WESTERN SANDWICHES:

To serve 6, make the authentic "Western" Ham and Egg Filling (if you have an outdoor grill you could cook this on it like a short order cook): Six eggs, ¼ cup milk or water, 1½ cups chopped cooked ham, 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento (optional), 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, dash of cayenne pepper, 2 tablespoons butter. Beat the eggs slightly with milk or water and except butter. Heat the butter in frying pan or on a griddle until sputtery. Spoon the egg mixture in six 4" circles. When cooked on the underside turn and cook a minute or two on the other.

The guests should be waiting with a slice of buttered bread on their plates Serve each one with the ham and egg filling. He or she then tops this with another slice of buttered bread and tops that with an outsize slice of tomato, then lettuce and another slice of bread. These are hard to eat but that adds to the merriment.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS — BY PATRICIA LEWIS

A BACHELOR'S DREAM OF THE IDEAL GIRL

A young man we know — a bachelor in his early 30's — recently confessed what he likes and dislikes in the average young lady. Here's a fast rundown:

As far as he's concerned, a well-mannered young woman:

Speaks solely for his benefit when they're in public places instead of trying to impress the party three tables away with her views on politics, education and dating customs of the American male. Speak softly, he advises, and carry on a conversation with some wit.

Dresses with chic and in refined taste; doesn't go in for fads (big bows on the back of little heads) and wouldn't be caught dead in a beatle hair-do.

Is pleasant to his friends and other guests at parties; doesn't flirt or try to become the centre of attraction.

Lets him pick a restaurant for dinner that's tailored to his budget, instead of her inflated impression of it.

Doesn't expect to get a royal treatment every time they go out; will settle for a movie at times when his wallet can produce no more than two seats in the balcony.

Knows how to behave in all social situations — from going through a receiving line to leaving a dull party early, but with grace.

Doesn't go in for long spiels about "men I have loved and dated."

Lets the fellow do the telephone calling; has better sense — and manners — than to call him repeatedly at home and in the office just to gab or shower him with invitations.

In short, according to our young friend, the girls of his dreams speak well, dance nicely, dress tastefully, behave graciously, converse intelligently. And, he adds, they don't sing in his ear when dancing.

Thinks Children Should Know Value of Money

Speaking about findings for a forthcoming local radio documentary, The Psychology of Money, she said the case of some surprising examples of childhood ignorance in the field. . .

For example, in an interview with two boys, aged 10 and 12, the youngsters could only envisage millions when asked what they thought was a lot of money.

Yet to them, a man with a good - paying job should earn $100 a month, or $200 if he was particularly well off.

Mrs. Cohen, an attractive mother of two and wife of playwright M. Charles Cohen, believes economics should be taught in elementary school.

She feels its "ridiculous" to be in such close contact with such a basic daily requirement and know so little about it.

"But there's no need to be neurotic about it. We lead complicated, complex lives because of our high standard of living and should accept the responsibility of handling money."

She considers herself an "informer" in the field, and has related economics to current events in a weekly radio program, "Your Money," a series which ended in January.

She taught for three years at Sir George Williams University but turned to communications because it enabled her to do the things she was interested in without spending too much time away from home.

She plans to return to school in the fall and start work on a PhD.

Autumn Styles for Women Effervescent, Gay, Sleek, In Fabric, Color and Line

"Effervescent" is the word for the clothes Canadian women will wear this autumn. There's a natural froth, a gaiety, an allure-and-ready-to-go look evident in fabric, color and in the fashion line itself. Clothes, this season, are a joy to wear and a joy to watch.

Styles submitted to the National Collection by some 100 Canadian fashion houses are a cross-section from about 500 firms which sew in the Union Label as a symbol of quality, sanitary manufacturing and decent labor standards.

Silhouette ranges from the skinny look to the tent fullness. The bosom is accented, even in the shift line. Dresses and suits are set a little closer to the body. Sleeves are often inset, but the gentle raglan influence persists. Necklines are generally high, often with pinched-in front and sloping to daring depths at the back or cut in deep-V fronts which accent the bustline. Belts are narrow, worn most often at hip level and very often as halfbelts.

Fabrics have a life of their own this year, part of the effervescence of the season. They have movement, liveness, at once textured and sleek. Leather is important. Matte jersey is big for after-five. Double-knits lead the daytime field. New treatment of fabrics is interesting — linen-textured wool; cotton which looks like kid; the hand-knit look is everywhere. Evening gowns are either wisps of crepe or sweeping expanses of chiffon or heavy silk.

This is the autumn of Wins and Roses. Reds are everywhere, but jewel tones rather than pastel-hue. Black and white is important with cognac browns for after-five wear. The new tonal tones are back with a vengeance. Greens pop up in every fashion grouping. In general, this is a season of color, color and color.

Three silhouettes to watch in coats are the skinny, the semi-fitted and the tent. Watch for coats teamed with their own dresses in either a matching or lighter-weight fabric.

Look for the precise, co-ordinated Hue. Suits come teamed with their own overblouse, a waistcoat or a cape. The Chanel theme insists. Skirts are invariably easy and box pleated.

In evening wear svelte is the word. Femininity soars to new heights, either in contour sheaths, froths or chiffon, or embroidered or beaded silks. The evening ensemble is important, teamed with a coat or jacket. The formal evening suit is staging a comeback.

Add a little milk to the water you boil potatoes in. Improves taste, keeps 'em from turning black.

Woolen Mill Still Operates

It is owned and operated by 76 - year - old Oswald Fuller, whose father founded his original mill 85 years ago. It burned down and he built the present mill 35 years later.

The mill is open for business from May to October, run along lines which haven't changed much in nearly a century. Now most sheep farmers sell wool through brokers. Mr. Fuller deals directly with farmers from all over Canada. "Fifty years ago there were all kinds of sheep in this part of the country," he says. "Now you can hardly find any. We have to keep going further afield to get enough wool."

Six people handle the process. The cleaned wool is sorted, washed and dried on the roof. Mr. Fuller bought his spinning mule second-hand 30 years ago, and says he has no idea how old it is.

Some of the finished wool is still-dyed in Bancroft, but most of it now is sent to Hamilton to dyeing plants. Until recently, though, a line of colorful skeins hung out to dry was a familiar sight at the mill.

There have been many changes in wool processing since the advent of electricity, but Mr. Fuller says he still finds water power has its advantages. "There is no maintenance to water-power. Once you have the thing set up it's extremely cheap."

KEATING WILL RUN

NEW YORK (AP) — Republican Senator Kenneth B. Keating said Tuesday he will seek re-election independently on the national party ticket headed by Senator Barry Goldwater in the Nov. 3 United States general election. He told a press conference that "I cannot in good conscience conceal my convictions behind a facade of conformity disguised as unity."

Service Clubs Hear Talk on Cement Plant

PICTON (Staff) — Local Kiwanians were guests Tuesday noon of the Picton Rotary Club at their weekly meeting. A combined attendance of the two service clubs, some 90 to 95 members gathered to hear Britarian's guest speaker Robt. D. MacLean, Executive Vice President and General Manager of the Lake Ontario Portland Cement Co. Mr. MacLean was introduced by Bill Barron, local manager of the L.O.P.C. Co. Mr. MacLean in opening his talk to the service clubs spoke briefly on activities concerning construction at the Picton plant. He said the Company was most interested in putting their business on a sound footing for continued long term employment of local workers. He stated also that the Company would do all in their power to prevent the plant from becoming a nuisance to the community, as far as this was concerned and that they want a safe plant for their employees.

Mr. MacLean in referring to the new static dust collector to be installed at the plant said that even though dust from both kilns will be directed to the one stack that everything they could do will be done to eliminate the dust problem.

Mr. MacLean recently returned from a tour to Russia which was organized for Canadian business men. Their tour began from London, England, April 28 this year. There were 40 individuals in the tour party and Russia's largest cement plant was visited as well as the world's largest power plant located on the Volga River. Throughout Mr. MacLean's talk he illustrated his points of interest with many fine color slides taken during the tour. Of particular interest were some scenes of Moscow's famous May Day parade. The party of business men broke into groups and on their arrival in Moscow. Some were interested in power, others in finance and construction etc.

Mr. MacLean said that all over the city of Moscow one could see great cranes involved in the heavy construction program taking place in that city. Building was going on everywhere, he said. Tuesday evening a special welcome party was held from 5 to 8 p.m. in Mr. MacLean's honor at the Prince Edward Yacht Club, some 20 guests being invited.

Boy Wounded Accidentally By Brother

PICTON (Staff) — Tuesday morning Keith Allen Fraser, age 13 of Cherry Valley was seriously wounded by a bullet when a 22 rifle was accidentally discharged by his 15-year-old brother Dennis. The teenage boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fraser. They were playing at the rear of their home which is located just west of Cherry Valley when Keith was at the time firing a bow and arrow and had just shot an arrow which he was retrieving when the bullet struck him in the back and lodged in or near the lung. The boy was immediately rushed to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital where he underwent a preliminary examination and was then taken by Bond's ambulance to Kingston General Hospital for surgery.

At the time the shot was fired the boys were approximately 150 feet apart, the .22 cal. "Ranger" rifle was owned by Dennis who received it as a gift last Christmas.

CADETS ON TRIP

The 13 Jamaican army cadets who have spent the past five weeks at Camp Picton are having a week's break to go sight seeing.

They have joined 17 more Jamaican cadets, who have completed their exchange training program at Camp Ipperwash on Lake Huron. The group met at the weekend and spent Monday at Niagara Falls. They will visit Toronto, Ottawa and Camp Petawawa before they arrive next Friday for a day in Kingston.

CRASH KILLS SIX

BEAVER FALLS, Pa. (AP)— Six persons were killed and three injured Tuesday night in a head-on collision of two cars on the Pennsylvania Turnpike. A state trooper said one of the cars, eastbound and carrying six persons, crossed the dividing barrier of the toll road and collided head-on with a westbound car carrying three persons.

Milford Mill Damaged by Dynamite Blast

PICTON (Staff) — A blast explosion caused considerable damage Tuesday afternoon to a mill belonging to Mr. Murray Hicks of Milford. The blasting was being done in front of the building to provide a hole large enough to accomodate new gas tanks, which are to be installed. Although the immediate blast area was covered the explosion evidently carried along a seam of underground rock to the building. The mill is of cement block construction and the whole front of the building was damaged, blocks loosened and windows broken. The blast took place at about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Hicks stated Tuesday that the original plan was to place the tanks in front of his store nearby. In view of the occurrence he is happy that it was the mill that took the damage. No estimate as to cost of repairing the damage was given.

PRODUCTION RISING

W. S. Kennedy Jones, trade and industry minister of Nova Scotia, said Tuesday the value of the province's manufacturing industry this year should exceed $500,000,000. He said the value of factory shipments during the first three months of this year was 15 per cent ahead of the first quarter in 1963.

Charge Woman Kidnapped Her Boyfriend

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP)— Police pulled a nightgown-clad woman from atop an automobile hood Monday and charged her with kidnapping the driver — a former boyfriend.

Pretty Joyce Lafevers, 23, was being held Tuesday under $10,000 bond in the kidnapping of Grady Steen, 27. Both are from Kannapolis, N.C.

Stacey L. Bigham, 25, a Kannapolis man the Federal Bureau of Investigation says aided Miss Lafevers in abducting Steen, also was charged with kidnapping.

Steen told police he slipped out of a motel about 6 a.m. with the keys to a car Miss Lafevers had rented, and her pistol.

Miss Lafevers followed, Steen said, her face-trimmed nightie aflutter. When he rolled up the car windows and locked the doors, Miss Lafevers climbed on the hood and beat on the windshield.

Steen said he drove off slowly, Miss Lafever clinging to the windshield wiper and screaming for him to stop.

The pair was arrested when Steen stopped at a traffic light. Steen told police Miss Lafever's wrath was aroused when he spurned her love. He said she told him she would kill him if he didn't marry her. Bigham wanted $5,000, Steen said, and threatened to kill him if the ransom was not paid.

The Venezuelan President Who's 'Like an Italian Cop'

Since the 1958 revolt overthrew dictator Marcos Perez Jimenez, Venezuela has been trying to make democratic government work. In this story, Latin American affairs expert Paul Kidd traces the careers of the nation's two key revolutionaries.

By PAUL KIDD

CARACAS (CP)—Guns bristle around Miraflores Palace in downtown Caracas and the credentials of every person entering the building are meticulously checked by steely-eyed security police.

Inside, President Raul Leoni goes about his job of running Venezuela.

After the five-year occupancy of the palace by his dynamic predecessor, Romulo Betancourt, the recently elected 58-year-old president has yet to make an impact on either his fellow-Venezuelans or on other Latin Americans.

Betancourt did both—with a political bang—as he strove to show the rest of the hemisphere that Venezuela's way to progress was better than Cuba's.

Through quiet, efficient administration, Leoni is continuing Betancourt's policies.

Venezuela's experiment is the same age as the Cuban one.

At almost the same time as Castro was seizing power in Cuba, stocky, ex - Communist Betancourt became President of Venezuela.

DICTATOR JAILED

Betancourt, whose moderate Democratic Action party was held together by the backroom political expertise of Leoni, began his presidential term with heavy handicaps.

When he took power, Venezuela had just emerged from nine years of misrule by dictator Marcos Perez Jimenez who had left behind economic chaos and now is in jail on embezzlement charges involving $13,000,000 of public funds.

At Betancourt's grim inauguration in 1959, tanks and armored cars rumbled along Caracas streets while leftist agitators threatened mob violence and army officers talked openly of pulling a coup.

But Don Romulo, who had spent years in prison and exile fighting the two autocrats and army rule that had strangled the country, was made of tough political stuff.

He coped with four military revolts, an assassination attempt which left his hands scarred for life, economic depression and the Castro - supported Armed Forces of National Liberation.

Finally, after the national elections last December, the legitimate transfer of power from Betancourt to Leoni took place.

Before the presidential ceremony, however, National Guardsmen and policemen spent 50 hours combing the labyrinthine alleys of Caracas slums, falling hundreds of suspected terrorists. Then the army moved in and cordoned off a 50-block area around Congress.

Against this tense background, Leoni was presented by Betancourt with the symbols of office—the red, yellow and blue presidential sash and the key to the repository of Liberator Simon Bolivar's remains — to become the first democratically elected president to succeed a chief of state who had gone the constitutional route in Venezuela.

Since Venezuela became a nation in 1830, the Latin American nation has had 26 constitutions and more than 50 rebellions. Of its 25 presidents, three fifths have been military men.

The political careers of Betancourt and Leoni, in many ways, parallel each other.

BOTH DEPORTED

As students at the National University in Caracas, both were leftists and conspired against the dictatorship of Juan Vicente Gomez. During this period, Betancourt joined the Communist Party, but left after two or three years.

Both men were subsequently jailed, clapped in irons, and deported.

Their fruit - vending partner ship developed into a political partnership and, in 1941, the pair launched the Democratic Action movement as a clandestine party.

Then, in 1945, with a group of young military officers, they overthrew the dictatorship.

Betancourt became president during the three-year period of provisional government, and when, in 1948, the Democratic Action party won national elections, Leoni became minister of labor.

A few months later, however, Democratic Action was thrown out of office by its former military allies. Leoni went back to jail while Betancourt went into exile.

Finally, in 1958, after students and navy officers overthrew the military-backed Perez Jimenez dictatorship, Betancourt was elected President and Leoni president of the Senate.

Both Betancourt and Leoni are devoted family men — but there the resemblance ends.

Betancourt, whom I met on an earlier visit to Venezuela, is hard-driving and almost arrogant.

Leoni, on the other hand, is prudent and friendly.

As one Western diplomat put it: "Betancourt, when he was president, was like a spotlight—you were either with him or against him.

"Leoni is like an Italian cop—you can always talk him into concessions."

Betancourt is currently on a hard-earned informal tour of Europe; later, he plans to write a book.

As a former chief executive, he is guaranteed a Senate seat by the constitution, but his future role in the Leoni administration is uncertain.

In a country where presidents usually left office with millions of dollars stacked away in foreign banks, Betancourt is considered a relatively "poor" man with total assets of less than $175,000 — a reflection of his scrupulous political honesty.

Despite the success of the Betancourt administration, however, the December election lowered Democratic Action's strength from 49 per cent in 1958 to its current 33 per cent.

The second-ranking Christian Democrats, who were part of Betancourt's coalition government, boosted their tally from 15 per cent to 21 per cent. They then refused to join the new government.

Leoni, after failing to form a coalition with the remaining four moderate parties, appointed independents to 12 of the 15 cabinet posts.

The result has been a workable Congress—from which the Communists are barred by law—with the Christian Democrats so far playing a responsible opposition role.

If Leoni continues the way he has started, he could well become Venezuela's second democratically elected president to finish his term.

Tomorrow: Government's good record doesn't win it many friends.

EXPERIMENT IN DEMOCRATIC RULE — Raul Leoni, seen here making a speech in Caracas' Miraflores Palace, is Venezuela's first democratically-elected president. Twenty-six constitutions and more than 50 rebellions form part of Venezuela's history. In December, 1963, Leoni succeeded Romulo Betancourt, the first chief of state to leave office constitutionally. However, elections at that time showed that only 33 per cent of the people supported the Democratic Action party. (CP Photo)

Cancer Research Discovery May Fix Cause of Leukemia

WASHINGTON (AP)—A new cancer research development which a U.S. Senate group says foreshadows a likely major breakthrough in pinpointing the cause of the highly fatal leukemia of childhood became known in detail today.

The Senate appropriations committee referred to the development in general terms in a report released Tuesday. Commenting on it and other scientific findings reported in recent hearings, the committee said:

"Effective methods of prevention and cure (of leukemia) seem distinct possibilities in the light of several observations, some old and some new."

Perhaps the key finding — made so recently that the scientists involved have not yet had their findings published in medical literature — is that virus-like particles found in the blood of some human victims of leukemia can apparently be made to "grow" in laboratory test-tubes.

The development — climaxing three years of effort dating from the time when such particles were first found in leukemia patients — is a necessary prelude to pinning down whether the particles are truly viruses and whether, indeed, they are directly or indirectly involved in causing human leukemia.

It could also be a first step towards trying to develop a vaccine against leukemia.

Officials of the U.S. National Cancer Institute supplied the information when asked by a reporter what the Senate committee was referring to in its report when it said:

"The most profound and exciting research development reported to the committee in this year's (institute appropriations) hearings is the likelihood of a major breakthrough in the identification of the causal agent for at least one form of cancer: The highly fatal leukemia of childhood . . . (there is) most authoritative testimony that a viral causation of leukemia is very close to full, scientific proof."

The Senate committee gave its views in a report to the Senate recommending a $143,011,000 appropriation for the National Cancer Institute plus $10,000,000 more for the institute's special cancer - virus research program.

Institute officials made available to a reporter their latest summary statement of the status of leukemia treatment and research. The summary said Virus-like particles now can be demonstrated in at least 30 per cent of human sufferers from the acute leukemia of childhood.

Chicago Suburb Relativley Calm

DIXMOOR, Ill. (AP) — Tension in this racially troubled community eased this morning after an evening relatively free of violence.

"In contrast with the last two nights, this is like a lullaby," said Sheriff Richard Ogilvie of Cook County, who commanded 80 police at the scene.

The hope was that the rioting that began Sunday had run its course.

It had resulted in some 50 persons injured, heavy property damage and 70 persons arrested in the six-block area in the largely Negro suburbs of Dixmoor and Harvey south of Chicago.

The only blot on the peace Tuesday night was a fire at a golf course club house near the trouble centre.

Titan 2 Rocket Damaged by Lightning Bolt

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) Lightning, possibly a series of quick-striking flashes, damaged a Titan 2 rocket and some ground systems on the Gemini launch complex, apparently wiping out any chance of a two-man Gemini orbital flight this year.

It was the first recorded incident of lightning damaging a rocket at Cape Kennedy. An investigation was launched to determine what caused the bolts to hit the normally lightning proof pad.

Officials said Tuesday the mishap probably rules out until early 1965 the three - orbit flight planned for astronauts Virgil I. Grissom and John W. Young. It had been scheduled for December.

A spokesman said there was no visible damage to the Titan 2 or the ground systems—that apparently all of it took the form of short-circuits and other electrical-type damage to electronics and delicate electrical components.

"There's no way of telling now just how we will even tell how much and what kind of damage was sustained," he said. "We've got 300 miles of wiring on the launch complex. Some of it is used only for emergency situations. We'll have to do a lot of checking—because this has to be man-rated launch vehicle and a man-rated complex."

The storm struck at night when only a small maintenance crew was on the complex. No one was hurt.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1964

MEETING WESTERN MPs is Hastings County Dairy Princess Linda Gunning, being introduced by President Bob Phillips (left) to C. O. Cooper (PC—Rosetown-Biggar) and D. R. Gundlock (PC—Lethbridge). In all, four Conservative members attended the official fair opening. Not shown are Rodney Webb (PC—Hastings-Frontenac) and Douglas Alkenbrack (PC—Prince Edward-Lennox).

Linda Gunning, 17, Tweed District Farm Girl, Is Dairy Princess of County

She won the honor last evening in the milking competition as part of junior activities at the Belleville Fair. Four county girls competed for the honor, including last year's winner, Mrs. Isabel Shaw of Eldorado.

Miss Gunning will now represent Hastings at the Canadian National Exhibition in the all-Ontario competition to decide the Ontario Dairy Queen. Last night's winner received a cash prize of $20, a flight bag, and tiara.

Judges for the milking competition were Jack Bain, director of dairying, Ralph Banbury, Northumberland County agricultural representative, and Phil Flagler, CBQ farm director.

PLENTY OF PRACTICE

Miss Gunning has had plenty of practice at operating a milking machine.

Her father, Lorne Gunning, has a herd of 37 Holsteins and she frequently assists in the milking chores.

But in last night's fair competition she had to switch breed allegiance. Instead of a Holstein she was called upon to milk a Jersey.

But the actual milking is only part of the competition. The contestants are called upon to give a short address on their county, prepare their milking machine and wash up after the milking is done.

Other contestants in the competition were Jean Rose of Frankford, and Mrs. Jane Hamilton, Trenton.

CNE Opens For 86th Time On Friday

TORONTO (CP) — Fall fair time is here and the grandpappy —the Canadian National Exhibition — will open its gates for the 86th time Friday for the fun and excitement of thousands of Canadians and visitors from all over the world.

The CNE is a showcase of Canada's agricultural wealth, the pulse beat of industry and international trade.

Lieutenant - Governor Earl Rowe of Ontario will officially open the exhibition. It closes Sept. 7.

Future Crooks Can Be Spotted Say Experts

LONDON (AP)—Two American criminologists asserted Tuesday that it is possible to spot a future crook on the day a child begins schooling.

In a paper to the first international congress of social psychiatry, a husband - and - wife team of the Harvard Law School, Sheldon and Eleanor Glueck, said the budding criminal can be ascertained by means of a test.

The test made up of questions put to parents and children enables the researcher to place his finger on a child with a latent criminal potential. The test is 80 to 90 per cent accurate, the Glucks said.

Eleanor Glueck, who read the paper, said the mother plays a determining role in whether a child is to become a delinquent.

The three vital factors which determine the mother's influences on the child are the amount of supervision she is giving her child, the amount of discipline she is able to infuse into it and the amount of cohesion there exists in the family.

TESTS SHOW DIFFERENCE

The Glueks said their method of testing boys, for instance, could establish whether the child who pulled a girl's hair or threw ink pellets was a potential delinquent or just high spirited.

Of 300 American boys tested in 1953, 23 out of 27 who were started as potential delinquents had become serious and persistent criminals by 1963. On the other hand, only seven of 193 predicted non - delinquents turned to crime later, she said.

"It is terribly important that a mother should remain close to her children. That raises the whole question of working mothers.

"If mother goes out to work there has got to be a substitute," she said.

Will Not Pay Salary Boost

TORONTO (CP)—William Allen, Metropolitan Toronto chairman, said Tuesday Metro intends to disobey a provincial order to pay salary increases to all shorthand writers in the county and magistrate's courts here.

Lieutenant - Governor Earl Rowe signed an order-in-council Aug. 6 which ordered $250 to $300 annual increases, retroactive to Jan. 1, to be paid to the shorthand writers who are paid by individual municipalities but who are provincial employees.

Mr. Allen said Metro's budget has no money to pay for the increases. Metro was not consulted by the attorney-general who recommended the increases.

FIRE IN THE RAIN—Joyce Grant and Jean Histed, majorettes with Chapman Dance School, warm up fire-baton twirling in downpour before performing before Fair grandstand.

Despite Heavy Shower Fair Attendance Shows Increase Over Last Year

The weatherman this morning said:

"FINE."

And a score of Belleville Fair officials echoed: "Fine . . . just fine."

The cynicisms meant a multitude—the weather was ideal and Fair organizers were jubilant.

They had good reason to be that way.

Coincidence never was more bitter.

In 1963 the second day of the Belleville Fair was washed out by torrential rains which started in early in the morning.

Yesterday—again the second day—the gala event appeared virtually cancelled by steady downpours.

"Oh, well," commented one Fair director glumly: "At least we've set two records. Monday's attendance was a record over last year's opener. And today it didn't start raining until noon."

Rain or not, some 4,000 persons paid admissions to the Fair Grounds. This compared with 1,300 during the same fateful day last year.

Officials confessed they were taken aback with the public response—despite the weather.

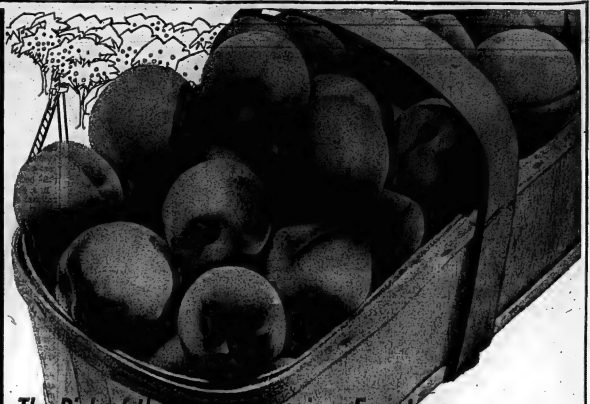
The rains also brought disappointment to Fair directors.

With a big gate Monday, prospects were for a new record this year. However, fair officials now confess the likelihood of setting new attendance figures is well-night impossible.

Chrysler Shows 130 New Models

NEW YORK (AP)—Chrysler Corp. today unveiled the most diversified line in its history as it became the first auto maker to show its 1965 models to the press.

Lynn A. Townsend, Chrysler president, told reporters at the opening of a four-day preview that Chrysler spent more than $300,000,000 in developing its 130 models in nine series. This compared with $125,000,000 spent in engineering and styling the 1964 line.



CHAMPIONSHIP SQUARE DANCERS at Belleville Fair last night were these Prince Edward County young folk, shown with fiddler Tom Bronson of Tweed. They outstepped sets from Peterborough, Hastings and Northumberland in that order to win the championship. Winners are, from left, Sharon Hall, Laird Ferguson, Barbara Palmer, Gary Townsend, Lyle VanClief, Barbara Hall, Harold Corfield, Brenda Ousterhout and Phil Edwards.

Cyprus From the Turkish Side

A View From the Castle

St. Hilarion Castle in northern Cyprus has been in the hands of Turkish-Cypriots since fighting with Greek-Cypriots began last December. In this story, Canadian Press reporter Peter Buckley tells what the war looks like from the Turkish side of a valley near the edge of Karmi Forest.

By PETER BUCKLEY

ST. HILARION, Cyprus (CP) — The single rifle shot, after a few minutes of peace, echoed around the decayed walls of this fairytale castle in northern Cyprus.

Crickets stopped chirping for a second, then resumed their chorus under the hot sun.

In a cool whitewashed castle chamber, the Turkish Cypriot commander and the young Canadian officer looked across the table at each other.

"That's from your people, not the Greeks," 24-year-old Lieut. Jean-Guy Bernard of Quebec City said mildly.

"No, it's from the Greeks," replied Osman, the Turk.

The two men looked at each other, grinned slightly at the challenge and reached behind them to a small stand.

Osman picked up a modern telephone, colored a pale green, and spoke briefly in Turkish with a front-line position outside the castle. "It's shots from them (the Greeks) to the left hill," he reported.

Bernard took the receiver from a battery-operated army telephone and checked with the sergeant at the small Canadian outpost directly below the castle. "You're right," he told Osman.

MINOR GREEK OFFENSIVE

Although he had lost the game, Bernard seemed content. It meant the Turkish-Cypriots with whom he had been liaison officer for two months had still not returned fire that day.

Heavy Greek-Cypriot forces stationed across the mountain pass in Karmi Forest had begun a minor offensive during the night, setting up four new fortified positions on a previously unoccupied hill and threatening a supply line between the all-Turkish village of Temblos on the northern foothills of the Kyrenian Mountains and historic St. Hilarion Castle, a Turkish stronghold 2,500 feet almost straight up the mountain above Temblos.

The Turks had replied with fire during the night, but the more than 400 rounds which blasted out in daylight all came from the Greek positions.

Bernard, whose job it is to help reduce tension by keeping in close touch with the Turks in St. Hilarion, seemed relieved at the Turkish-Cypriot patience. On this occasion, it would be Mr. Canadian counter-part Osman himself in Karmi Forest who would be trying to persuade the Greek commander to stop firing.

St. Hilarion has been in Turkish hands since trouble between Greeks and Turks in Cyprus blew up last December.

It seems to have as much a symbolic as a tactical value. It is the administrative and supply base Turkish forces protecting the western side of Turkish - held Kyrenia pass, which carries the main road north through the mountains from Nicosia to the resort town of Kyrenia on the Mediterranean.

But the castle itself does not overlook the road, and presumably it could be circumvented by a Greek-Cypriot force intent on taking the pass—provided the Makarios government should make the political decision to attack.

The current firing brought an end to almost a week of relative quiet in the mountains. There would be no foreign visitors on the front line that day.

Even in quiet spells, Turkish security is strong. No photographer can aim his camera at a Turkish fighter because, they say, the Greek-Cypriots would take reprisals against the man's family if they got an opportunity. In cases where a man's history is explored, vital statistics are altered. Only a first name is used and even that is often an alias.

Osman said he was formerly a physical education instructor. A short, trimly muscular man of about 35, he was commander of the Turkish fighting sector around St. Hilarion.

SAYS FORCE IS ANSWER

Another Turkish - Cypriot in the room was Mustafa, older by about 10 years than Osman and heavier by a good 50 pounds. Mustafa was the equivalent of a brigadier — commander of fighters in the entire mountain, including St. Hilarion.

Young boys — non-combatant "runners" in their mid-teens — drifted in and out of the room with messages or glasses of tepid lemonade while the two leaders talked about the Cyprus situation.

The Greeks in the forest encampment opposite "have much more weapons, more men, more equipment than we," Osman commented in halting English.

Could he use more men?

"There is a military rule that you can have too many men in a position, after that they are in the way of each other," he replied. "I have the fighters that I need."

Once the Greeks claim they could overrun the Turkish positions in an hour, what hope do the Turkish fighters have?

"We try to protect ourselves, and in other things we wait for the United Nations to help," Osman said.

But Mustafa, breaking a morose silence, interjected: "I believe that the UN will ever succeed here There is only one solution—force, force, force."

He and the men at the table to emphasize the word.

SNOW WHITE'S CASTLE

The two Turks donned soft wool caps with small peaks and led a tour of the castle while shots peppered the Turkish positions beyond the walls, a few hundred feet below.

Walt Disney got his inspiration for the castle in "Snow White" from St. Hilarion—not the somewhat melancholy ruins of today, but the proud fortress whose tangled history dates back to the 10th century and beyond.

From a distance of several miles in the valley below, St. Hilarion looks imposing still. The rocky peak on which it was built stands out clearly against the cloudless Mediterranean sky, enough of the shell remains to provide a silhouette of haunting grandeur.

Through the gate, the crumbling walls outline the extent of the original fortress, a descending series of chambers and fortifications from the very peak to a point nearly 900 feet below. Near the peak, the agile Osman led the way to a rocky ledge. On this side, the mountain fell away sharply.

From the ledge, the Greek positions established the previous night could be seen plainly through binoculars. Mustafa suggested, half in jest, that they could be picked off with stones from above.

After studying the new positions carefully, Osman led the way back over makeshift wooden stairs, through more than a dozen ruined chambers and finally down a rocky path to a series of ancient buildings at the foot of the castle.

SEEK PARTITION

In the headquarters room, Mustafa returned to his insistence on force, this time in connection with Turkish Cypriot demands for "taxsim" (partition of the island) to separate Greeks and Turks, a move roundly opposed by the Greeks.

"If we use force they will accept it," Mustafa said. "If we don't they will never give in."

How could the 120,000 Turks in Cyprus hope to use force effectively against the 460,000 Greeks, unless Turkey sends an invasion force?

"If trouble comes, it will come all over the island, not just a few places," he said optimistically. "Then they must divide and will become weak." But there could be no return to former conditions because of the hatred that has developed between the races, Mustafa added.

Back in the main tent of the Canadian liaison group below the castle, Lieut. Bernard described the life of the Turkish fighter as he had seen it daily for eight weeks.

The men, he said, come from all over the island and with rare exceptions serve without pay. The Turkish community looks after their families. And the fighters are generally free to come and go as they please.

A typical fighter — Bernard said he was thinking of a 22-year-old farmer named Mehmet — spends two nights out of three on guard duty.

RATS WELL

In the daytime, Mehmet works to improve the fortifications—well-built pits dug among the trees and rocks guarded by bags filled with sand and rock.

Mehmet wears single - piece coveralls of a color approaching dark yellow, with black hunting-style boots and a wool cap with a pompom on top. His rifle is old but in firing condition.

He sleeps 10 feet from his front-line position, curling up in his own blanket under a tree.

He receives a daily ration of 11 strong Turkish cigarettes and usually wants more. Once every 10 days, in rotation, his group holds a party behind the front line, drinking whisky and vodka and singing Turkish songs accompanied by a flute.

Mehmet eats well compared with many Turkish refugee villagers. His diet includes the traditional kebab of lamb roasted on a skewer, meat balls with a bland cheese sauce, French-fried potatoes, fresh tomatoes and cucumbers tough pieces of liver, eggs and endless draughts of black Turkish coffee and tinned fruit juice.

His food is brought to the front lines by donkey, the same method frequently used to bring supplies to St. Hilarion itself from Nicosia and the Turkish-held villages closer to the mountains.

"He has no doubt at all that the Turks will win, that some day Turkey will send an invasion force to help them," Bernard said.

CANADIAN GO-BETWEEN — Lieut. Jean - Guy Bernard, 24, of Quebec City surveys the territory from a vantage point at St. Hilarion castle where he serves with the United Nations peace-keeping force. His job is to restrain the Turkish force in St. Hilarion from using force while his Canadian counterpart in Karmi Forest tries to dissuade the Greek commander from doing the same. (CP Photo)

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Fire Chief Vance, race chairman of the Belleville Fair Board, and his able assistants, expect the largest crowd to witness a harness race meet in Belleville to be in the grandstand tomorrow night.

The outstanding feature, purse and trophy-wise, is the inaugural running of the Black Diamond Cheese Stake Race with its handsome trophy and purse of $1,360.

This brings together twelve of the outstanding colts of the district which will leave the barrier in fields of six each in the qualifying heats.

Four of them will return to the stables disappointed. The remaining eight will go to the post in the third heat with the trophy, purse and glory waiting ahead of the wire.

While the Stake Race should be productive of keen competition, it will not steal all the racing spotlight. Twenty-four other topflight pacers and trotters will have something to say about that.

These comprise the field for three other two-heat heats events and as far as racing thrills, outstanding driving and photo finishes go, they could outshine the efforts of the youngsters in the featured Stake Race.

For included in the field are the horses that have made the weekly meets of the Quinte Driving and Riding Club such successes this summer.

The majority of the favorites of the Saturday night meets will be here," Chief Vance said. "And," he added, "there might be one or more surprise entries."

WRESTLING

I'm told that Gentleman Jim Hady has a choice of two things in his return bout with "The Beast," in Memorial Arena Friday night.

They are, give up the pleasant and well-earned title of "Gentleman" or insist that the Beast's manager and ringside helper-outer be muzzled to a ring-post during the action.

But after what happened last Friday night, Hady can scarcely be blamed for insisting that the Beast's buddy be handcuffed, tied to a post or have his suspenders removed so he would have to keep his hands in his trousers pockets to hold the pants up.

With that done Hady could forget (not that he will) that he is called "Gentleman" and proceed to take the bear-hugging skin-lilted Beast apart in revenge for what happened a week ago.

Nearly 300 infuriated fans protested long and loud after the Beastian biddy-buddy reached out and grabbed Hady's leg to trip him when he had the Beast on the way out. The hairy one grabbed the advantage and won the fall and bout.

Referee Sam Gotter, after a brief hesitation, finally made up his mind the fall was legitimate and gave it to the Beast. Hady immediately insisted on a return match—and got it.

But it won't be easy. This ex-sheepherder from Sicily may be uncouth and seemingly dependent on his manager who gives him wrestling lessons between bouts, but he's nobody's pushover in the ring. He is short, squat, hairy and as strong as a bull.

However, five gets you ten, you'll see a different Hady in the ring Friday night. He's been simmering all week and will reach the boil about ten o'clock fishday evening.

Those shufflin' hillbillies, Rip and Chuck, are back again, this time tangling with Bob Leipler, and Sweet Daddy Siki's buddy, Duke Noble. Eric Froehler, the likeable German, will renew his feud with the Great Mephisto in the opener.

Americans Appoint Cup Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Chuck McKinley and Dennis Ralston, the two-man combination which wrested the Davis Cup from Australia last year, were named today to head a seven-man team for defence of the trophy Sept. 25-27.

The squad also includes Frank Froehling, Marty Riessen, Arthur Ashe, Jr., Charley Pasarell and Clark Graebner.

Ashe, 21, is the first Negro ever named to a challenge round squad although he has been included on preliminary teams.

The team must be cut to four players by Sept. 15.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Canebora, Canada's horse of the year and triple crown winner of 1963, returned to the races at Fort Erie Tuesday and took up right where he left off when a quarter-crack sidelined him in late May.

The big, dark son of Canadian Champ ran away with the featured seventh race and gave every indication he'll be the horse to beat in the upcoming Niagara Handicap.

Canebora, with Avelino Gomez up, ran away with the race in the stretch and completed the seven-furlong distance on the turf course in 1.26 4-5, just two seconds off the track record. He returned $2.20, $2.80 and $2.30.

Last year Canebora won four of 10 races and became the first horse to earn over $100,000 in one season racing exclusively in Canada.

The daily double of So War and Vertex Ruler paid $67.50.

Rickey Makes Decision

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Branch Rickey, who guided St. Louis Cardinals to their first pennant in 1926, has been tabbed again, it seems, to bring them a long-sought championship.

Although the 82-year-old baseball patriarch remains only a special consultant by name for the Cardinals, he clearly has emerged the decision - maker after the front office shakeup of the last two days.

Club owner August A. Busch, Jr., conceded Tuesday he had asked general manager Bing Devine, 47, and business manager Art Routzong, 52, to resign, but denied Rickey had initiated the changes. However, in an interview with Robert Burnes, sports editor of the St. Louis Globe - Democrat, Busch indicated the great influence the bushy-browed Rickey holds.

"I felt it was time for a change," said Busch, whose Cardinals have not won a pennant in 18 years, the last seven under Devine. "I consulted with Branch after I made up my mind. Rickey argued against making the change. When he was convinced that I had made up my mind, I asked him for a recommendation on a successor."

Rickey recommended Bob Howsam, former general manager of Denver in the American Association. Howsam assumed the business manager job immediately is expected to step into the general manager's spot after he has "learned the ropes."

Ab DeMarco Makes Reds Hall of Fame

NORTH BAY (CP) — Ab DeMarco of North Bay, who twice led New York Rangers in scoring during his career in the National Hockey League, will be inducted into the Providence Reds' Hockey Hall of Fame at Providence, R.I., Oct. 9, it was learned Tuesday.

DeMarco began his pro career at Providence in the American Hockey League. He played with four NHL clubs — New York, Toronto Maple Leafs, Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins — before returning to the minors.

In the latter part of his career he played with Cleveland Barons and Buffalo Bisons of the AHL and then returned here to play senior hockey before retiring. He won the AHL scoring title one season while with Buffalo.

Juniors Lombanks Tonight

Tweed Lombanks and Belleville Ellis Juniors will resume their battle for the B. and D. softball title in Madoc tonight when they meet in the fourth game of their four-of-seven series.

Lombanks lead the set 2-1 and a win for the Juniors is almost a "must" tonight if they hope to capture the crown and Bill Ott Trophy.

Ellis' took the series opener but Tweed has bounced back with two victories in succession. The Juniors have won most of the loop's trophies to date but Tweed has high hopes of taking the playoff title to the village.

No dates have been set for remaining games since both clubs are also tied up in OASA playdowns.

Tonight's game in Madoc will start at 8.15 p.m.

TREASURE FILM

Rolf Blomberg, Swedish explorer, writer and cameraman, joins an expedition which is searching for inca treasure in Ecuador in September.

About the most unhappy person in the National League today is manager Alvin Dark of San Francisco Giants.

Not so much because his team dropped a 1-0, fourth game loss to Cincinnati Reds, although it cost them a chance to edge up on first-place Philadelphia Phillies, but the way in which it was lost.

Dark claims the only run of the game was scored following deliberate interference by Vada Pinson of the Reds in breaking up a double play by waving his arms in front of Giant shortstop Jose Pagan, forcing him to throw wild to first base.

Dark protested so strongly he was tossed out of the game, and still isn't convinced he's wrong.

HELD EDGE

The loss cost the Giants an opportunity to gain ground on the Phillies, who maintained their five-game lead despite a 4-3 low in 16 innings to Chicago Cubs.

Joey Amalfitano's two - run double won it for the Cubs in a five-hour and 23-minute struggle which was the first to go past the 12:30 a.m. local time curfew since league president Warren Giles lifted the ban to allow all games to be played to a decision.

St. Louis Cardinals, meanwhile, moved into fourth place as Ray Sadecki posted his 15th victory in a 5-2 triumph over Houston Colts. Milwaukee Braves' Denny Lemaster fourhit Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 and Joe Christopher slammed a homer, two triples and a double in New York Mets' 7-3 walloping of Pittsburgh Pirates.

Amalfitano put an end to the Cubs - Phillies' marathon with two out in the 16th when he doubled after Andre Rodgers singled and pinch-hitter Dick Bertell walked. The Cubs needed both runs as Philadelphia catcher Clay Dalrymple, who had committed a costly two-base error earlier, homered in the bottom of the 16th.

WON OVER GAME

Sadecki won his own game in the seventh inning when he tripled and scored the run that broke a 2-2 tie on Lou Brock's single. Sadecki then turned the pitching over to Barney Schultz, who held the Colts in check the rest of the way.

Lemarter, bringing his record to 13-8, got the only runs he needed when Ed Bailey singled home two in the sixth inning after the Braves loaded the bases on an error. Lee Maye's single and a walk.

Christopher carried the load for the Mets, driving in three runs and scoring two. Ron Hunt chipped in with three hits in support of Al Jackson, who was tagged for a homer by Gene Oliver but extended New York's winning streak to three games.

Ryder Defends Marathon

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont. (CP) — Marathon swim coach Gus Ryder said today that marathon swimming is a "rough sport" which shouldn't be "condemned because you personally don't like it."

Answering detractors to the Canadian National Exhibition's 32-mile Lake Ontario swim, the former coach of Marilyn Bell and Cliff Lumsdon said: "I hear claims that marathon swimming is dangerous, cruel, inhuman, unnecessary."

"Yet there has never been a fatality in an organized marathon to my knowledge. Compare that to the figures for other fields—335 died in a soccer riot in Peru, 13 last year in boxing, about 60 a year in football. And about 40,000 last year on U.S. highways," he said in a published statement.

Toronto Controller William Dennison, a CNE sports committee member, called Tuesday for cancellation of the swim as "too gruelling and even dangerous."

But CNE officials said there was no chance that the swim, scheduled for Thursday, would be cancelled, although it could be postponed 24 hours if water conditions are not satisfactory.

The swim will begin here along part of the south shore of Lake Ontario which actually is part of the city of St. Catharines about 6 p.m. Thursday and it should take about 20 hours. Swimmers will finish at the CNE waterfront in Toronto, if any make it. The lake has been conquered by only five swimmers.

Saskatchewan Wins Willingdon

By JOHN SHORT

SASKATOON (CP) — The Saskatchewan Willingdon Cup team found strong winds a useful ally Tuesday as the team captured its first cup in 27 years of cycling.

Saskatchewan, which compiled a 36-hole total of 390 to 404, defending champion Alberta by eight shots, profited when winds gusted to nearly 30 miles an hour over the par-70, 6,338-yard Saskatoon Riverside layout. The breeze prevented any rival from launching an assault on the three-stroke lead the host province constructed during the first round of, the annual competition Monday.

Two shots behind Alberta was Ontario, with 800.

Two Saskatoon golfers shared honors in the 36-hole qualifying round for the match-play section of the Canadian amateur golf championships today. Ron Folk, medaled from the provincial team when he played badly during the final qualifying round, conquered the wind with a three-under-par 67 and tied Ed Ross for the 36-hole lead at 141.

Ross was joined in the team title chase by Keith Rever, Ernie Greenley of Regina and Jim Scissons of Saskatoon. Rever had a 144 total, Scissons 151 and Greenley 154.

B.C. FOURTH

British Columbia finished fourth, 18 shots out of third place. Nova Scotia had 617, Manitoba 618, Quebec 618 and a combined Prince Edward Island-New Brunswick team 634.

Leader of the Ontario team was defending Canadian amateur champ Nick Weslock of Toronto, who labored to 76 Tuesday for a 145 total despite an ailing back.

An 18-hole round was scheduled to open the Amateur today, with two rounds Thursday and Friday and 36-hole final Saturday.

Five Enter Senior OHA

DUNDAS, Ont. (CP) — At least five teams will compete in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series this season, which opens its 40-game schedule Oct. 16.

The five starters represented at a meeting Tuesday night were Guelph, Galt, Woodstock, Oakville and Welland. Each paid an entry fee of $40.

Fort Colborne, the sixth club in last year's series, was not represented at the meeting and a club official said it would be a doubtful starter. Port Colborne was given until Sept. 1 to post a performance bond of $1,000.

Stewart-Led Riders Thrash Bombers

Score Was 46-20

OTTAWA (CP)—Those with a passion for jumping to conclusions may well be looking down their noses at the Western Football Conference today.

After the way Ottawa Rough Riders kicked the stuffing out of Winnipeg Blue Bombers Tuesday night it could take a few convincing wins by WFC teams playing Big Four clubs to improve the image.

It wasn't that the 46-20 score in itself was all that humiliating. Trouble was Ottawa played only half a game to get it.

What probably worries Winnipeg most are the injuries that accompanied the defeat. Defensive back Dick Thornton was put out indefinitely with a fractured ankle in the first quarter while intercepting a Russ Jackson pass. End Farrell Funston left the game in the last quarter with torn ligaments and will be out at least one game.

Ottawa's win in the first interlocking game of the season moved Riders into a tie with Montreal Alouettes for the Eastern Conference leadership. The loss dropped Bombers to fourth place in the West.

Bomber quarterback Ken Ploen clicked nicely through the air in the first quarter to hit Funston who lateralled to Leo Lewis for a 64-yard touchdown. converted by George Fleming. Fleming added two field goals after Ottawa had evened things at 7-7 with a 46-yard pass-and-run touchdown from Jackson to Whit Tucker. Ron Racine kicked the convert, his first of five.

The second quarter added only a field goal by Racine to make things Winnipeg 13 Ottawa 10.

Ron Stewart changed everything for Ottawa in the second half, running wild with two touchdowns and inspiring Dave Thelen, Ted Watkins and Ken Lehmann to one each. Two singles by Ed Ulmer rounded out Ottawa's scoring.

Stewart led Ottawa in yardage through the air and on the ground. He carried 15 times for 83 yards and caught two passes for 93.

In the fourth quarter Hal Ledyard, who replaced Ploen, hit Billy Cooper for a 57-yard passand-run touchdown, converted by Fleming.

The Bombers had 11 first downs, half as many as Ottawa, and made 40 yards rushing compared with 154 for Riders. They completed 11 of 21 passes, gaining 238 yards, but had four intercepted. Riders passed 21 times, connecting on 10, for 244 yards.

Syracuse Chiefs slipped a notch from their prominence atop the International League standings Tuesday night as they dropped a doubleheader to lowly Columbus Jets 1-0 and 4-2.

The double loss allowed second-place Jacksonville Suns to creep up a game. They split their doubleheader with Buffalo Bisons, winning 9-7 before losing 5-3.

Jacksonville and Columbus were the only teams to better Syracuse. Doubleheaders were split in other scheduled games as well. Toronto Maple Leafs won 2-0 over Atlanta Crackers before losing 6-5 and Richmond Virginians won 1-0 from Rochester Red Wings before dropping a 7-0 nightcap.

Lead Way In Junior Net Contest

OTTAWA (CP) — A pair of American stars chalked up decisive victories Tuesday to lead the way into the fourth round of the boys 18-and-under singles at the Canadian open junior tennis championships.

Armistead Neely of Tampa, Fla., and Tom Karp of Los Angeles showed why they are seeded first and second among foreign players. Neely gained his fourth-round berth with a 6-0, 6-1 win over Dave Rollins of Vancouver, while Karp was disposing of Greg Harris of Vancouver 6-0, 6-0.

In a second - round match, John MacDonald of Montreal eliminated Ian Wright of Kingston 6-2, 6-0. Another Kingston boy, John McFarland, lost 6-1, 6-1 to George Taylor of Houston, Tex., in the 14-and-under class.

A heavy overnight rain followed by periodic downpours during the day resulted in postponement of nearly half of Tuesday's scheduled 75 matches. While the boys' 18-and-under event reached the fourth round, only one third-round match was played of the other seven singles events and most events did not get past the first round.

Discover Miracle Drug

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — A drug that was discovered accidentially and is effective in easing the pain of bursitis in human beings is being used at Fort Erie Race Track with excellent results.

The drug — dimethyl sulfoxide, known as DMSO — was discovered by an American research man, Stanley W Jacobs He spilled some on his hand and immediately had the taste in his mouth. When applied, the drug soaks right through the skin and enters directly into the bloodstream.

It has been mentioned in medical journals as being effective in easing the pain of bursitis and also as a treatment for bad burns.

"I've never seen anything work so well with sore shins on a horse," said veterinarian Dr. Donald Fishman.

DMSO is applied with a piece of cotton and simply swabbed over the sore shin. Horses that labored to walk before application, walk without trouble a half hour later.

White Sox Defeat Yankees; Orioles Win

By MURRA YCHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baltimore Orioles are flying again but they haven't reached Mickey Lolich's altitude.

The Orioles, recovering from two straight losses to New York Yankees, defeated Boston Red Sox 5-2 Tuesday night and maintained their 1½ game lead over Chicago White Sox in the American League pennant race.

Lolich took time out from a two-week hitch with the air force for a three-hit 1-0 Detroit Tiger shutout over Los Angeles Angels in the second game of a doubleheader. The Angels won the opener 1-0 behind the two-hit hurling by Dean Chance.

The 24-year-old lefty allowed three singles in the first inning, then held the Angels hitless the rest of the way for his 13th triumph against seven defeats.

Chance shot down the Tigers for his eighth shutout of the season and his seventh straight two-hit whitewash. The Angels' ace hasn't lost since July 1.

Elsewhere in the league, the White Sox nipped the Yankees 4-3 in 10 innings, Minnesota Twins whipped Washington Senators 6-1 and Cleveland Indians downed Kansas City Athletics 5-1 after losing 13-9.

The Tigers gave Lolich all the help he needed in the first inning. Jerry Lumpe singled, took second on an infield out and scored home on a single by Gates Brown. The Angels had loaded the bases with one out in their first on three singles, but Lolich got Leo Clinton on a foul pop and struck out Bob Perry.

Vic Power homered off Hank Aguirre in the second inning for the Angels' run in the opener. The only hits off Chance were singles by Brown in the first and Al Kaline in the sixth.

Norm Siebern and Boog Powell led the Orioles' attack, each banging a two-run double off Boston starter Bill Monbouquette.

The Yankees held a 3-0 lead over the White Sox until Floyd Robinson drove a three-run homer against Al Downing in the eighth. Chicago won the game with two out in the 10th on singles by Al Weis, Pete Ward and Mike Hershberger. The loss dropped the Yankees four games behind the Orioles.

Don Mincher belted his 17th and 18th homers, driving in four runs, as Camilo Pascual won his 13th game against nine losses for the Twins. Bob Allison slammed his 29th homer in the seventh.

Rookie Lois Tiant pitched his fifth complete game, recording his sixth triumph in eight decisions with a four-hitter over the Athletics. Fred Whitfield and Tito Francona hit solo homers in the Indians' fourth while Joe Azcue batted in two runs with a single and a double.

The Athletics unleased a 16-hit attack in the opener with Rocky Colavito lashing a three-run triple in the third and Jim Gentile getting a two-run homer in the fifth.

Box Office Rush

Al's Cole Fires Fan Furnace

By TED BLACKMAN

MONTREAL (CP) - The Alouettes are starting to form at the Montreal Autettes ticket office and Jim Trimble is beginning to prove his 1963 claim that he's "the best coach in Canadian football."

Not since the powerhouse years of 1954-56 has there been such scurrying for tickets. Fans are even eager to buy seats in the end zone, an area where only fools were thought to tread in the subsequent lean years.

And not since 1956, the Als last trip to the Grey Cup, have the Montrealers got off to such a fast start. That two victories in two games explains the rush on tickets for Thursday's home opener against Toronto.

But what is the explanation for the Als sudden success?

"I'll supply that," Trimble said Tuesday. "We've finally got a reliable quarterback, we've rid ourselves of those binding no-cut contracts, and were in better physical condition than any team in the country."

The quarterback is 26-year-old Vernon Cole, the last of more than 30 signal callers in past through Montreal since Sam Etcheverry was bounced in 1960. Although out of football for three years while in the U.S Air Force, the Als quickly arranged a trade with Winnipeg to acquire Cole's services.

"Cole's the man I want" says Trimble. "He's more intelligent than the others we've had, he can pass well, although he's not a picture passer, and he can run.

"But, the most important asset he has," Trimble adds, "is that he's a winner. Everybody says 'Wow, you won two games.' But Cole says 'So what, we're supposed to win."

Hastings Wins Peewee Opener

Hastings whipped Belleville 10 to 3 to take a 1-0 lead in the best of three OASA PeeWee Playdowns on their home diamond last night. The next game is slated for the CNRA next Thursday, night at 8.15.

Newall pitched the victory, allowing 3 hits, striking out 15 and walking 4.

Scott Reid was the loser. He was tagged for 15 hits, walked 8 and whiffed 5.

THE Arnold Palmer METHOD

Four-Time Winner of the Masters

PLAN YOUR ROUND AND LOWER YOUR SCORE

If you shoot about 90 for an average round of golf, clear-think your way into the low 80s — occasionally the high 70s.

First plan your round. Chances are that now you get about six pars in 18 holes. You probably get about 7 bogies, 4 double bogies and maybe 1 disastrous quadruple bogey.

Analyze what's needed to lower your score from 90 to 80. All you must do is to par one more hole. You can do that. Also change those double bogies to bogies and eliminate the bad hole.

If you are good enough to shoot 90, you are good enough to eliminate double bogies for the most part. Just think clearly on each hole and make up your mind that you won't go more than one over par. Here's what I mean

The hole is 530 yards, par 4. Probably you cannot reasonably reach it in two shots. Don't try. Just keep the ball in play. Two straight shots and you'll be about 30 yards short of the green (see illustration). All you must do then is hit the ball somewhere on the green and two-putt for your bogey. You might even approach for one putt and a par.

Just keep the ball in play and the bad hole and double bogies will vanish.

NEW! JUST PUBLISHED! "HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR PUTTING"! Here is Arnold Palmer's illustrated guide to putting stance, grip, line-up, stroke! Send 20c and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Arnold Palmer, c/o this newspaper. B-19

The Trots

TORONTO (CP)—Baron Hal, winless in 19 previous starts this year, upset 4-to-5 choice Northwood Butch by a head in the quinella feature of Tuesday night's harness racing program at Greenwood Raceway.

Owned by Milton Brown of Oshawa, Baron Hal, an 11-to-1 pick, lost, then regained the lead in the stretch from the 1-seeds from the Northwood stable of Pembroke.

Stan Brown, the trainer, was at the reins of Baron Hal, a nine - year - old gelding, who showed but three second-place finishes and five thirds for his previous outings.

Brian Webster of Brantford drove his father's Cherry Freeze ($12.50) to victory in the first race. A daily double of $77.30 came up when the second race went to Badger Byrd, driven by co-owner Don Corbett of Alma, Ont.

BELINSKY OPTIONED

LOS ANGELES (CAP) — Pitcher Bo Belinsky, suspended by Los Angeles Angels baseball club for punching a sports writer, was optioned Tuesday to Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League. Left - handed pitcher George Brunet was called up from Oklahoma City.

Rain Halts SH Playoffs

Rain last night forced postponement of the fourth game of the South Hastings Baseball League finals between Cannifton and Foxboro.

Foxboro leads the titular series three games to none and were to have played at home last night.

The postponement means that last night's game will be played at Foxboro tomorrow (Thursday) night and if a fifth game is necessary, it will be scheduled for Cannifton on Sunday afternoon, at 2.00 p.m.

PLANS NEW CAR

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Racing car builder Mickey Thompson says he plans to drive a radical new design himself in the 500-mile Indianapolis race next May. The front - engine, front-drive racer has only one frame member, a long titanium tube connecting front and rear wheels and housing the fuel tank. Thompson says a conventional Chevrolet engine "would be all the power I'd want" for the lightweight car unless the race was limited to cars over 1,200 pounds. With the engine, his racer would weigh 900 pounds.

Herschel Bernardi Has Good Business Going on Side

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There is a lot more to television than meets the eye, and in the case of actor Herschel Bernardi it adds up to an annual income of around $100,000.

Bernardi, who has been the guest star in television series ranging from Bonanza to Dr. Kildare, is particularly well remembered for his portrait of the weary, cynical and soft-hearted Lieut. Jacoby of 114 Peter Gunn adventures.

His semi-secret career, so profitable, started about eight years ago when he learned there was a demand for "character voices" to be used in television commercials.

"I made a tape recording of some material I'd developed for a comedy routine that used 22 different voices," he recalled. "I then jumped on my motor scooter and went from agency to agency selling myself."

The "voices," as Bernardi calls them, started a whole new sideline. His face never is used. He has produced the voices of a rejected tuna, a service station, a candy bar, a sick automobile and a squirrel, among others.

MADE HIM FREE

"This turned into my freedom crusade," said Bernardi. "I realized that it made me free to do the things I really wanted to do as an actor."

But after a time, fashions in commercials changed — gag voices, even 22 of them, were no longer in such great demand, and Bernardi's voice was caught in that deadly theatrical trap: Type-casting.

"I invested about $300 in another spiel, did a comedy sketch, and did a lot of other voices with a 'soft sell,' the new big thing," he said.

That worked, too: "It's a joy to go to the mailbox and see it stuffed with those lovely residual cheques."

Meanwhile, he has been moving steadily into featured movie roles (including Irma La Douce and Love With the Proper Stranger), has many television assignments and has even found time for summer stock.

Raymond Burr's infected tooth (now removed) and swollen jaw caused the Perry Mason producers almost as much discomfort as it did him. Instead of falling too far behind schedule by shutting down production for still another week, the producers have signed Mike Connors, once the hero of Tightrope, to replace Burr in one program.

Burr's absence will be explained as an emergency business trip to Europe. The next program will have Perry hit on scripts, obviously, are obscure working against a European background. Television scripts, obviously, are nothing if not flexible.

Cheesemen Defeat Belvedere

Black Diamond Cheese downed Belvedere Hotel 6-3 in a Commercial Softball League round-robin consolation game played last night. Darkness halted the game after six innings.

Sonny Holoway pitched strong four-hit ball over the distance for Black Diamond. He struck out 11 batters and did not walk a man, facing just 22. Jack Hughes pitched the loss, giving up five hits. Seven errors by his mates hurt the Hughes' cause. He fanned three but walked eight.

The winners scored single markers from the second through the fifth innings and wrapped up the win with a pair in the sixth. Belvedere got a pair in the fourth and one in the final stanza.

B. Hannah and Holoway paced the Black Diamond hitters with a double apiece. T. Kelley, Jack Gilby and B. Cruikshank contributed singles.

Joe Clapp, for Belvedere, paced all hitters with a home run and single. K. McLeod and G. Perry also hit safely.

CJBQ to Carry CBC Program On Churchill

On July 28, 64 years after he first entered Parliament, Sir Winston Churchill made his final appearance in the House of Commons.

On the eve of his departure the BBC broadcast a radio tribute. Entitled "The Member for Woodford" and written and narrated by Maurice Edelman, M.P., this program will be broadcast on the CBC radio network series, Soundings, Thursday, August 27 at 9 p.m. EDT.

The program includes comments and anecdotes from many of those on both sides of the House who have worked with — and sometimes against — him over the years.

Conrad Voss Bark, BBC's parliamentary correspondent, and William Barkley, dean of Britain's press gallery, appear along with politicians and friends.

To Broadcast Fort Erie Race

The 36th annual Prince of Wales Stakes, the second race in Canada's version of the "triple crown," will be carried live on CJBQ radio Saturday, Aug. 22.

Coverage begins at 4:45 p.m. EDT and is part of Saturday Sports Date. Commentators are Del Mott and Gord Popper.

The Prince of Wales Stakes is run over a mile-and-three-furlongs turf course at Fort Erie, and is for three-year-olds foaled in Canada. Some of the top thoroughbreds expected to try for the $25,000-added purse are Return Trip, Arctic Hills, Brockton Boy, and Langcrest, the same owner's Northern Dancer in the Queen's Plate.

The Breeders' Stakes, the final jewel in the "triple crown" will be carried live on CJBQ radio Oct. 10.

Tweed Nips Battersea 4-3; Series Tied

MADOC (Special) — A long bases-empty homer by Don LeSage in the bottom of the ninth inning gave Tweed LopSanks a come-from-behind 4-3 win over Battersea here last night in an exciting OASS playdown game.

The victory tied the intermediate "C" series at one game apiece. Battersea won the series opener at home on the weekend 3-0. A third and deciding game will be played this Saturday, likely in Napanee.

Battersea led 3-1 after five innings last night but Blaine Healey tied his own game with a two-run double in the sixth. LeSage's home run, a hard blast that almost reached the highway, ended the battle abruptly in the ninth.

Healey hurled three-hit ball and struck out 10 on the Tweed mound. McMahon gave up seven hits and fanned eight for Battersea.

The winners bobbled twice and the losers were charged with five errors.

JIM DILLARD OUT

CALGARY (CP) — Halfback Jim Dillard of Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference will not be able to play for two months, the club announced Tuesday. Dillard suffered an ankle fracture as Stampeders whipped Edmonton Eskimos 39-6 in Calgary Monday.

Press Agent for Beatles Delighted With Reception

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This is the week that the Beatles consolidate their invasion of the United States and Canada. Aside from several million teenage girls, no one could be more delighted than a Hollywood press agent named Wilfred Sheingun.

The shaggy Liverpudlians kick off their North American concert tour in San Francisco tonight. This weekend they will appear in Los Angeles, causing despair throughout the police force. But the bigger the mob scenes, the more Sheingun likes it.

I remember Walter as a publicist for Kim Novak, Rita Hayworth and others. Then one day he turned up in London as a producer. He had a rousing success with The Mouse That Roared and followed it with A Matter of Who and Mouse on the Moon.

ASKED ABOUT FILM

Walter returns to his native California each summer. As he was preparing to return to England last September, a United Artists executive asked if he would like to produce a film with the Beatles.

"Who are they?" Shenson asked, all innocence. Told who they are, he protested that he wasn't Sam Katzman, the producer of pop musicals.

But Walter agreed to look into the matter, and after some difficulty, he located the Beatles in London.

"I was all piled into my taxi and started talking a mile a minute," Shenson recalled. "I found myself in the middle of a scene from a Marx Brothers movie. That was when I decided to make a comedy, not a pop musical."

After the preliminary negotiations, the Beatles came to the United States for the Ed Sullivan show, and Shenson realized the Beatles had world-wide popularity.

'GOT SCARED'

"Then I really got scared," said the producer. "I felt a responsibility to the fans not to harm the Beale image. I felt responsible to the boys to make a movie they could be proud of. And I also wanted to make something that would be intelligent without being too sophisticated."

Shenson and writer Alun Owen settled on the theme of a day in the life of the singing sensations. A Hard Day's Night was shot in eight weeks at a cost of $500,000 which makes it a mighty fine investment.

Buttons has been international at matinees, but the film has had some difficulty attracting screams-shy adults. Shenson has proposed a late-night showing for adults only.

Shenson will return to England next month to start preparing Beatle movie No. 2. What will it be about?

"That's a producer's problem," he sighed. "This one will have to be more of a plot story, not just an extension of their personalities. John Lennon is writing Beatle has asked to help on the script. We might go in color, but I don't think the budget will be much bigger this time - - perhaps $750,000."

LATE OLYMPIC ENTRY

TOKYO (AP) — The entry of a 94th country for the 1964 Olympic Games at Tokyo was received Tuesday, 24 hours after the deadline. Costa Rica notified the Tokyo Olympic organizing committee of its intention to compete. The committee, which had set Monday afternoon as the deadline, did not say whether Costa Rica's late entry would be submitted to the International Olympic Committee for approval. It previously had indicated that would be the procedure.

COMING TO TOWN FOR THE FAIR:

The "FARMING WITH ALCAN" Trailer!

DON'T MISS IT! There's so much in it for you that you won't want to miss this important exhibit. Not only is the "Farming with Alcan" Trailer exciting to see—it brings you valuable farm information free. It's a dramatic, 20th century demonstration of a dramatic, 20th century product: light, modern, handsome, durable aluminum!

More, there's a trailerful of wonderful ideas that show you how easy and economical it is to put Alcan aluminum to work for you on your farm.

ALCAN ALUMINUM ROOFING, for example. Here's a farm roofing that's rustproof . . . with high heat reflectivity . . . and stucco and diamond finish for strength and handsome appearance. A farm roofing that gives you a lifetime of trouble-free service once it's properly applied. Alcan Aluminum Roofing —just one of the many Alcan aluminum farm products you'll meet in The "Farming with Alcan" Trailer at the Fair.

See you there!

LAWRENCE LETTERS

OXFORD, England (CP) — Three letters written by Col. T.E. Lawrence, adviser of Arabia) and some unpublished manuscripts from "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom" have been unearthed after 40 years by the wife of one of the Arabian campaigner's air force comrades. Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For August 20

Aries (Mar. 21 - Apr. 19): Set sights on goal . . . plan for future. There could be disputes involving higher - ups. Take your time. Don't attempt to accomplish everything at once. Measure words, actions carefully.

Taurus (Apr. 20 - May 20): News due which encourages greater effort. Good time to make contacts, engage in creative activities. Fine for club, organization or social functions. Personal magnetism high. You can win new friends.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): Remember promises to family members. Weigh actions — and reactions. Concentrate on home improvement. Wonderful for planning "late vacation." Check with one who has "traveled the road."

Cancer (June 21 - July 22): Avoid overenthusiastic actions. Tendency indicated to say and do things impulsively. Important an analysis, think — practice self - control. Good to review past and plan future.

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 23): Schedule your moves. Greatest strength on your side. You attract persons who make numerous promises, claims. Best to remain skeptical. Adhere to rules, regulations. Time on your side.

Virgo (Aug. 24 - Sept. 23): Consult those in authority. Get verification. Don't irritate those who form policy. You will receive backing if you are cooperative. Your ideas are valid. But they require planning.

Libra (Sept. 24 - Oct. 23): Day to be daring! Approach the precipice . . . put cards on table. You have allies — your influence greater than you might think. Fine for new contacts, starting projects. Utilize wonderful imagination.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 - Nov. 21): Your intuitive intellect now serves as reliable guide. Caution signs are up. You would be wise to observe them. There are numerous details which require attention. Applies to business . . . and home.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be versatile. Key is trying new methods. Be willing to listen. Sense of humor will help overcome "delicate" situation. Don't feel events are fixed. They are definitely subject to change.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Key is added research. Seek best plan. You can pick up "bargain." But you must be alert, observant. Avoid one who advises sweeping changes. Stick to routine. Adhere to current pattern.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Fine for writing, outlining views. You gain support — both moral and material. Cycle is moving up. Your personality sparkles. Good time for entertainment . . . seek new forms of enjoyment.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20): Evening at home would be pleasant — could lead to enlightenment. Younger person has combination idea and request. Pay heed! Seek harmony. Throw off worries of day. Get sufficient rest.

If today is your birthday . . . your feelings run deep — nothing halfway. Once you commit yourself, you follow through to the end. This year, plans will solidify — circumstances will work in your favor.

Canadians Hold 15 Per Cent Stock in Foreign-Controlled Companies at End of 1960

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians held about 15 per cent of the stock in foreign-controlled companies operating in this country at the end of 1960.

To raise this share ownership to 25 per cent would have required, at that time, an additional Canadian investment of about $1,168,000,000 in such stock, assuming it was available.

This graphic illustration of the foreign-ownership problem is drawn from figures recently produced for the first time by the bureau of statistics.

It was not known whether these statistics were available to Finance Minster Walter Gordon when in 1963 he first proposed the withholding-tax differential to benefit companies offering at least 25 per cent of their shares to Canadians.

This picture has been painted by the bureau:

At the end of 1960, there were 4,030 foreign - controlled enterprises in Canada.

COMPARISON DIFFICULT

(It is difficult to compare this with a total of all enterprises. There were about 125,000 Canadian corporations of all sorts at that time, but the figure includes about 18,000 active corporations and thousands of tiny outfits and personal holding companies.)

These 4,030 foreign-controlled companies had a total equity investment—that is, in common and preferred shares—of $11,125,000,000. Canadians held $1,783,000,000 of it for 15 per cent.

Actually, about 62 per cent of the total investment was concentrated in 111 big foreign-controlled companies, each having an aggregate investment of $25,000,000 or more.

Of these, 90 were controlled by Americans. These 90 had a total equity investment of $5,896,000,000.

SOME IN BRANCHES

However, about 42 per cent of that money was tied up in branches and wholly-owned subsidiaries of U.S. parent companies, totalling 32 in number.

In these, of course, Canadians had no equity investment at all.

Another 28 of the 90 companies were partly-owned subsidiaries with a combined equity investment of $2,503,000,000. Of this, $610,000,000 was in Canadians' hands—about 24 per cent.

The 10 remaining big companies had a total investment of $885,000,000—of which Canadians held $387,000,000, or 44 per cent.

In the 3,596 smaller U.S.-controlled companies, Canadians held 21 per cent of the stock. For the 22 big companies—again, those with $25,000,000 or more in equity investment—the Canadian participation was 29 per cent.

In this group, totalling 1,154 companies, Canadians held nine per cent of the total investment of $3,407,000,000.

Canadian share holdings ran higher in companies controlled elsewhere than in the United States.

"Watching Brief" More Effective Than Expected

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The "watching brief" that the North Atlantic alliance undertook over Greece and Turkey last May has turned out to be no more effective than was expected.

Greece's decision announced Monday to withdraw forces assigned to NATO gives a fuller look to the "watch" which, in any case, never seemed a particularly powerful device in view of the deep enmity between the two countries.

The 15 NATO foreign ministers at their May meeting in The Hague spent much of their time debating the damaging quarrel between Greece and Turkey — sister members of the alliance — over Cyprus.

They finally evolved the compromise under which the secretary-general, then Dirk Stikker of the Netherlands, was to maintain the so-called "watch over the two. The task now has fallen to his successor, Manlio Brosio of Italy.

Cynics commented that it would be odd if the NATO executive chief did not "watch" a developing danger of war between two member countries. There seems no doubt the meeting would have attempted a firmer role but for opposition by the Greek foreign minister Stavros Kostopoulos, who at first rejected the idea that the quarrel was any of NATO's business.

Canada and other countries raised the possibility of invoking a section of the NATO charter which empowers the secretary-general to offer "good offices" to disputing member countries.

It provides that, with their consent, the secretary - general can "mediate or facilitate procedures of enquiry, mediation, conciliation or arbitration."

This envisages something much stronger than a "watch" but an obstacle raised at the time was that NATO must in no way appear to be usurping the prerogative of the United Nations as the mediation agent in the Cyprus dispute itself.

JOB LIMITED

NATO's job was aimed specifically at avoiding conflict between Greece and Turkey, its member countries, and had nothing directly to do with Cyprus, not a NATO member.

Yet most observers were convinced the path taken gave the secretary-general little hope of arranging, for instance, peace talks between Kostopoulos and Turkish Foreign Minister Cemal Erkin.

All this underlines the importance of the UN mediator — Finland's Sakari Tuomioja, stricken seriously ill last week-end when he was about to travel to Ankara, Athens and Nicosia.

Even though the trip in itself may have lacked great significance, his position in the general context of negotiations was both delicate and important.

Guards Ordered To Stand By For Cyprus Duty

Battalion at Picton Now at Full Strength

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—The 1st Battalion, Canadian Guards, at Picton Ont., has been notified to get ready for possible duty with the United Nations force in Cyprus, informed sources said Wednesday.

The 1st Guards, the present stand-by unit for UN duty, would leave, replace the 2nd Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, in Cyprus if the UN decides to maintain the force beyond Sept. 26. The Van Doos' tour in Cyprus ends on that date.

The Guards battalion at Picton has been brought up to full strength by reinforcements from 2nd Guards at Camp Petawawa, and it is getting annual leave cleared up so that it will be ready to go if required.

There was evident relief in the government Wednesday that Greece and Turkey have replaced units under NATO command, thus releasing them for national purposes over the Cyprus area.

External Affairs Minister Martin in the Commons denied any implication of T. C. Douglas, New Democratic party leader, that Britain plans a gradual withdrawal of its contingent from the UN force.

SAME AS CANADA

He said that when rotation of British troops is completed the strength of the British contingent will be about the same as Canada's: 1,130 men.

Meanwhile, the government has placed increased emphasis on shaping Canada's military forces to future needs of UN peacekeeping tasks.

In a written submission to the Commons defence committee, the external affairs department said:

"The white paper on defence announced the creation of an organization of the Canadian armed forces, but no facet of the program is of any greater significance than the extent of the adaptation of Canada's military forces to the role she has assumed in assisting the worldwide peace effort of the United Nations."

The department's brief added:

"In the Canadian view peacekeeping activity now has moved beyond the stage of the original necessity in the conduct of international affair and should be provided for as such.

"The failure of the great powers to agree that enforcement arrangements envisaged in the UN charter has caused much of peacekeep as they are lost respect for this House."

New Public Housing Scheme

TORONTO (CP) — A new public housing scheme that will place emphasis on the rehabilitation of existing dwellings for rental to low-income families was announced Wednesday by Premier Robarts and Economics Minister Stanley Randall.

All public housing in Ontario in future will come under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Housing Corporation, set up by the government to reduce the number of agencies concerned with public housing and to cut red tape in the establishment of housing projects.

Named chairman of the housing corporation was Kenneth Soble of Hamilton, who has connections with the broadcasting industry and the sports world besides being head of the Hamilton Urban Renewal Committee.

"I think we all recognize that we've been strangling in red tape in this area (public housing) for some time," Premier Robarts told a press conference.

The new corporation would cut the red tape period by perhaps two or three months from two to 3½ years, according to Mr. Soble. It would also offer to administer municipal housing projects on a fee basis.

RELY ON OTTAWA

The Ontario corporation will depend largely upon federal financing. Under amendments to the National Housing Act, the province may borrow from Ottawa up to 90 per cent of funds necessary for public housing projects.

The Ontario government will put up the other 10 per cent. In some cases, municipalities may share this part of the cost.

Mr. Randall said no amount has yet been fixed for the corporate fund, although it probably would exceed the $6,000,000 budgeted for this year for the housing branch of the department of economics and development.

The housing branch will become the integral part of the new corporation. H. W. Arnold, director of the branch, becomes vice-chairman and senior executive of the Ontario Housing Corporation.

Premier Robarts said the corporation will seek out and develop all forms of residential accommodation for rent or for sale.

"It will, wherever possible, get away from the 'project' form of development and will aim for the greatest possible

Debate On Flag GrindsOn

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — The maple leaf flag debate ground forward in the Commons for the 11th day Wednesday, with MPs showing as much concern for the public reaction as for the issue itself.

At noon today the party leaders were to meet again to attempt to break the deadlock. He is in a sphere charged with accusations of filibuster and ultimatum there was little hope of agreement.

The debate tally so far: 85 speeches. The breakdown shows 50 Progressive Conservatives, 21 Liberals, five New Democrats, five Social Crediters and four Creditists.

This is a sample of the kind of soul - searching the House heard Wednesday:

Andrew Brewin (NDP — Toronto Greenwood): "Once the issue has been made clear, continuation of debate on such an emotional subject can only serve to cause bitterness, and what is perhaps equally bad, boredom and irritation about the whole subject."

Steve Otto (L—York East): "We have reached this great debate into an internal palace disgrace which only we can understand. We have left the people of Canada completely on the outside and they have now lost patience with us. They do not understand the tempo of this debate. We are going to lose their respect as a result."

Russia Wants Pact Banning Use of Any Nuclear Weapons

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union said today it is prepared to sign a general treaty banning the use of nuclear weapons.

Soviet delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin told the 17-nation disarmament conference such a treaty "would put an end to all nuclear aggression."

He expressed strong support for a proposal by Ethiopian delegate Mikael Imru that the next United Nations General Assembly should convene a world conference to draft a treaty outlawing the use of nuclear weapons in war.

Western delegates immediately described the proposal as impractical and likely to create a false and dangerous sense of security.

Imru said the conference should take action to implement a 1961 UN resolution urging the United States and Russia to consider the possibility of a general ban on the use of nuclear arms. He urged that a general convention laying down such a ban should be drafted quickly.

It was the first time the subject has come before the two-year-old disarmament conference.

Tsarapkin welcomed Imru's initiative.

The Soviet government is ready to assume all the commitments attached to such a convention, provided other states do likewise," he said.

The first Western speaker in the debate, Canada's Lt.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns, said a declaration outlawing the use of nuclear arms was "unlikely to produce useful results and, moreover, will give rise to a dangerous false sense of security."

Burns said such a declaration was unlikely to be observed by states which felt their security was threatened.

"History has shown that previous similar declarations have all been violated, without exception," he added.

He said it was logical to ban the use of nuclear weapons and continue piling them up, and he urged the conference to seek to end the nuclear threat by a controlled elimination of atomic weapons rather than by a vague and unenforceable declaration.

U.S. delegate Clare Timberlake did not speak in the conference session but he told reporters afterward the proposal "remains as unacceptable to the United States as it always has been."

Auto Workers Will Select Target Company in Strike

CHICAGO (AP)—The United Auto Workers Union — backed by a $66,000,000 strike fund—is expected to select its prime target today for a possible U.S.-wide strike in the auto industry.

Union officials, including UAW President Walter Reuther, scheduled a series of meetings to discuss the status of negotiations over three-year contracts covering more than 500,000 assembly line workers.

Out of the talks is expected to come a decision on which of the big three automakers — General Motors, Ford or Chrysler — will be tagged as No. 1 target for a possibly crippling walkout. The union already is the pattern-setter in auto wage pacts among its members in all three companies.

A UAW spokesman estimated that the strike fund, providing an average of $35 a week in benefits to each worker, would support a strike up to eight weeks at GM, longer at Ford and Chrysler. Such a strike could come at midnight Aug. 31, when all the big three contracts are due to expire.

Union strategy, if precedent is followed, would then be to halt production with a mass walkout at the target company's plants, while extending contracts with the other two firms on a day-to-day basis.

UN May Have To Quit Isle

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — UN Secretary-General U Thant said today he may have to withdraw the UN peace force from Cyprus soon if it does not get more financial support.

At a press conference Thant was asked whether the force of 6,500 troops, police and medical personnel from nine countries would pull out of Cyprus when its six - month term expires Sept. 26.

He replied that he still lacks $2,000,000 in financial pledges from UN members necessary to make up the $12,700,000 needed to run the force for the six months.

"If such support is not forthcoming in the immediate future," he said, "it would appear necessary that the force may have to be withdrawn even before Sept. 26."

Canada has 1,126 men in the force.

NICOSIA (AP) — The threat of a serious split in the Atlantic alliance's eastern flank eased today as Greece followed Turkey's decision to continue its military units to the command of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The move drew swift approval from the United States. It also reduced at least for the moment the chance that the two NATO nations would go to war over the explosive Cyprus dispute, which prompted both countries to withdraw units from NATO.

But the Greek government warned that its action Wednesday makes the NATO command responsible for preventing

Democrats Hope to Avoid Split On Civil Rights Platform Plank

ATLANTIC CITY (AP)—Democratic platform drafters were optimistic today that a party-splitting fight over a civil rights plank can be avoided.

As the platform committee moved here to wind up hearings in the Convention Hall chamber from both the U.S North and South spoke hopefully of reaching agreement on a generally acceptable plank.

But the same issue, civil rights, set the stage for a sharp fight in another area—the seating of delegates from Mississippi and Alabama.

The platform drafters' optimism was due in large part to testimony by Attorney-General Robert Kennedy that he saw no need for a platform promise to seek new civil rights laws. He said he felt the 1964 Civil Rights Act was broad enough to cover the party's 1960 pledges in this field.

Civil rights leaders in their testimony emphasized enforcement of the 1964 act and legislation to provide more and better job opportunities for Negroes rather than new civil rights measures.

However, Frederick G. Dutton, the White House aide who is executive director of the platform committee, still tagged the writing of a civil rights plank as the most difficult task ahead for the group.

The committee completed three days of hearings in Washington Wednesday and was to start taking additional testimony here this afternoon. The hearings are to be concluded Friday and the committee hopes to finish its drafting work late Saturday or early Sunday.

Red-Backed Rebellion Takes Turn For Worse

Tshombe Moves to Oust Thousands of Reds

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—Premier Moise Tshombe moved today to oust thousands of citizens of countries accused of undercutting a region as fighting raged in the east Congo city of Bukavu invaded by rebel forces.

As the spreading Communist-backed rebellion seemed to take a turn for the worse, Tshombe said he believed a report that Peking - trained rebel leader Pierre Mulele, 33, is dead. Diplomatic sources, however, believe the report of Communist execution minister is alive in Brazzaville, the former French Congo.

Government forces in Bukavu were reported pushed back to the city's European quarter, but Col. Leonard Mulamba said he believed he could retake the rebel-held part of the city if reinforcements were available. U.S. cargo planes airlifted two loads of ammunition supplies to the besieged city during the night.

The U.S. embassy said that its seven- or eight-man staff in Bukavu fled to neighboring Rwanda after heavy fire set fighting erupted Wednesday. A planeload of 40 refugees, mostly composed of United Nations personnel, arrived in Leopoldville Wednesday night.

A government garrison of some 800 troops was fighting to salvage the city capital of central Kivu province, and the only important city in the turbulent northeastern Congo still under government control.

HOLD LARGE AREA

The rebels, who hold an estimated 25 per cent of this vast and mineral-rich country, captured the key city of Stanleyville two weeks ago.

The Bukavu uprising came after a government order in Leopoldville to deport citizens of Iraq, Burundi and Red Mali whose governments are accused of backing the revolt.

Denouncing the government as accomplices of Communist China, Tshombe told a press conference Wednesday night that his order would be lifted only if their support of the rebellion ends. Saying there could be no negotiation with outlaws, he accused China of moving to the Congo as a base to take over all of Africa.

It was not known how many persons would be deported but some estimates were as high as 50,000. Authorities began a roundup for the 20-minute ferryboat ride across the Congo River to Brazzaville.

Commenting on the Mulele death report, Tshombe said he was satisfied with evidence that the rebel leader had been killed. He said news had reached him that a face-exposed

Top-Rank Officers To Be Retired

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — There are 163 officers in the four top ranks of the armed forces and they draw salaries of between $18,800 and $25,000 a year.

About one-third of them will be retired during the next couple of months as integration of the defence department's command structure takes hold, informants said Wednesday.

Defence Minister Hellyer says there now is enough manpower at defence headquarters to administer a defence force of 500,000 men. The Canadian armed forces number about 110,000.

He told the Commons Monday that a substantial number of officers will be retired, not because they aren't of high calibre but because there simply won't be jobs for them when the command structure is integrated. Some will be retired compulsorily before normal retirement age. The government plans to reduce the armed forces by some 5,000 in the next year or two.

COMMAND REDUCED

Integration has reduced the senior command of the armed forces to 12 officers from 17 though there now are five officers of lieutenant-general or equivalent rank compared to three previously.

Mr. Hellyer some months ago informed the Commons there are almost as many senior officers in the RCAF now as there were during the Second World War when the air force was five times bigger.

Informants said this also applied in the navy and army, though not to such a degree.

It was pointed out that the reduction in the navy and army, though not to such a degree.

Beatles Sing Behind Wire Fence While Mob of 17,000 Girls Wails

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Inside the Cow Palace, scene of the recent Republican convention, pandemonium reigned and Britain's Beatles were nonplussed as the most likely candidates to capture the hearts of every North American girl in her early teens.

"No one will ever believe this," said a high school teacher who had chaperoned his three niece to the performance Wednesday. "There is nothing you can write that could make anyone believe what happened here."

For one-half hour, a capacity crowd of more than 15,000 shrieked as the British rock 'n' roll quartet sang 11 songs.

"It was quite an ordeal," said Sheriff Earl Whitemore of San Mateo County, in charge of 130 of a 23-stop North American tour that continues tonight at Las Vegas, Nev.

Promoter Paul Catalina said the gate was around $90,000.

He was one of many near the stage hit in a hail of jelly beans and coins as the Beatles, especially during the wild first few seconds when it seemed the fence would not stand up.

Twice officials climbed on stage and urged a halt to the singing and the jelly beans.

After the show two limousines with police escort dashed from the Beatles' hotel to the hundreds of girls followed. The Beatles actually were still in their dressing rooms.

They took about one hour later for the airport where they took a chartered flight to Las Vegas.

Belleville Fair Well Ahead In Admissions Over Last Year

By last night total paid admissions were 34,004.

This was well ahead of last year's figures at the same time and compares to the five-year attendance average of 33,734.

The figures spell out an upsurge of optimism among fair officials, in chagrin since the Tuesday washout that apparently ruined all chances of a new record.

Last night the grounds—pavilions, booths, midway — were thronged again.

However, afternoon attendance — Wednesday is an early closing day — was not as heavy as expected. But it picked up with nightfall. Before the gates were closed 8,910 paid admissions were recorded.

Feature of last night's presentation was the grandstand show starring cowboy singer Tex Ritter. In the cool evening temperatures just 1,000 were on hand for the feature which also included horse-judging.

Tonight prices are halved to 50 cents for the big grandstand presentation—horse racing and the Black Diamond trophy award.

Latest Models Will Be Seen At Gun Show

Local hunters will be given an opportunity to see the latest in hunting equipment on Thursday night at Club Canara at which time the first annual Gun Show will be sponsored by Kelly's Sport Shop on North Front Street.

Representatives from all major gun manufacturing companies will be on hand at the display to answer anyone's problems that they have concerning their present equipment.

Over 200 models of the latest hunting gear will be on display at the club along with the latest in archery equipment. Among the various models will be the expensive equipment not ordinarily kept in stock at gun shops.

Films on game hunting and the use of hunting equipment will be shown at the show by local Gary Warden, George Warren and J. Culvert of the Archery Club.

Fall duck hunting licences will be available at the show. The gun club will be the first of its kind in the area and Mr. Jack Kelly, proprietor of Kelly's Sporting Goods hopes to be able to sponsor such an event each year.

Mr. Kelly has been in the business for about nine years and has a broad knowledge of hunting equipment. He has his own private collection of firearms.

The display will open at 7.00 p.m. and you are asked to bring your hunting and hunting equipment problems with you.

The summer session of Hastings county council has been called by Warden Thomas Wallaston for September 11.

Among the matters to be considered during the session will be a recommendation from Wallaston township for council to designate the 12 northern townships of the county as a potato growing area and that ARDA be asked for a suitable plan to establish the industry in the area.

Council members will also take in a tour of the south and western parts of the county. Plans are for councillors to visit Trenton Air Station, the Bata Shoe Company and the Bethlehem Steel open pit mine at Marmora, concluding with evening dinner at Madoc.

Bowling Notes

Some of the best bowlers, both men and women will be competing for the Watkin Memorial trophy on Saturday, when the tournament is held at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club. This trophy was donated to the local club by the Watkin family in memory of Mr. George Watkin, who was an active member of the club for many years and served efficiently as president. This summer a son, Gordon Watkin, died suddenly at Bowmanville. Gordon at the time of his death was president of the club and also general manager of the Corbin Gold Cup tournament and on Saturday the fond memories of these men will be revived.

So much interest has been created in this tournament that Austin Watkin, chairman for this event, stated today that probably as high as sixty rinks will be competing. There will be two draws, one at one o'clock and the second at three o'clock and will be of 14 ends. If the number stated is in competition it will be the largest tournament to date on the local greens.

Word has been received that Neil Saikeld of Toronto, writing skip and Bert Doubles rink at the recent PLTB tournament and James Black, the single's champion will be on hand. All that is needed is good weather for the biggest tourney of the season in this city.

Capable of Sleeping 24 'Vacuna' Slips Into Harbor

TRENTON — The "Vacuna", owned by two Toronto men, A. B. Moran and D. J. Brodgy, slid into Trenton harbor and was the subject of much conjecture on the part of persons crossing the bridge.

A former steam yacht, fitted out with a diesel engine in 1930, the Vacuna was built in 1906 by the Hereshoff Mfg. Company of Rhode Island. The boat builder who fashioned her elegant staterooms, was blind, and carried a beam a cabinet maker to judge from the detail of his work.

Below deck, one visits the engine room, four cabins, the galley and the "mess", which in common everyday language is the bathroom.

Owned originally by a millionaire who owned Lookout Island in the 1,000 Islands, "Vacuna" was recently seen in service as a fishing boat and charter cruiser, in the 30,000 Islands in the Midland area.

That's where her owners picked her up. Mr. Moran and Mr. Brodgy mean to start a cruise service between Toronto, the 1,000 Islands and Montreal next year.

Right now, Mr. Moran, his two children, Sandra and John, and his friend Cam Wardlaw and the ship's engineer are cruising in this area, stopping off at various ports. When anyone on board wants to visit the uptown section of the town visited they use a scooter, kept on board for the purpose.

No Objection To Re-zoning Parcel of Land

TRENTON — Four persons turned up at a public meeting called in the town hall at Trenton last night to outline the proposed changes in the official plan of the town and the zoning by-law, which would permit the re-zoning of the land now occupied by Fitzhurst Limited from residential to commercial.

Dr. J. V. Byrne explained that he and a number of other professional men meant to build a medical centre on the site, and displayed drawings of the proposed centre. There were no objections.

Also discussed briefly was the changing of zoning of a small triangle of land on North Trenton from Open Space to residential, to permit the building of a Mr. Caldbick home, to erect a house.

Present at the meeting were town officials and George Greer, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph O'Grady and Mrs. O'Grady's sister.

Also present in the council chamber were Mr. D. Masters of West Street and a number of his neighbors. In spite of considerable talk, it was learned that this was not the time and place to discuss the problem. Mr. Masters, when asked, insisted on discussing the possibility of Mr. Masters being allowed to operate a trailer camp forming use could not be entered at the Trenton Planning Board had ruled against re-zoning Mr. Master's piece of land to commercial from residential.

Chairman of the meeting, O. W. Leary, told Mr. Masters and his friends they should bring their case before the planning board again, and that he would notify Mr. Masters when the board meeting was to take place.

History of Fire Fighting In City Seen in Exhibit

Fires today are strictly regarded as menace to life and property.

Once upon a time in Belleville, however, they were something else, something so precious firemen fought for the right to be the first there.

That were of course, not professional firefighters in the modern accepted sense, but members of private companies whose rewards were paid by insurance corporations.

Reminders of this chapter in local history can be seen at the Belleville Fair this year.

One of the largest exhibits beneath the grandstand is that organized by the Belleville Fire Department, tracing the story of local firefighting back a century or more.

And the most curious exhibit also is the smallest.

It is a crayon drawing of a raging blaze in the city 100 years ago. Dubbed "Belleville Fire Brigade in Action" it likely was inspired by the varying and costumes of the period seem to date it about the 1860's.

And there they are — the city's private firemen in operation.

"The company that reached the fire first was paid by the insurance people," said fire inspector Bob Fair. "So often if two companies came together on route they would down tools and into it right there on the street corner."

His figures there were probably four such private operations until the formation of municipal volunteers.

Fire helmet, 100 years old is worn by fireman Eugene Grant.

Five different sets of uniforms can be distinguished in the picture on display.

The drawing was found behind an old photograph which firemen were reframing. Its artist is unknown.

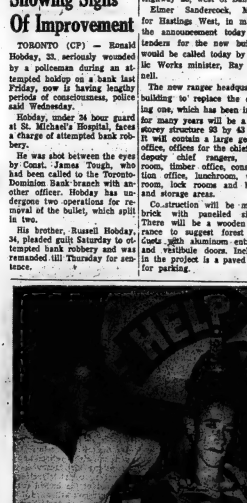
Faraday Twp. to Be Home Of New $83,000 Building

A new chief ranger's headquarters building estimated to cost about $83,000 will be built in the township of Faraday on Highway 62, west of Bancroft.

Elmar Sandercock, M.P.P. for Hastings West, in making the announcement today said tenders for the new building would be called today by Public Works minister, Ray Connell.

The new ranger headquarters building to replace the existing one, which has been in use for many years will be a one-storey structure 93 by 43 feet. It will contain a large general office, offices for the chief and deputy chief rangers, radio room, timber office, conservation office, lunchroom, wash room, lock rooms and boiler and storage areas.

Construction will be mainly brick with panelled siding. There will be a wooden entrance to suggest forest products with aluminum entrance and vestibule doors. Included in the project is a paved area for parking.



Wounded Man Showing Signs Of Improvement

TORONTO (CP) — Ronald Hobday, 33, seriously wounded by a policeman during an attempted holdup on a bank last Friday, now is having lengthy periods of consciousness, police said Wednesday.

Hobday, under 24 hour guard at St. Michael's Hospital, faces a charge of attempted bank robbery.

He was shot between the eyes by Const. James Tough, who had been called to the Toronto-Dominion Bank branch with another officer. Hobday has undergone two operations for removal of the bullet, which spilt in two.

His brother, Russell Hobday, 34, pleaded guilt Saturday to attempted bank robbery and was remanded till Thursday for sentence.

HOCKEY STAR BOBBY HULL, honorary president of the Belleville chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada, puts a fireman's helmet on 15-year-old Brian Hitchcock of Belleville at the fire department's display at Belleville Fair. The local chapter, sponsored by the fire department, helps care for local MD patients and contributes to a national research program to find a cure for the disease.

WHEAT CARRYOVER DOWN

Canada began its new crop year Aug. 1 with a wheat carryover estimated at 461,371,000 bushels, the bureau of statistics said Wednesday. The stockpile is about 25,870,000 bushels less than last year's revised estimate of 487,247,000. The figures do not include the 1964 crop which unofficial estimates place between 550,000,000 and 600,000,000 bushels.

TRADE GAP NARROWS

Britain's trade gap—the difference between what she buys and sells overseas — narrowed last month, official figures show. But experts say the gap still is too large. July's figure of £87,000,000 ($261,000,000) was an improvement on the gap of £113,000,000 ($339,000,000) in June.

WORK STOPPAGES RISE

Work stoppages caused by strikes or lockouts rose in June to 66 from 35 in May, the labor department said Wednesday. Number of workers involved increased to 15,148 from 7,485 and the number of man-days lost advanced to 185,680 from 63,700.

Crookston Men Must Find $2,122 In Restitution

Two Crookston men today discovered they must find $2,122 restitution to pay off the unexpected results of a spirited prank.

That's what it will cost to repair two huge earthmovers damaged in a collision with both men steering in a local construction yard.

Last month, Karl Burton Keller, 29, and 22-year-old Albert McFadden, pleaded guilty to wilfully damaging the machines at the George Boc Company road yards north of Foxboro. The machines got out of hand after both men revved them up after hours.

Both men told Magistrate T. Y. Wills they had agreed to split restitution costs.

The burdensome sequel to the incident evidently impressed both men and they were restrained in court.

The magistrate also appeared sympathetic to their situation and advised them to seek the money on a bank loan.

"I can give you time to pay under what I think is perfectly valid security — a suspended sentence," he said.

Magistrate Wills adjourned sentence until August 31 when McFadden and Keller are expected to have arranged restitution.

Accident Rate on Marysville Strip of 401 Is No Higher Than Average Says Dept.

Despite the fact that serious mishaps have occurred on the two-lane stretch of 401 highway north of Marysville, the accident rate for this section of the Trans-Ontario Freeway is no higher than the average for all of 401.

And often accidents do occur the cause in a high percentage of cases is driver inattention and not lack of proper highway signs.

This is the feeling of two department of highway safety officers in the city yesterday to study claims of a high accident rate on the Marysville section of 401 highway where two-way traffic is still in use.

"Our department has the matter under study," said Tom Mahony, highway safety officer for the Ontario Department of Highways, "and reports and recommendations will be made to Toronto."

MORE IN DAYLIGHT

Accompanying Mr. Mahony on the inspection tour of the two-way section of 401 between Marysville and the Cataraqui line was Staff Inspector Robert McKie of the Ontario Provincial Police. Mr. McKie's department will make his report to Commissioner E. H. Silk.

A breakdown of accidents on the two-way stretch of 401 where paving of the north lanes is now underway indicates that per cent of the mishaps occur during peak weekend conditions between Friday afternoon and Sunday evening.

Fifty-seven per cent of the accidents are during daylight, 39 per cent at night, and about 4 per cent during dusk or dawn conditions.

Forty-six per cent of them are single vehicle mishaps, ranging from cars going out of control or for other reasons.

Thirty per cent of the mishaps are head-on collisions but not always the result of cars entering the opposite lane to pass the car ahead.

Some are the result of cars being driven into the middle dividing into the opposite lane to crash into oncoming cars.

DIFFERENT PICTURE

But a different accident picture is presented for the transition area of 401 north of Marysville where the two-lane road changes into a two-lane road.

There have been 14 accidents since the Marysville - Napanee stretch of 401 was opened, and 13 of these were under dark conditions. Included are six single vehicle accidents.

Staff Inspector McNeil feels that the high incidence of night accidents at this point is due to motorists "overdriving" their lights.

Department officials feel there are adequate signs advising eastbound motorists that the four - lane highway is narrowing to only two lanes.

But in the over - all picture over 50 per cent of the accidents on 401 are during daylight hours and many of these are single vehicle crashes.

Many of these single vehicle accidents are a result of inattention work is still in progress are attributed to a natural curiosity on the part of the motorists.

NOT WATCHING ROADS

"They watch the construction on the other lane as they drive along, instead of watching the road," stated Mr. Mahoney.

A thorough study on the Marysville - Cataraqui two-way section of 401 being made with particular attention being given to highway signing and lighting to see if anything can be done to reduce the accident rate.

Already provincial police had increased their highway patrols during peak hours, frequency hours. Improved centre-line marking is being considered pending recommendations to be made.

Paving operations on the two north lanes of 401 between Marysville and Cataraqui are now underway and it is expected most of this highway will be open to four-lane traffic this fall.

S. Viet Nam Moves to Avoid Trouble on Anniversary

By MALCOLM BROWNE

SAIGON (AP) — A top Buddhist leader publicly assailed President Nguyen Khanh today as the South Viet Nam government assured the public explosion on the first anniversary of the bloody pagoda raids.

Addressing a rally of 4,000 Buddhist youths, the leader, Tich Tan Chau, sharply criticized Khanh's assumption of additional power last Sunday when he ousted Maj.-Gen. Duong Van Minh as president and installed himself.

The rally, held in the grounds of the Buddhist Association headquarters here, was in commemoration of last year's pagoda raids by police under orders from the late president Ngo Dinh Diem. Several Buddhist high school teachers said during the rally that they have been invited to police headquarters for questioning.

Buddhist monks said that if the teachers are detained, massive Buddhist demonstrations will probably be held in front of police headquarters.

PLAN DEMONSTRATIONS

Trouble was also anticipated in the central Vietnamese city of Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon, where Buddhist demonstrations and a torchlight parade were scheduled tonight and Friday.

Khanh, a Buddhist, had ordered his armed forces to avoid entanglement with political and religious groups. He also warned students to stick to their books rather than demonstrations, or they might find themselves in the army.

Buddhist leaders have voiced fear that Khanh, now that he has pushed Minh into the background, may create a regime similar to that of Diem.

Demonstrators at the rally carried banners which claimed: "The Buddhist faith is still being oppressed and the struggle must go on."

This is the first time Wednesday, students openly denounced alleged U.S. interference in the internal affairs of South Viet Nam, charging that Khanh had assumed total power at the instigation of the U.S.

Meanwhile, the Viet Cong overran a government outpost in the Mekong River delta province of Kien Hoa Wednesday night. First reports from U.S. officials in Saigon indicated that 10 of the post's 37 defenders were able to escape.

Falls From Boat

PORT PERRY, Ont. (CP) — Police today recovered the body of Donald E. Thompson, 38, of Oshawa, who was drowned in nearby Lake Scugog Wednesday when he toppled out of an outboard motor boat as it made a sharp turn.

Alan Cox, 38, also of Oshawa, 20 miles south of here, said he turned the boat around in time to see Thompson's outstretched hands disappear under the water.

Had Compassion For Mrs. Kennedy Says Jack Ruby

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Ruby is said to have told the Warren commission that his compassion for Mrs. John F. Kennedy led him to shoot her husband's accused assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.

The New York Journal-American is publishing under copyright a reported transcript of a three-hour interrogation of Ruby by U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren in Dallas June 7, under the byline of columnist Dorothy Kilgallen. She said she obtained the transcript "through sources close to the commission in Washington."

In Wednesday's second instalment of the transcript, Ruby is quoted as saying of the slaying of Oswald on Sunday, Nov. 24: "Of why that Sunday morning—that thought never entered my mind prior to that Sunday morning when I took it upon myself to try to be a martyr or some screwball, you might say."

VERY EMOTIONAL'

"But I felt very emotional and very excited over the Mrs. Kennedy, that with all the strife she had gone through—I had been following it pretty well—that someone owed it to her beloved president that she shouldn't be expected to come back to face trial of this heinous crime. And I have never had a chance to tell that, to back it up, to prove it. Consequently I am being victimized as part of a plot in the world's worst tragedy and crime at this moment."

Oswald, formally accused of the Nov. 22 assassination of President Kennedy, was slain two days later during a routine jail transfer. Ruby stepped from a crowd of reporters and onlookers at the Dallas police headquarters and fired a single, fatal bullet into him.

In a trial that ended March 14, Ruby was condemned to death for Oswald's murder. His lawyers pleaded insanity and Ruby did not testify.

The Warren interview took place in the Dallas jail where Ruby is being held during an appeal of his conviction.

Plan Checks On Road Bids

TORONTO (CP) — A. T. C. McNab, deputy highways minister of Ontario, will take personal charge of checking contract bids for all highway work in the province, Highways Minister Charles MacNaughton announced Wednesday.

The move followed a report Aug. 11 by the federal restrictive trade practices commission that 13 Ontario contractors conspired to fix contract tenders to share highway resurfacing work.

$10,000 Bail Granted to J. W. Cummings

The office of crown attorney, John Pringle, today confirmed a Point Anne man, charged in a wild shooting fracas involving his family, has been granted $10,000 personal bail.

John Wesley Cummings, 49, two weeks ago was ordered to stand trial at the end of a preliminary hearing before Magistrate T. Y. Wills, on three charges of shooting with intent to wound.

At that time, the magistrate expressed reluctance to grant bail until hearing opinions from crown attorney's office.

A Clear View of Segregation

The other day there was reprinted in this newspaper a letter written by Miss Diane Burrows of this city to a friend. The letter described Miss Burrows' experience in Mississippi as a civil rights worker.

We have read a fair proportion of the welter of commentaries and interpretive articles on the racial situation in the Southern States. From none of them have we been able to extract a more compelling argument against segregation than that which Miss Burrows introduces as a mere aside. "The system in the south," she says, "binds white people as much as colored, because they are unable to associate with whom they please."

This is a much more fundamental objection to segregation than all the cries for justice for the Negroes, because it is based on the unassailable fact that human beings are inherently selfish.

Many white people would not object to being unable to associate with Negroes. Miss Burrows has the good sense to recognise that this is a deprivation for her. A true lover of freedom, she reacts violently to this restriction of her own liberties. That this is essentially a selfish motivation does not detract in any way from the admiration we feel for her. The clarity of thought which she displays is worth many times the poorly-minded concern for the rights of others which some like to picture as their only concern. If other civil rights workers share Miss Burrows' viewpoint, perhaps they will eventually be able to make the white people of the south realize that, in cutting themselves off from the Negroes, they are limiting their own freedom. Such a realization would bring reform much faster than appeals for support of abstract ideals.

What is involved in the fight against racial barriers is basically the right of the individual to choose for himself or herself the persons with whom he or she will association, without any artificial barriers erected by others.

No white person in his right mind wants to be friends with all Negroes; every white person in his right mind can realize there are some Negroes whose friendship would enrich his life. No intelligent Negro would want to be associated with some white people; every intelligent Negro will recognize there are some white people whose friendship would prove rewarding.

The fight against segregation and apartheid is a fight for freedom, for the white people as well as for Negroes.

Drumming Up Business?

In a way the city public works has gone one up of the Napanee artist. The public works appears to have abandoned conventional art and engaged in the most modern of all creations. The location of this masterpiece is just outside the Belleville General Hospital on Dundas Street East. For the past week the new line painting machine has been in the vicinity painting its merry way. The trouble is that no one took the care to remove the old lines. The result is a series of parallel solid and double lines that may be beautiful to the devotee of modern art, but is, indeed confusing to the motorists, particularly at night.

Perhaps, someone could get rid of the superfluous lines or tell the poor frustrated motorist exactly what he is supposed to do.

There is a bright side to the situation.. If you should get in an accident because of the lines you are only seconds away from the hospital's emergency entrance.

Dust-bowls, and deserts and droughts have, to my mind, made men turn more and more shortsightedly to the land. They have failed to see the sea. And yet it has always been there, lapping at their shores, potentially the greatest provider of them all, and certainly the most unexploited this far. The twentieth century may well become known as the age when the sea—at last—fulfilled its rightful role in helping to solve the problems of man.—Science writer and explorer Anthony Smith.

In the summer I always expect to improve my mind, but a reference of Saintbury's led me to take down a cheap edition of Poppy Diary . . . When you open Peppys you get one leg on the fly paper at once and it is hard to get away.—C. W. Holmes, Jr.

Ottawa Offbeat

Ladies of Diplomatic Row In Used Clothes Business

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Capital cocktail conversation . . .

First matron: "Diedre, darling, you look simply ravishing in that delicious little number!"

Second matron: "Terribly sweet of you, Pamela, really, to notice. Actually, it's just a little thing, a Coco Chanel original they swear, that I picked up at Bergdorf's when we were in Manhattan last week."

First matron: "Heavens. I'm so relieved to hear you say that, Diedre dear. Because, do you know, I could have sworn I saw the same devastating little gown on the wife of the French ambassador just last week at the Indonesian garden party. Isn't that excruciating!"

Not so excruciating, really after all.

In fact, maybe Pamela, the dear sweet catty old thing, did see it on the French Ambassador's wife.

And Diedre, that darling social tabby, knew that she knew full well she had indeed.

When the diplomat going into the second-hand clothing business and applying the trade-in principle to the latest model against the price of the new model just in, Air France, from Paris.

WORKING CLOTHES

In fact, it's quite the accepted thing, these days, for the Ottawa's ever-expanding "Foreign Colony," to turn in the once-worn evening gown, tuxedo and evening dress for the considerably - more - than - pinmoney-minded concern for the nights of others which some like to picture as their only concern. If other civil rights workers share Miss Burrows' viewpoint, perhaps they will eventually be able to make the white people of the south realize that, in cutting themselves off from the Negroes, they are limiting their own freedom. Such a realization would bring reform much faster than appeals for support of abstract ideals.

What is involved in the fight against racial barriers is basically the right of the individual to choose for himself or herself the persons with whom he or she will association, without any artificial barriers erected by others.

No white person in his right mind wants to be friends with all Negroes; every white person in his right mind can realize there are some Negroes whose friendship would enrich his life. No intelligent Negro would want to be associated with some white people; every intelligent Negro will recognize there are some white people whose friendship would prove rewarding.

The fight against segregation and apartheid is a fight for freedom, for the white people as well as for Negroes.

This little shop, with a very sharp eye on the rather special market catering to the high - living novelle-on-the-Rideau, has been buying itself almost exclusively with the trading, repairing, general reconditioning and perhaps a skilful touch of remodelling, of other people's apparel from Diplomatic Row.

For resale to women with the taste and, for high living, to such as Mrs. Ambassador Extraordinary and Mrs. Minister Plenipotentiary, both lacking skilly, of course, the same gem stones bought-on-the-installment plan.

To the diplomat's wife, in all fairness to her, the cost of the costly cocktail gowns and expensive evening dresses are really no more than "working clothes."

Almost a uniform, they go with the job of diplomatic entertaining, which to the hostess in one of the mansions of swanky Rockcliffe Park or on the lower apartment penthouses where the Diplomatic Set likes to disport itself, is good, solid work, even a career.

For the Ambassador's wife, or the wife of his naval, air, commercial cultural, or press attaché, evening wear is strictly down and the cocktail hour. As with The Beatles, it's very often "a long day's night" for Mrs. Diplomat.

TRADE IN:

Required to dress the part she must certain the labels on her clothes are the most delmee from the International world of fashion.

So in they come, sir express about the Trigere, Balenciaga, Arthur Jablow, Jacques Fath and the other mandarins of the wondrous world of style.

Like any woman, even Mrs. John Doe, busy keeping house and raising six children on a six-pinched budget, Mrs. Diplomat distinctly dislikes wearing the same gown twice.

But unlike Mrs. John Doe and most other women, she doesn't have to.

Instead, she trades in the old gown and for Mrs. Ambassador and Mrs. Minister, "old" is after you've worn it once — for a new one at a profit, racing towards the cost of a number just in off the Paris jet or, if hurryly, from the "boutique du", picked up at Saks Fifth Avenue, Hattie Carnegie's and other scenes of the elitely fantastic, on shopping excursions to New York.

Makes it stylishly cozy for everybody, including Mrs. John Doe, who might otherwise never come within several hundred dollars and a hatful of daydreams of ever hanging a Coco Chanel label in her ever underwrought wardrobe.

Trouble is, unless you're a tourist who accidentally wanders into the "little shop" to carry off your booty, is triumph home, you can be caught up in a little sociable clawing and meowing like Diedre and Pamela.

Strictly Personal

Nations, Like People, Differ

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: We deplore the "senseless vandalism" of delinquents, as if it would be more excusable if it made more sense; but such boys, not having learned to do what is right for its own sake, proceed to do what is wrong for its own sake — which, in a perverse way, is more "moral" than committing wrongs out of calculating greed.

. . . am tired of hearing about public men with "the courage of their convictions"; Nero and Caligula and Attila and Hitler had the courage of their convictions — but not one had the courage to examine his convictions, or to change them, which is the true test of character.

The nervous restlessness of tourists, their inability to relax and enjoy the surroundings without some frenetic activity, illustrates the truth of Ben Franklin's saying that "the only cure for sin is to find it unbearable."

How many of us would attend certain parties if we didn't fear that by staying away, other guests might assume we hadn't been invited?

A mature society would pay its politicians at least as much as they make today, give police work the status of a professions, divorce it utterly from politics, and put all candidates through a rigid psychological examination to weed out the psychopaths, misfits and sadists.

A nation, like a person, has a temperament in which either the masculine or feminine characteristics are dominant; it is no accident that the symbol for England is strongly feminine, while the symbol for La Belle France is a beautiful woman.

"All that is good makes me productive," said Nietzche. "I have no other proof of what is good." And all of Nietzsche's touchstone could there be?

What the ordinary person means by a thing of genius is some gross distortion or suspension of the laws of nature, some vulgar and unbalanced exaggeration of but life itself strikes high as commonplace, when in truth a blade of grass is as much a work of the brain is a greater miracle (to the thoughtful person) than any piece of cosmic showmanship.

Two things most unfathomable in human nature are man's stupidity of good people and the perversity of bright people.

When a child complains that there is "nothing to do," he is not bored with his environment, but with himself; and his education in resourcefulness has been defective, no matter how well he does at school.

It is only a beginning to say that "The proper study of mankind is man"; we have got to focus that statement and say, "The proper study of mankind is — me."

Poverty the Spur

New York Times

If every person on earth could count on enough food of the right kind, the present turbulence might be unable to disappear. Well - fed people can reason things out. Starving people cannot. Yet we still have the shocking disparity between those nations which, with whatever troubles they have, are satisfactorily fed, and those that are not. A third of the earth's population goes with less than it needs, from birth to death.

Infantile Dishonesty

Toronto Globe and Mail

The capacity of some parliamentarians for childish-nonsense, compounded by a sort of infantile dishonesty, begins to annoy, and the "What is a hundred million?" argument is a case in point.

It all began in the House of Commons on Tuesday when Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker, speaking of the Premier of Quebec, said: "He was promised 100 million, or 200 million—I am not sure which—just before the election." Prime Minister Pearson replied that the "figure was hundred million?"

Now, as anybody who never heard of C. D. Howe knows, that was a wisecrack intended to needle Mr. Diefenbaker, who had made much political hay out of the item Mr. Howe's dismissal of a million dollars as unimportant. Mr. Gordon was pointing out that Mr. Diefenbaker had just lightly skipped over a hundred times that amount. There shouldn't have been a mayjack in the House who failed to get the exact meaning. He believed for an instant that either Mr. Diefenbaker or Mr. Gordon felt that $100 million was unimportant.

Up popped Conservative Michael Starr, however, to turn the needle back on the Minister, not by taking his words literally and thereby imputing to the financial affairs of the Government a lack of the proper reverence for $100 million. At which, of course, Mr. Gordon had to solemnly forward to explain what he meant: that instead of tossing a sweetpea he should formally have asked Mr. Diefenbaker "whether $100 million did not make any difference to him."

Dishonor were even and there the matter would have rested. But during the night some stooge of Mr. Gordon's, fearful that the Minister might have exposed himself to another Howe hunk, inserted a "the" into the official Hansard version of the Minister's crack, so that it read: "What is the one hundred million?"

Immediately the Conservative pack was in full cry against the Minister of altering his meaning in Hansard, and quite clearly trying to do by the grounds-work for what they hoped could be made a major political issue —that is, Liberal Ministers of Finance views $100 million of taxpayer money as a triviality. Altering the draft of Hansard so that the official version reads differently to the way it was spoken in the House is a habit indulged in, legitimately, by every member of the Commons. Irony does not always come across in the printed word, and if the true meaning is to be conveyed the spoken words most often be changed. This change is not venal, just stupid. It does not alter the meaning of the spoken words, for the simple reason that it is the words but in their situation but it gave the Opposition the opportunity to re-open the matter.

For the sake of a cross and tired public will the nonsense now cease.

Mr. Gordon should stop making wisecracks. He can't handle them. As for Mr. Diefenbaker, another man's words into what he knows they did not mean. It is dishonest. If the two children will now stand in the corner, the rest of the House might get on with our business.

To Your Good Health

When Ulcers Reach Certain Stage, Surgery in Order

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My sister has had a duodenal ulcer for some time.

1 — Can it be cured without an operation? She doesn't believe in an operation because she knows some people who had operations and still suffer from ulcers.

2 — Does smoking keep it from being cured? She lives alone and says if she can't have an occasional cigarette she doesn't know what she would do. She does not drink.

I can see her point, for if I lived out in the sticks as she does with no neighbors or anybody to talk to I'd be nuts all day long. Please give me an answer to tell her. — B. M.

If you want me to say no, operations don't necessarily cure ulcers, all right, I'll say so. (But when there is a perforation, there isn't anything else to do. And whether the ulcer recur depends not on the surgery but on the way the patient reacts.)

If you want me to say that it's all right to smoke, I won't. It isn't all right. If living out in the sticks is impossible without cigarettes, then the thing to do is move.

In blunt language, for every person who has to smoke because of living out in the sticks, there are two who use they smoke because they have to live in the city — it would be so much calmer and healthier.

If you want to help your sister (or at least give her a chance to help herself) get copy of my booklet on "How to Heal Peptic Ulcers and Hyperacidity." Send for a copy send 25 cents in coin and a long unstamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

One's attitude toward life is important — especially with ulcers. The person who lives out in the sticks and objects to it may be no different from the person who lives in the noisy city and objects to it. Learning to adapt to life is necessary.

Some people can be happy and content wherever they are. They rarely have ulcers. Others — well, you know what I mean.

Surgery gets rid of the ulcers, and is performed on a large percent. If the patient then learns to relax and learns a few other rules about avoiding ulcers, they are gone for good. But if the patient thinks that the surgery is going to do it all for him, then new ulcers can form.

With ulcers you have to change your attitude toward life, your way of living. The doctor can help, but he can't do it all.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there a difference between certain brands of aspirin? Is it all right for a person with arthritis to take six to eight tablets a day if there are no after-effects? — M. N.

Aspirin is aspirin, regardless of brand. Aspirin is a specific chemical: Acetylsalicylic acid. Six or eight tablets a day for arthritis is not an unusual dosage, so I wouldn't worry.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do you think exercise is necessary to keep on a reducing diet, or is it a lot of work for nothing? — M. A. M.

Any exercise that burns up some calories, according to how much effort you put into it. Therefore, exercise can be of importance in reducing.

Quite aside from that, exercise is essential to tone up the muscles and the body generally. I would not, frankly, expect anyone to achieve much in the way of weight reduction without at least moderate exercise.

Emphysema can be controlled. To learn how to live with this serious lung disease, write to Dr. Molner requesting a copy of the booklet, "How To Control Emphysema," enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 15 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

VD Epidemic Sweeps B. C.

Victoria Times

Health Minister Eric Martin says that venereal disease has reached epidemic proportions in British Columbia.

The minister has outlined the help that is available through doctors and clinics, to active cases. He has also called for better education on the subject.

This is excellent, though it comes a little tardily. Too many efforts to inform the young have been hauled by an unscientific opposition to sex. Ignorance, fostered and by an unwillingness in the home to discuss what is generally considered a distasteful subject.

The situation in British Columbia today indicates an immediate need to remove the blinkers imposed by a conception of modesty that has little place in a realistic world.

On the question of morality a larger point is accountered. Mr. Martin says the services should do a lot more than they are doing. But the churches can influence only those they can reach and they cannot reach 100 per cent of the population. They can, in fact, touch only a small fraction of those most in need of moral influence.

Parents may have some significant influence, but a relatively small portion of 15-to 19 - year - olds among whom venereal infection is rampant. Disease is reportedly rising sharply. They can expect to have little effect on adults over 25, where infection is statistically the most prevalent. This, of course, is a major social problem.

But nothing should stop a direct and effective campaign on the medical front. And in that campaign a reluctance to face facts should have an equal target with ignorance.

Limits Cannot Be Imposed — By Govt.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons committee on procedure said Wednesday any plan to put a time limit on House of Commons debates must be agreed to by all parties and not imposed by the government.

The committee, composed of representatives of all parties meeting with Speaker Alan Macnaughton, said it had spent eight weeks on the question of allocating debating time, and so far has found no acceptable formula.

"Your committee is of he opinion that this is not an area for legislation or unilateral action on the part of the government," the committee said in its 10th report to the Commons, tabled Wednesday.

"Any change in the rules to provide machinery for the allocation of time should, in our view, be worked out through consultation among all parties since the successful implementation of any scheme will require good faith on all sides."

The committee report followed a statement earlier this month in the Commons by Prime Minister Pearson, who said the government would be faced with deciding whether it should itself introduce some rule changes if they cannot be agreed upon by consent among the parties.

Human Heart Silent Servant Of All Life

Never seen, rarely heard, the human heart is the silent servant of all life.

The increased stress placed on it by modern living has also brought an upsurge of heart ailments—and an awareness of the most vitally silent role in human affairs.

At this year's Belleville Fair, the public not only has an opportunity to discover more about the heart—and its problems.

It is also possible to hear it in action.

Through a special audio machine, those visiting the booth of the Belleville chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation, may listen in on tapes of heart beats, ailing and otherwise.

Literature emphasizing the importance of the message presented also is freely available.

Cut-off Date For Amnesty On Sept. 1st

OTTAWA (CP) — The Sept. 1 cut-off date for amnesty for Chinese immigrants who are in Canada illegally will apply only to newly - landed immigrants, Citizenship Minister Tremblay said in the Commons Wednesday.

He announced last Friday that Chinese immigrants who entered Canada illegally would have only until Sept. 1 to come forward voluntarily and legalize their status. There were protests in the Commons that the cut-off date was too soon.

Mr. Tremblay said that on Monday, the first office day following his original announcement, more than 400 unmarried Chinese origin refugees registered to regularize their status in Canada. He told the Commons this indicated here still are large numbers of Chinese immigrants who have not taken advantage of the amnesty announced four years ago.

"In view of this," Mr. Tremblay said, "the date of Sept 1 will apply only to individuals entering Canada on or after that date."

Fickle Old Continent Comes Up With Beautiful Summer With Big Number of Tourists

By ALAN HARVEY

PARIS (CP)—Every so often, by some miracle of meteorology, the fickle old Continent shakesgoose its erratic habits and comes up with a series of blissful days designed for bikinis, blisters and barrels of suntan oil.

This is just such a golden summer. From the crowded beaches of Brittany to the sophistication of fashionable Deauville and the Azure Coast, it's a tourist-happy time.

"I've never seen so many cars in all my life," said a customs official on the Franco-Spanish frontier at the height of a traditional August rush that saw motorists driving by night and sleeping by day to elude traffic jams.

In Europe, excluding sunny Spain and Italy, a good year is all the more desirable—and perhaps perversely rare—because of the continuing confirmed preference for cramming vacations into July and August, a shorter cycle than in North America.

SOME GRUMBLING

Amid the heat haze, a few grumbles emerge. Hoteliers deplore the craze for camping and a new-found French passion for joining holiday clubs; travellers complain at being "taxey pears" exploited by a moneygrubbing tourist industry.

Operation Vacances, a government - sponsored campaign to keep prices down, seemed to bring only marginal results on the Riviera where, in the words of the Paris paper L'Aurore, no American wants to look like an America any more for fear of being gouged.

As the holiday season approaches its climax, a traveller in Britain notes some striking changes. Out-of-the-way coves that five or 10 years ago saw few visitors are dotted with the bright blue and orange of camp'a's' tents; rural woodland havens, once the preserve of the loneliness, bristle with barbed wire against tourist encroachment.

This mass invasion of transient campers reflects France's post-war renascence. It is part of a trend created by an industrial breakthrough, resulting from generous state family allowances that have reversed the demographic trends of generations.

It may seem sad to see the old rural overrun, but it's reassuring to know enjoyment is more widespread. With weather like this, you can see with the Parisian who, asked why he wanted to be a schoolteacher, cited two reasons—July and August.

Absent-Minded Boulevardiers

PARIS (Reuters) — Parisians are becoming more and more absent minded.

That at least is the impression given by the latest figures issued by the capital's official "lost and found" depot.

The number of items which appear at the centre is increasing not only from year to year, but also from month to month.

Early summer seems to be the peak season for lost articles. One explanation offered for this is the fact that Parisians tend to rush wildly about the city just before the annual mass exodus for summer holidays, while tourists visiting the city are prone to lose their belongings on an unlimited scale.

Keys top the list of items lost in Paris.

The characteristic French habit of keeping all possessions under lock and key results in a massive accumulation of keyrings, averaging some 800 keys a day.

French - women are most prone to forget their groceries in spring.

KEEP BASKETS

Market baskets replete with highly odoriferous cheeses, the ever-present "bifteck" (beefsteak) and seasonal fruits and vegetables are held for just 24 hours. If by then their owner does not appear, the perishable produce is distributed to a charitable organization. But the empty basket is held for six months.

During the tourist season, foreign visitors lose passports, suitcases, cheques, tickets, cameras and money at a rate which is exceeded only by the safety and shopping basket. Personal papers are held for a year and then are burned.

The majority of French pickpockets have a special code of honor toward their victims. A thief who steals a wallet takes the money it contains. But nine times out of 10, he is considerate enough to deposit the wallet containing the owner's identity papers in the nearest rubbish bin.

Garbage collectors find the wallets and deposit them at the lost and found centre.

Rust and Mildew May Attack Lawns

Rust and powdery mildew are two fungi which may attack lawn grasses in late summer and early fall. Plant pathologists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture say that Merion Kentucky bluegrass lawns are particularly susceptible to attack by rust fungi. The rust turns the bluegrass brownish, with reddish brown raised spots on leaves and stems.

With high fertility the Merion may grow faster than the rust can discolor it. Several chemicals will help control rust if applied when the fungus first appears. Repeated applications with actidione, zineb ormaneb, may be necessary to keep rust under control.

Powdery mildew occasionally develops on Kentucky bluegrass in shaded areas but is seldom a major problem. A white powder is conspicuous on the leaf surface. If powdery mildew is a recurring problem it may be advisable to replant shaded areas with more suitable varieties of grasses such as creeping red fescue, rough stalked bluegrass, Kentucky bluegrass or a mixture of these grasses.

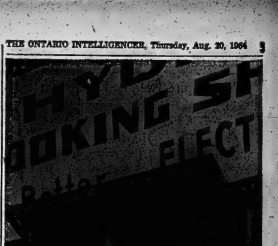
YOUTH MEET

KITCHENER (CP) — Teenagers from across Canada and the United States are in Kitchener to attend the five - day Mennonite youth fellowship convention, held in Canada for the first time. The convention will include group Bible study, workshops on topics vital to youth, a dramatic presentation and address by leading Mennonite speakers.

First Malaysia Soldier Killed

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) The defence ministry said today that another Indonesian guerrilla and the first Malaysian soldier were killed in a clash with Indonesian forces Wednesday night.

The ministry said 30 to 40 Indonesian guerrillas had landed on the peninsula Monday now have lost three men killed and more than 10 captured. Besides the one Malaysian killed two were wounded. The fighting took place in the Pontian swamps about 20 miles from Singapore.



President Tunku Abdul Rahman told reporters he believed the objective of the infiltrators was "to stir up trouble, to kill people and assassinate government leaders."

He added the situation was "now very much under control."

The Malaysian government said the infiltrators were sailing from Indonesia and were Indonesian - trained Malaysian Chinese and Malays.

Lady Cops Drag on Force Says Chief

COLOMBO (Reuters)—Ceylon's inspector-general of police, Mr. C. H. Senanayake, thinks highly of his police dogs.

But he considers lady cops "A drag on the force."

"The dogs are a very worth while investment," he said. "But the enlistment of women constables does not appear to give value for money and I shall give the matter of future recruitment my serious consideration."

The Ceylon police force has a total of 20 dogs, Alsatians and Boxers. It also has 50 women—two sergeants and 48 patrolwomen. The experiment of enlisting women as police was first made in 1948.

Disenayake said the experience of 15 years "does not justify the hopes with which the idea was put forward. He added:

"There seems to be no justification for employing women to perform duties performable more satisfactorily by men, and it is undesirable that man - hours and manpower are avoidably expended in assuring that adequate protection is always available to the police woman. . . "

Ontario Plums Are Versatile Fruit in Fall

Yellow, yellow - green, red, purple and blue - black are the many colors of fresh Ontario grown plums.

Plums are available from August to October, but are most plentiful in September. Early Golden, a yellow, freestone plum with a reddish blush makes a delicious fresh fruit and is on the market in early August. Shiro, another early yellow plum, matures in mid-August and is popular for eating fresh. The Grande Duke, a large blue plum and the Dawson, small oval blue or black plum, are both available in mid-September. These two varieties are better for cooking as they are quite astringent when eaten raw. Dawsons make particularly tasty jam, with just a hint of tartness.

APPETIZING DESSERTS

Italian Prunes, medium - sized freestone blue plums with good keeping qualities make appetizing summer desserts either fresh or cooked. Reine Claude, a type of green gage plum is small, round, and has a sweet flavor making it excellent for canning. Italian Prune and Reine Claudes are abundant in the latter half of September. The latest variety to appear on the market in mid-October, is the President, a large blue plum with good keeping qualities.

When buying plums, food specialists at Macdonald Institute, Guelph, recommend choosing plump plums that are free from blemishes and yield slightly to pressure. Refrigerate and wash before eating. Plums retain fresh colour packed in a little syrup add variety and enjoyment to summer meals.

FRESH PLUM CAKE

Tart, juicy plums, served raw, stewed, in pies or in jams lend a hint of autumn to summer meals. Old-fashioned plum cake from the Foods Department of Macdonald Institute, Guelph, is certain to please both fruit fans and cake lovers.

PLUM CAKE

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour, 1¼ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, ¾ cup butter or shortening, 1 egg, ½ cup milk, 16 plums, halved and pitted, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ½ tablespoons brown sugar, 3 tablespoons melted butter, ¼ cup jelly, currant, raspberry or apple, 1 tablespoon hot water (approximately).

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. With pastry blender or two knives, cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse meal. With fork, stir in combined egg and milk.

Spread dough in greased 12" x 7½" x 2" pan. Arrange plums, cut edge down on cake dough. Sprinkle with combined sugar, cinnamon, cloves and butter. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 25 minutes or until plums are tender. Heat jelly with enough hot water to make a syrup; brush over fruit. Cut in squares and serve warm with light cream or ice cream. Makes six servings.

Successful Living

Tables Should Be Turned On Juvenile Husband

DEAR DORIS — My 33 years of marriage have been difficult in the extreme due to several factors. My husband (who is 43 years my senior) has always balked at relinquishing his bachelor freedoms and has frequently absented himself from the home during the crucial years.

His has always made me feel inadequate. He himself is a conceited and selfish man who people find very hard to take.

Whenever I displease him, he punishes me beyond all reason by sulking and stamping off. He prolongs this silent, vicious disapproval for days at a stretch. I cannot face a "Darby and Joan" life with him throughout the retirement years which face us in two or three years' time.

DORIS CLARE

I don't know what to do; whether to struggle on with the unhappy security I have always known or to venture out into a single life with no job training and giving up forever the social life of mixed couples, when I can achieve it I enjoy.

Right now I am going through another silent treatment for something he didn't like, and am not eating properly, having nightmares every night and afraid of going out of my mind. — DREADING FUTURE.

DEAR DREADING — Some women would have left at the first sulk. You have acted like a shock absorber and your own personality and nervous system have suffered. He has also convinced you that you are inadequate.

The fact is, this self-centred man-child is far less adequate than you are; and needs to be shocked into seeing that his silent treatment doesn't work.

Go on strike: either leave temporarily or refuse to function as a homemaker. Stick it out until he capitulates, come what may!

DEAR DORIS — I answered an advertisement for dance lessons and paid for a series of ten.

Then the ordeal began. I was taken into a small room and the manager began to pressure me; asked all sorts of questions concerning my private life and money. Leaned over the table and spoke fixedly at me — told me the course was $2,000. I refused to give in. From then on the manager would drag me off the dance floor to question me. In the end I gave in and paid $1500.

I went in there for an hour's dancing and have been drawn into all this against my better judgment. I have felt positively ill for the last few weeks. — FLEECED.

DEAR FLEECED — There are more legitimate and friendly ways of learning how to dance. You have been the victim of high-pressure salesmanship.

(1) Ask your bank manager for his help in getting Value Received or your money back.

(2) Report it to your local Business Bureau. Any dancing school employing such methods should be exposed.

(3) Resolve to sign nothing under pressure and without consulting an adviser who has your best interests at heart.

DEAR DORIS — I have been going steady with my boy friend for six months. He is 17 and I am 16. The other night he told me he wanted to break up for a week and then get back together at the end of the week. He told me he wanted his freedom. He says he likes me a lot and doesn't want to break up for good.

DEAR GIRL — Isn't six months about par for a steady? Give him his freedom before he helps himself to it.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — What can I use for warts that are spreading? I had four medium sized ones on my hand. I scratched them and now I have some on my forehead and chin.

I don't want to have them taken out (needle) because I've seen the marks they leave! — SIXTEEN.

DEAR SIXTEEN — Small warts are caused by a virus and can spread from one spot to another, and from one person to another. Treatment may be by swabbing with a chemical, cauterizing, X-ray or injections. Get to a skin specialist.

Anniversary Celebrated At Stirling

STIRLING—On August 16th approximately 200 neighbors, friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McDonnell, 375 Front Street West, Stirling on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

The home was decorated with white and gold crepe streamers and bells and several gift bouquets of summer blooms.

Nine grandchildren provided a large basket of flowers for the livingroom and a low bowl of yellow blooms for the tea table. Other floral gifts were from Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211, Stirling as Mrs. McDonnell has been a member for several years; and from other friends.

Guests were present from Calgary, Toronto, Port Credit, Oshawa, Port Perry, Kingston, Desewa and nearby communities.

Mrs. Claude Tucker welcomed the guests as they arrived. The bride of fifty years ago received wearing a frock of navy lace over taffeta with corsage of bronze chrysanthemums. She was assisted by her husband. The guest book was in charge of Mrs. Charles Conley and Mrs. L. Payne.

The many gifts were opened and displayed by Mrs. Wilmot Shortt, Mrs. Harold Regenburg and Mrs. Allan McDonell. There included a step table and table lamp from the patrons of Stirling mail route No. 3. Mr. McDonell has served as rural courier for the past 36 years.

Among the many greeting cards and telegrams received were messages from Hon. John Diefenbaker, Rod Webb, M.P., and Premier John Robarts, while Elmer Sandercock, M.L.A. delivered a framed scroll in person.

The members of River Valley Women's Institute catered as Mrs. McDonell has been a valued member of that organization for many years.

The tea table was centred with a tiered anniversary cake decorated with white roses, gold leaves and topped with bells and gold numbers. The cake was set in a bed of tulle and flanked with candelabra holding golden candles. Two silver services and flowers completed the setting.

Those who poured were Mrs. Mabel Airhart, Miss Mary Mulke, Mrs. Sid Ellacott, Mrs. Harold Cross, Mrs. Don Tucker and Mrs. Arthur Vandersoort. Servitors were Misses Shirley Anne McDonell, Connie Tucker, Linda Ellacott, Donna Tucker, Elaine Vandervoort and Susan Tucker. The girls were white crepe aprons with gold trim. Two heirloom cups and saucers were used which were over 100 years old and are a family treasure.

Mrs. McDonell was the former Edna Janet Oram and was born in Bangor township. Her parents were the late Duncan Oram and his wife Janet Bennett. Mr. McDonell is a son of the late John McDonell and his wife Amy Waldron. They were married by Rev. W. E. Jones at the Methodist parsonage in Foxboro.

They have one daughter Ethel, Mrs. Wilmot Shortt, Belleville R.R. 2 and two sons, Allan, Stirling R.R. 3, and WO 2 Arthur McDonell stationed with the Army at Calgary. They have nine grandchildren.

Mr. McDonell was born in Stirling and has lived most of his life in the Stirling area. He has always been an active member of Stirling Agricultural Fair board.

Mrs. F. Smith contributed two readings; six girls sang a chorus.

Articles made by the Messenger Group and Boys' Club were displayed.

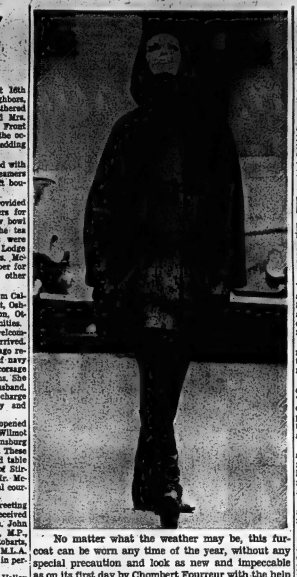
Mrs. Harlow thanked all taking part in the program; Mrs. Clancy thanked the children for their part.

At the close Mrs. Smith expressed appreciative thanks for the efficient way the Messenger girls had arranged the plates and served the lunch.

Open Letter!

TO MOTHERS OF LITTLE GALS FROM 5 to HIGH SCHOOL AGE..

How does your daughter grow? With naturally curly hair? If so, we'll cut her hair in a style that will be trim and tantalizing. If not, we'll cut her hair to a perky length and give her a baby soft permanent wave.



No more putting it up every night or after every rain storm. This plan is not only helpful to you, but good for your child. Most little girls are coquettes at heart. We'll wager a child who looks as pretty as she can, will be as smart as she can — and happier — in school.

Natural Look In Models Being Sought

STOCKHOLM (Reuters)—New York fashion designer Oleg Cassini is enlisting the charms of Swedish women in a battle against the cult of what he calls the "skinny and too mannish" model.

During a recent visit to Europe, he came to Sweden to interview likely candidates for modelling. He was enthusiastic.

"What I want to do is to create a new look called the 'natural look,'" he said. "Scandinavian beauty has always appealed to me, and I have found that there are extraordinarily attractive girls here.

"I am sure that I can find some good models without make-up, with long hair which has not been spoiled by too many fashionable hairdressers, and who are basically looking."

Cassini has been quoted as saying that the present civil rights revolution in the United States and reaction to it, creates a climate of confusion and that there is a big market for women who are the opposite in a country and its fashions.

According to this theory, no startling fashion developments are to be expected in the United States for the time being. The time is therefore ripe to introduce a "natural look" with all the right curves in the right places.

One slender Stockholm model does not agree. Twenty-year-old Aimee Asmundsson, whose vital statistics are 33-20-35, said of the well-rounded mannequin:

Such a model will never be accepted in Paris. It is not the girl who is on show but the clothes which she is wearing.

"I think a model should be neutral and impersonal."

MR. AND MRS. WILMOT RAY SCOTT

Scott – Yull

The bride's mother received her guests wearing a dress with a blue silk floral pattern on a white background, white accessories, and corsage of white 'mums tinted with gold.

The mother of the bridegroom assisted wearing a blue nylon dress, white accessories and corsage of white 'mums tinted with gold.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls with the bride wearing a blue linen suit, white shoes, hat and gloves and white 'mums.

Job Counselling Available For Women at Exhibition

Job counselling will be available to every woman who attends the Canadian National Exhibition this year. The Women's Bureau of the Ontario Department of Labour will have a job counselling and employment survey booth in the Queen Elizabeth Building at the C.N.E.

Along with job counselling the Women's Bureau will question everyone who visits the booth in a survey to obtain information which will assist the Government in interpreting trends in women's employment and training needs.

In commenting on the booth, the Honorable H. L. Rowntree, Q.C., Minister of Labor, pointed out that the job counselling and employment survey which the Women's Bureau is conducting at the C.N.E. is unique because it gives information and advice without charge and presents an opportunity for women to voice their opinions on such matters as day care for pre-school children and job training.

LEARN ABOUT WOMEN

Individual counselling is not a regular function of the women's Bureau, but through this service, which is advocated by many groups in the community, the Bureau expects to learn a great deal from women about their views on employment.

Women of all ages are expected and encouraged to visit the booth, but it is likely that many will have passed their 40th birthday. The reason being that women in the 45-65 year age group in addition to being one-third of all women who work are in the age group which has shown the greatest proportionate increase in workers since 1950.

In anticipation of the jobs women will be interested in, the Women's Bureau has assembled information covering job description, qualifications and training for 120 occupations usually performed by women in clerical, sales, service, industrial, professional and managerial fields.

A highly qualified staff experienced in vocational interviewing will do the counselling and conduct the survey. The survey, which uses the questionnaire technique, will be tabulated and studied after the Exhibition is over. As well, the staff will answer questions about labor laws in Ontario that affect women.

Land of Little People Built Entirely by One Man

VICTORIA (CP) — It looked like any intersection.

A sailor was crossing the street, a gasoline station and telephone booth stood on one corner, a policeman watched the traffic flow.

Then a giant stepped over a field and on to the street.

"Look, Mommy, there's even a telephone booth," said 12-year-old Mary Anne Braund of Seattle as she reached down to the red and white kiosk.

She was a visitor to the Land of the Little People, one acre of miniature countryside in nearby Central Saanich.

Built on a scale of one inch to the foot, the little countryside and village seem to have everything.

A waterfall tumbles down a mountain, flattens into a stream and winds across meadows. A cable car makes its way up and down the mountain slope.

A few hundred feet along, the river turns the wheel of a stone-built mill. Then it curls past a campsite and tumbles into a lake, one of four on the property.

The windows of shops in the village and nearby shopping centre are decorated with merchandise. The motel restaurant has linen and lamps on its tables, and a tiny kitchen sink is visible through the window of one of the tiny houses.

There are 80 buildings in all, and a ferry stands ready for a trip.

The Land of the Little People was built by Tom Karr who saw his first miniature landscapes in Europe and decided to construct one here. He built everything from houses to bridge and train.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: I'm planning a large buffet party for about 30 people. I plan to seat them at tables of four and six. May I use place cards? Guests will help themselves, but I'll have help to clear and to serve dessert and coffee. I think place cards would facilitate seating, and so I wonder if they may be used even if the meal is somewhat informal. — Mrs. O. F., Charlotte, N.C.

ANSWER: Place cards may be correctly used for the meal you describe, and, with 30 people they'd be a big help in seating guests with a minimum of fuss and effort.

QUESTION: Is it impolite to correct children of visitors who sit by and let their youngsters run wild and damage furnishings? A guest last week paid no attention while her son jabbed at a bassock with a sharp stick. When she did nothing about it, I told the child to stop it before he punched holes in the fabric. His mother said he meant no harm and didn't seem to appreciate my correcting him. Was I incorrect to do so? — Mrs. A. P., Decatur, Ill.

ANSWER: A mother with a child in tow should make sure her youngster behaves properly when visiting, and should correct him if he does not. If she fails to do so, then the hostess certainly may step in and make the child cease being destructive — in defence of her own property.

QUESTION: At a party the other night, I was seated on the sofa next to a man who smoked a pipe. It was impossible to stand the smell of pipe tobacco, so I changed my seat. The smell wasn't as bad on the other side of the room, but it was still annoying. I mentioned to the hostess it was giving me a headache, but she didn't offer to tell the man to put his pipe away. I think when one guest is making another so uncomfortable, it's up to the hostess to do something to remedy the situation. Wouldn't you say so? — Mrs. W. E., Trenton, N. J.

ANSWER: A pipe or cigar smoker should ask those around him if it will disturb anyone if he lights up. If someone objects, then either he should resist smoking entirely, or leave the room while he enjoys his pipe or cigar. Since the man already was puffing on his pipe, the hostess, rightly, didn't want to risk embarrassing him by asking him to put it out. About all you can do in such a situation is grin and bear it, or move over to an open window where the smoke won't be as disagreeable to your sensitive nose.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

The simple truth stares us squarely in the face; despite the seeming success of organized religion, most people are still ethically and religiously illiterate. We mouth religious slogans which we have imbibed in our childhood; but we fail to act upon them because we do not really understand them, in adult fashion. Unfortunately, we have learned religion much as we have learned how to walk — after we absorbed the fundamentals, we stopped thinking consciously about them. As adults, we no more ponder carefully what we mean when we spout religious phrases, than we stop to consider the finest movement of one foot after the other.

INSTANT SALVATION

Some people imagine that religion can be used, like any other item of consumer goods. All you need to do is reach for it, take it off the shelf, stir and serve: "Instant salvatio." they label it. But when we use religion, instead of allowing it to use us, we always end up abusing it.

Some "use" religion as a prop to shore up sagging nervous systems. They rely upon it for the security and strength they refuse to achieve on their own. They would like to see life as neat and easy, a sweet and simple affair. So, they reach for "the Man Upstairs," as they would say, reduce Him to their size, and carry Him in their vest pocket — on the left side, nearest the heart, of course!

RELIGION ABUSED

Others turn to religion as a respectable means of hallowing their hates, not their loves. Because of unhappy temperament, some thrive only in vindictive isolation, fenced off from their neighbors. They need wide barriers and high walls to be happy because, inside, they are so unhappy They flee from the world because they are afraid of it. They cannot abide its open societies, its changing patterns, or the possibility of being persuaded by its convincing opinions. This kind of religion is "useful" because it is safe — safe from the challenge of involvement in the lives and needs of others. But it can only be "used" by "us," never by "them," and so, it is really an abuse of religion.

Still others, the dependent and the emotionally immature, imagine that they can quickly don a cloak of piety, grab the horns of the altar, and easily acquire foolproof protection from anxiety and trouble. They are looking for short-cuts to circumvent the touchy and thorny issues of life. Unfortunately, from what they have heard about religion from some of its over-eager "salesmen, it appears to be their cowardly feelings, not to their courage. But this misuse of religion only succeeds in making weak people weaker still.

RELIGIOUS WITNESS

One can hardly imagine a spiritual renaissance that does not seek to assert the moral relevance of religion to the habit and affairs of men, communities, culture and nations. It is in this arena, particularly, that the "return" seems to founder; it hardly ever gets off the ground. Often the "religious minded" deny their churches and synagogues the moral right to speak out on issues which are patently moral and spiritual. They demand that "the things of Caesar and of God" be permanently separated, and that the religious society stand idly on the sidelines of life to deal only with the "business of the church." This "non-interventionist" attitude prohibits the freely organized religious communities from giving the kind of leadership to society which we are not getting elsewhere.

RACIAL TENSIONS

Racial tensions, anti-minority attitudes, indifference to international problems and other spiritual moment are often fostered within churches and synagogues whose members want a socially respectable, more than an ethically enlightened, religion. Instead of being converted by a church to a moral world-view, too many succeed in converting the church and synagogue to their own prejudices, by declaring the worldly vital human issues to be out-of-bounds for the religious community.

Women's Institutes

QUINTE W.I.

The August meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute was held at the Memorial Hall on Tuesday afternoon with about 35 members and visitors present. President, Mrs. Charles Wood presided and extended a welcome to all.

The convenor of Agriculture, Mrs. W. J. Tufts arranged the following program and asked Mrs. Noble Brown to conduct the program.

Mrs. Frank Doxtater read a poem.

Mrs. Asa Cook sang a solo with Mrs. J. Parrott at the piano.

Mrs. Tufts gave a paper on "Let's have a holiday halfway across Canada." This was an idea of how it would be on a Dutch passenger liner, from Montreal to Fort William. She linked the commerce of shipping on the seaway with its benefits to Canadian Agriculture which shows how one may travel by reading all concluded with a discussion on different aspects of farming today compared with some years ago.

BUSINESS MATTERS

Mrs. Wood resumed the meeting with the following business matters attended to; correspondence was read concerning a short course to be held Oct. 1-2-3; also a letter regarding 4-H Homemaking Club, entitled "Dress Supper Club" with Mrs. Robert Atkins as leader. She will get someone to assist her. A list of resolutions was presented to be dealt with at the area convention to be held at Club Canard on September 14-15. Mrs. Atkins was to look after the W.I. display for the Belleville Fair. It was decided to take a bus trip to Niagara Falls on September 1st. The president thanked the program convener and the lunch committee, Mesdames W. Tuft, F. Mitchell, N. Brown, A. Mitchell, E. Fernsworth.

Miscellaneous Showers Given Young Couple

WELLINGTON — On Saturday evening a number of friends and neighbors from the Front Road and Lake Shore gathered at the town hall to honor Mr. and Mrs. David Dick, recent newlyweds, with a miscellaneous shower. Cards formed the evening's amusement after the games Mr. and Mrs. Dick were seated at a table and Mr. Ronald Cooley read a few congratulatory words to them on behalf of those present. They were presented with many lovely and useful gifts.

The bride and bridegroom expressed their appreciation to their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Parks and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Cooley were in charge of the party served delicious refreshments.

On Saturday afternoon in Wellington a miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Miss Judy Lavender, honoring Miss Donna Stevenson, a bride-to-be of next month.

It was decorated with pink and blue streamers and three bells filled with confetti.

Miss Shirley Jackson read an address and many lovely gifts were carried in by the guest of honor's two sisters, Doris and Diane and Miss Lori Courneyea.

Donna thanked each one most sincerely. She was then showered with the confetti from the balloons above.

A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Charles Lavender, assisted by Mrs. Herman Courneyea, Mrs. Leon Chatnall and Mrs. Gordon Chatnall. The highlight of the lunch was an ice cream cake with "Best Wishes Donna," inscribed on it.

Gherkin Pickles Made Overnight

by Mary Moore

Some of you may remember that I visited the Pollock farm during the maple syrup season last April.

I was there for three days and had an opportunity to sample many of Helen's wide-ranging cooking efforts.

She opened a jar of her Quick Sweet Gherkins and I nearly made a pig of myself on them. They are crisp and slightly sweet and are made by an overnight method.

The success of pickle making depends on the freshness of the cucumbers. Remember that when you plan to make

These are crisp cucumber chunks in tart golden sauce. Helen says 1 tablespoon of the leftover sauce is a good addition to your salad bowl when you are tossing it with mayonnaise.

1½ qts. chunked cucumbers, 2 large onions, sliced, 3 tablespoons coarse pickling salt (non-iodized), 1 qt. water, 1½ cups sugar, ¼ cup flour, 1½ teaspoons celery seed, 1½ teaspoons white mustard seed, ½ teaspoon turmeric, 2 cups vinegar.

Pare medium-sized cucumbers. Cut in half, lengthwise; slice in 1" chunks. Add onions, salt and water, gently stir and let stand 3 hours. Drain thoroughly. Combine dry ingredients; gradually stir in vinegar. Cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Add cucumbers and onions. Heat to boiling. Seal in hot sterilized jars. Makes 4 pints.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Pot roast of beef with brown gravy, mashed potatoes, broccoli, sliced tomatoes on lettuce, fresh fruit cup (cantaloupe balls, sliced peaches, blueberries), orange chiffon cake, tea.

SUNDAY

Fricasseed chicken, fluffy boiled rice, baked mushroom, stuffed tomatoes (see Friday), delicate cole slaw, fresh red plum pie, white cream cheese, coffee.

QUICK SWEET GHERKINS (Helen's overnight method):

50 gherkins (about 2½" long), 1 cup coarse pickling salt (noniodized), 3 qts. boiling water, 2 cups cider vinegar, 1 cup water, 1½ cups granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon mixed whole spices.

Wash, dry and trim stems from gherkins. Place in a crock or large enamel kettle. Combine salt and boiling water. Let stand until cool. Pour over gherkins, cover, and let stand overnight. In the morning, drain well. Boil vinegar, water, sugar and spices (tied in cheesecloth bag), for 10 minutes. Add gherkins. Simmer 2 minutes. At once skim out pickles and pack in hot sterilized jars. Bring vinegar syrup to boil, remove spice bag, then pour over pickles in jars. Seal tightly. Cool; if desired wrap in heavy paper. Store in cool place. Makes 4 to 6 pints. (Number of jars depends on size of pickles. The smaller the gherkins the fewer the jars.)

Wife Must Drop Divorce She Really Doesn't Want

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Three months ago I began divorce proceedings against my husband. I know I acted in a fit of anger and that I should have cooled off and given Mac another chance.

I foolishly disregarded the welfare of my family because I wanted to get even with him for hurting me.

The children cry for their father every day and I am a nervous wreck. The loneliness is unbearable. My older brother spent a few times on detectives and lawyers and I've said so many spiteful things about Mac that I'm afraid I couldn't face my family if I took him back.

ANN LANDERS

My head is bursting with advice from well-meaning friends. Can you give me some unbiased, common-sense guidance? — JUST PLAIN MISERABLE.

DEAR J. P. MISERABLE — You don't want a divorce and you know it, so call off the proceedings at once. Forget about what family and friends will say. Consider only your needs and the needs of your children. Those who love you will understand. The others couldn't care less.

And let this be a lesson to wives who expect perfection from marriage. Any fool can run to family, friends and lawyers when the going gets rough. It takes maturity and courage to stay with a rocky situation and work things out.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have a girl friend who sent for your booklet called "Necking and Petting and How Far to Go." The booklet arrived in a plain envelope and your name was not on the outside which was a big relief to her. She read every word of it.

Three months later this girl had to get married. On the day of her marriage she was two months short of being 16 years old. Everbody was shocked.

What I want to know is why send out booklets to people if they don't do any more good than that? — WONDERING VICKY.

* * *

DEAR VICKY — I'm sorry, dear, but I can't include a guarantee with every booklet that the advice will keep anyone out of trouble.

A girl who knows the facts stands a better chance of staying out of trouble than the girl who is ignorant. But knowledge is only half the battle. The other is self control, and this I can't send in an envelope.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm writing this from boot camp. A couple of days ago my family came down to the station to see me off. Just before I got aboard the train I shook hands with my dad and my brothers and I kissed my mother and my aunt. My buddy was with me. After we got on the train he told me I should not have kissed my aunt on the lips.

My aunt is about 30 I guess, and has always been wonderful to me — like a big sister. I told my buddy I didn't think the kiss I gave her was any different from the kiss I gave my mother. He said my aunt is quite a dish and I ought to "watch it" — for my own good.

Is my buddy right? Believe me, Ann, I never think of my aunt as a dish or anything close. How about it? — BOYFRIEND.

* * *

DEAR BOYFRIEND — I see nothing wrong in kissing your aunt on the lips in the presence of other members of the family. One thing is certain, however, your buddy should never kiss his aunt that way.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO H.B.M.: — You can't stop her. She is of legal age. Tell her for me that when everything else is gone, she'll have just one thing left. Experience.

* * *

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

FDR COTTAGE IS INTERNATIONAL PARK CENTREPIECE—The cottage of former president Franklin D. Roosevelt on Campobello Island is to be the centrepiece of an international park to be dedicated today in a ceremony attended by Mrs. Lester Pearson and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson. The island, in Passamaquoddy Bay between New Brunswick and Maine, is Canadian soil although largely owned by Americans. (CP Wirephoto)

Open Campobello Isle National Park

CAMPOBELLO ISLAND, N.B. (CP)—In a rare public speech, Mrs. Lester B. Pearson today recalled her memories of Franklin D. Roosevelt, late president of the United States.

Mrs. Pearson joined Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson for the opening ceremonies of the Roosevelt Campobello National Park on Campobello Island where the late president spent his summers from the time he was a baby.

"My first, most vivid memories of President Roosevelt go back to those dark days of 1939, when I was with my husband in London among the bombs and the fires, I was alone in Ottawa with my children.

"I remember listening to his fireside chats to the American people pleading the Allied cause against Nazi Germany; and I remember how I prayed that his voice would be heard with understanding and, ultimately, with accord."

Mrs. Pearson recalled that she had met President Roosevelt several times. "I remember how deeply I admired and respected his courage in the face of his physical disability.

"Then one dark day in April, 1945, I came home from the hospital where I was working as a nurse's aid and there at the door was (Canadian ambassy in Washington), waiting to see my husband, was Scotty Reston of the New York Times.

FELT FEAR

"He told me Mr. Roosevelt had died. I will never forget the shock, the deep personal sorrow — and the wave of fear I felt for the future of the free world without him. And I knew that awful feeling of loss would be felt as deeply by millions of Canadians and Americans — and shared by free men around the world on that lonely day."

Campobello Island, an outpost of Canadian territory almost a stone's throw from Maine, was established as an international park today.

Mr. Roosevelt came here as a baby; learned to sail on Passamaquoddy Bay and later brought his own children to the 32-room Dutch colonial cottage his mother bought him in 1912. It was at Campobello that Mr. Roosevelt was stricken with polio in 1921. The old red-shingled summer home of the former president is to be the centrepiece of the new park.

Mrs. Pearson said she was honored and delighted to have part in dedicating the international park to the memory of President Roosevelt.

"I hope the park will give pleasure to many people and, in so doing will enrich for all time the memory of one of history's greatest men."

Text of her address was released to the press in advance.

KENNEDY COPY RIBBON

Earlier, Mrs. Pearson and Mrs. Johnson, who arrived by boat from Maine, cut a ribbon, officially opening the new international park.

The International park, property was donated to the governments of Canada and the United States by the Hammer family of the U.S., as a memorial to President Roosevelt. The gift was acknowledged by Prime Minister Pearson and the late President Kennedy at Hyannis Port, Mass., in May, 1963.

The park will be operated by a commission of three Canadian and three U.S. members.

minister. . . . This (is), one of the most unproductive Parliaments in Canadian history."

None of the three speeches gave any inkling of a change in party positions on the issue itself. The Liberals stand behind the flag with three maple leaves. The Conservatives want a plebiscite. The NDP favors a single maple leaf.

In a flareup during the question period, before the flag debate began Wednesday, Prime Minister Pearson said the government wants a parliamentary recess after the flag issue is settled, that it would proceed with the Canada Pension Plan.

However, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker sought assurance Mr. Pearson will deal with the pension legislation immediately after the flag resolution is "disposed of."

"If he does, we will be behind him on the pension legislation 100 per cent," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

Mr. Pearson said he would be happy to give that assurance if Mr. Diefenbaker, in turn, would give me an assurance that we will be finished with the flag resolution in time to deal with the pension legislation."

URGES LIMIT

Mr. Pearson added that the government would be ready to go ahead with the pension legislation if the Conservatives "will only agree to some reasonable time limit" on the flag debate.

Still later, with tempers rising, Mr. Pearson said the pension legislation is being drafted and will be ready for the Commons "as soon as my right honorable friend (Mr. Diefenbaker) will agree to put an end to the filibuster on the flag resolution."

Mr. Otto said no flag will divide a nation not already divided. "We have a nation in action which prefers to live in separate solitudes." He said the Liberal leader's speech "so many people would be entrenched behind the Red Ensign."

"It is because they are afraid and have gathered under the Ensign in fear of the abolition of one thing—the division of this nation."

The flag had become the banner for English-speaking racism.

Separatism was not the clamor of most people in Quebec. It was only the "ravings of political idiots and charlatans." Mrs knew that — but those who relied on newspaper, radio for their information did not know it.

It was Parliament's duty to state that unity would be preserved. Then the suppor behind the Red Ensign would fall.

To make low - rental units available for rental the corporation would buy up older dwellings and rehabilitate them. It would offer loans, or guarantee loans from individuals to put their own homes in good repair.

Johnson Is Ready to Sign Securities Tax Bill Into Law

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States Congress sent the foreign securities tax bill to President Johnson Wednesday to be signed into law.

He is also expected to sign at the same time the special exemption for Canada on new securities issues. This exemption was pledged to be exercised at presidential discretion, after Canadian government protests about driving up borrowing costs in Canada's main source of investment capital.

The tax proposal about 18 months ago will be retroactive to July 18, 1963, and increases the borrowing cost for foreigners by about one per cent. It applies only to existing Canadian stocks and bonds issued or held in the U.S.

It expires Dec. 31, 1965, but could be extended.

The U.S. administration has suggested that the purpose of the tax has been substantially achieved even before the bill becomes law, curbing demand for United States capital and easing the resultant strain on the U.S. balance-of-payments problem.

WARNING IMPLIED

The possibility of extending the tax beyond the current deadline of 1965 is regarded as another warning to foreign borrowers to use restraint. Canada and others have been advised to hold down their demand for U.S. money.

Informants here suggest there may be a brief and temporary flurry of Canadian entry into the U.S. money markets when the tax bill becomes law. They say some Canadian interests have been preparing for this but that such activity will level out quickly.

The bill encountered a number of amendments before going through the House of Representatives Tuesday and clearing the Senate Wednesday on a voice vote.

Japan and Western Europe appear to be the main targets of the measure, which would impose tax rates of nearly three per cent to a full 15 per cent on bond issues and a flat 15 per cent on foreign stocks acquired in this country.

SPRINGER-BURNS RESIDENCE
Located at 103 East Dundas

Our Architectural Heritage

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

While most mid-18th century homeowners were ensconced in their Tuscan towers or gingerbread bedecked Gothic cottages, a few builders of more restrained taste were developing a severer, squarish vernacular house style—soon became a Canadian classic.

One of the best of these is the Springer-Burns house at 103 Dundas Street East. More elaborate than most surviving examples, its interior and exterior details are a legacy from the Greek taste, which lingered in a modified form in Canada long after it was forgotten in the United States.

In the Springer-Burns house the Greek columns have been reduced to pilasters placed at regular intervals along the exterior walls. The Greek Revival arrangement of three openings in the wall — one of them a door at the side — is restrained to effect the simple, balanced rectangular shape. The unpierced high-roof is a heritage of the British school of architecture. This simple, well-proportioned house plan, is a neat blend of the two cultural influences — the British and the American — which combined to influence every aspect of Canadian life from our nation's beginning.

Although the Springer-Burns house is the only one of its type in the city with pilasters, many scaled-down versions of the same house, lacking the pilasters, but retaining the side-hall plan, abound on William, Ann and Charles Streets in the vicinity of Bridge Street. Most of these houses were built later than the Springer-Burns house and have Tuscan details, such as brackets under the eaves.

A case in point is the red brick Sir MacKenzie Bowell house at 194 William Street. This is a disappointingly unpretentious house for the homestead of a former Prime Minister, but by way of compensation we are informed that the gardens used to be magnificent in Sir Mac's day.

The Springer-Burns was built about 1833, on a subdivision of the Taylor farm, by George Henderson, a barrister, who later became County Crown Attorney. Mr. Henderson is the forgotten hero of another, larger building project. As Aldermen and Chairman of the Market Building Committee, he chose the design and supervised the construction of Belleville's City Hall. His house is better known to older Bellevillans by the name of its next owners, the Springers, who began Springer Lock Company, now International Hardware.

The most vexing problem facing the present owners, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Burns, has been the preservation of the wooden gazebo, one of the few surviving local examples of a favorite Victorian garden ornament. The pagoda-roofed, latticed gazebo, whose design was inspired by the Oriental pavilion, appealed to the Victorians' love of the exotic.

It provided a shrub enclosed shelter where the children could play in the morning and the ladies of the household could take tea in the afternoon. Set among pear trees in the back garden, Mrs. Henderson's gazebo is a perfect symbol of our grandmother's gracious and tranquil way of life.

Range Fires In Nevada Under Control

ELKO, Nev. (AP)—The last and largest of six huge range fires, the worst in Nevada history, was controlled Wednesday, the bureau of land management said.

However, the 200,000 acre Boulder, Flat - Maggie Creek blaze was still considered dangerous, if winds freshened. A crew of 1,000 men remained on hand to battle any new outbreaks.

Meanwhile, bureau officials were planning a grazing land rehabilitation program they hope can be approved before Congress adjourns. About 350,000 acres of range have been burned over since Saturday. Not all of it is of value to stockmen.

Earlier retirement with an incentive through higher pension payments is viewed by the UAW as one means of helping solve the unemployment problem.

The big three's economic offer would increase basic wages from 18 to 36 cents over a three-year period, boost pension payments from $2.80 monthly for each year of service to $3.25 and make 60 years the normal retirement age instead of 65. No proposal was made to raise the pension payments for workers already retired, as demanded by the union.

Elliot Lake Town of Lost Dreams

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP)— This is a town of lost dreams.

It was a dream when uranium-rich ore, millions of tons of it, was found beneath the granite outcroppings and spindly spruce.

The town that sprang up overnight to house the 9,000 miners and their families when they arrived to exploit the find also is a dream, now echo of the planners who laid out shopping plazas and neat homes and said the day of the helter-skelter mining camp was gone.

It was a dream of government officials, federal and provincial, and of parents who could watch their children grow in the clean, new schools and the clean, beautiful surroundings.

It was certainly a dream for get-rich-quick operators, who rubbed their hands at the sight of hard - spending construction men and high-paid miners.

The dreams became nightmares by 1960 after the United States dropped its contracts to buy uranium from the deep mines that had opened—and the town still is trying to wake up from them.

HOMES BOARDED UP

"This was a showcase town a few years ago," says businessman Jack Gauthier. "Now everyone hates the name and the wish they'd never heard of Elliot Lake."

When the mines started to close, forcing the collapse of their markets, people started to leave. From 30,000 five years ago, population fell to 10,000 last January.

By next spring, when only three of the original mines will be working—and one of them on sharply reduced operations — the population will be down to about 3,000.

One - quarter of the 1,800 homes built here have been boarded up and one-third of the 240 business establishments that were around in 1958 have left.

By 1970, everyone from nuclear scientists to government economists and mining executives say, the market for uranium will be booming again—and then so will Elliot Lake.

"Of course there's no doubt about Elliot Lake's long-term prospects," says Mr. Gauthier. "But the point is I don't see what good that will do businessmen now. The town needs immediate relief."

Hopes for this immediate relief include a talked-about $80,000,000 pulp and paper plant nearby, moving the federal department of mines' laboratories here from Ottawa, special low rents and mortgage payments for families needing them, tourists at a dream, low cost apartment complex similar to the School of Fine Arts at Banff, Alta.

"Probably the biggest thing we've got going for us, though," says a businessman who listed more than 30 federal and provincial programs aimed at aiding the town, "is that this is a personal problem for Pearson."

Elliot Lake is in Prime Minister Pearson's riding, Algoma East, and he has taken a hand in many discussions about the town's future.

It is expected that the paper mill—if established—would employ about 1,000 men, with at least half of them settling in Elliot Lake.

HOTELS CLOSED

The mining lobe would provide another 100 local jobs while tourism and the hoped-for educational complex could supply several hundred more.

But while waiting for these economic breakthroughs, the town presents conflicting pictures.

Two of the three original hotels, for example, are closed and one has been rented, at $1 a year, for use as township offices.

In what used to be the coffee shop the city police have their court. Municipal Treasurer Percy Brown works at a desk in what was formerly the dining room.

A nuclear museum has been started in a huge, heated room still containing the bar that tells what it was used for.

Despite the hundreds of empty homes that can be rented for as little as $45 a month, depending on facility by gas, trailer camps still exist.

Although the population has dropped by 5,000 a year for the last four years, a tourist promotional summit provisions Elliot Lake "Canada's newest and most permanent city."

Tomorrow: Boom turns to bitterness in uranium town.

His Whistle Lures Fish

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP)—When Leonard Badgley blows on his police whistle, fish come to be fed.

The 74-year-old retired engineering consultant from Toronto "calls in" fish from the east end of Lake Scugog, where his cottage is located, and feeds them by hand.

He has at least 18 pet carp ranging in size from six to 15 pounds and they visit him at his small dock three times a day to be fed.

Lying on the jetty, Mr. Badgley blows one long and two short blasts. Within seconds hundreds of minnows are swimming around the dock waiting for bread to be tossed into the water.

A short distance away can be seen the carp awaiting their turn. After the minnows are fed, Mr. Badgley blows three sharp, short blasts and the carp move in for their feeding.

Mr. Badgley uses three loaves of bread a day seven days a week to keep his friends, including a pet turtle named Joe, in food.

Fish-calling, he says, is a hobby he inherited from his father, the late Jesse Badgley, who used this method of catching fresh carp from his farm pond in the Niagara district.

"I decided that if the Florida porpoises could be trained there was no reason why the fish in Wye Lake (the local name for the east end of Scugog) couldn't be trained.

"After several weeks of trying, I succeeded in getting a couple of carp to come to the dock. Later, more began to appear at the call of the whistle."

The fish seem to love raisin bread and they will eat anything bread or onion that may be offered to them, he says.

Greece

ther Turkish air strikes against Cyprus.

Earlier, Turkey announced that air units withdrawn from NATO after the week's Turkish air raids over northwest Cyprus would be restored to the alliance. A factor in Turkey's decision was the Greek-Cypriot government's agreement to lift an economic blockade against Turkish-Cypriots.

Food was still scarce in this capital city where barricades are manned, but UN observers said Wednesday that water, vegetables, fruit and bottled gas began moving into Nicosia. Some 20,000 Turkish-Cypriots had been cut off from supplies here.

Supplies were also reported entering the southwestern community of Ktima where 3,000 Turkish-Cypriots had been isolated by a blockade.

Greece's actual withdrawal of units from NATO apparently was limited to a contingent of 150 officers at southeast command headquarters, Izmir, Turkey. A government spokesman said the unit might return to Izmir pending Cyprus developments while other sources said the men might return in four or five days.

Tension had been mounting on the island in the wake of warlike statements over the possibility of another Turkish attack. Turkey had said its assault was prompted by Greek-Cypriot advances against Turkish-Cypriot communities.

Premier Ismet Inonu of Turkey has warned that if the Greek - Cypriots resumed advances against the Turkish-Cypriots, Turkey would again attack Cyprus. Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios, with a pledge from the Soviet Union that it would support Cyprus in the event of a Turkish attack, sent President Demirbachev a telegram in response.

"Your unequivocal warning to the aggressor (Turkey) is the most valuable contribution to the cause of international peace ... being determined to take forces acting in their own narrow and selfish interests," it read.

UN Secretary - General U Thant has chosen Ecuadorian diplomat Galo Plaza Lasso, his UN special representative on Cyprus, to replace the ailing UN mediator Sakari Tuomioja in seeking a permanent political solution in Geneva. Cyprus has accepted U Thant's choice, but Turkey's position was not known.

In other developments, two proposals have been advanced for a change in the UN role here. They are a Danish diplomat's suggestion that the UN be permitted to use force, to maintain peace and a British military leader's idea that UN headquarters should be moved from New York to Cyprus to end the discord.

Under-25's Terrible Drivers -- But Should Be the Best

By BOB TRIMBEE

EDMONTON (CP) — The classroom is the best place to pursue "trusted thinking" that results in hundreds of traffic accidents among young drivers and cost them higher insurance rates, says Alberta Highways Minister Gordon Taylor.

"People in the under-25 age group should be the best drivers," he says. "They have the hope best reflexes. They are quick to react. They have the time to practice.

"But instead, as a group, they're the worst. And the reason is the twisted thinking towards driving held by a minority within the classification."

The minister describes twisted thinking as a tendency to substitute the danger of speed, drinking while driving, "hero escapades" and foolish games, recklessness about road conditions.

"If we can get rid of such thoughts among young drivers we can appreciably reduce the number of accidents that involve them. The best place to do this job is in the classroom. The driver courses conducted in the United States statistics indicate a high school course has reduced accidents among graduates by a minimum 50 per cent."

There are 594,500 drivers in Alberta and 139,500, or about 20 per cent of them are under 25. In the last 10 months, 36 per cent of the 458 fatalities in the province have involved under-25s.

Because under-25s seem to be smart young men and the accidents tend to be more severe, insurance companies impose a surcharge on teen-agers buying automobile insurance, Mr. Taylor says.

"It's unfair,' he adds, "because this approach is the result of lumping all young drivers in the under - 25 age group does not come only from adults or traffic officials. Teenagers, also, want to improve the record.

"All 40 hot rod clubs in Alberta have made safety a prime concern and severely disciplines members who break traffic laws or who drive carelessly. As well, 4-H clubs have made driver safety a key theme and farm a special project within their activities."

Recent Acts of Sabotage Major Setback for Liberal Cause in South Africa

Brian Harrow is a South African journalist who was born in Bloemfontein grew up among Afrikaans-speaking people, and for years has written on the human, social and economic aspects of apartheid. In this story for The Canadian Press, he discusses the growing campaign against liberal South Africans.

By BRIAN BARROW

CAPE TOWN (CP) - Recent acts of sabotage and the senseless and callous acts of terrorism at Johannesburg's main railway station which seriously injured 22 whites have been a major setback to the liberal cause in South Africa.

The South African Liberal party has always condemned violence of any kind. It believes violence can solve no problem and advance no cause. But however much the liberals deplore violence, there is a growing suspicion of anyone with liberal associations or liberal views.

It has been in the interests of the National party government of Hendrik Verwoerd to encourage this atmosphere of suspicion. Over and over, it has tried to equate the support of multi-racialism with communism.

All that was needed to convince the average white man the government was right was an act of terrorism by a group of political fanatics.

It is difficult to convince anyone today that left-wingers are not necessarily Communists and that liberals are not necessarily left-wingers.

In fact, most people accept the government's view that the liberals are only a front for the Communists or are unwittingly helping to achieve Communist aims.

And the circle of suspicion is widening all the time. First it was the known Communists who were marked down as the great danger to white civilization. When the Communists were banned, all left-wing organizations came under fire. These were also banned.

Now the liberals are the target, not only those who belong to the Liberal party but ordinary citizens who happen to have liberal or progressive views.

Recent countrywide raids by security branch police seemed to prove this. The homes of a number of distinguished citizens were searched, also those of many journalists known for their progressive views.

The knock on my own front door came just before dawn and security police armed with a warrant examined every scrap of paper in my home. They looked up chimneys, behind pictures on the walls and they went through every drawer and closet, even my son's toy cupboard.

As the local security police explained, it was their duty to follow up every lead. This might be necessary to get at the saboteurs, but this time they were raiding the homes of ordinary law abiding people who had done nothing but exercise their democratic right to oppose government policy.

CALLED CONGRESS

South Africa has been infected with a strange mixture of anti-liberal hysteria and intolerance, especially in certain National party circles. These people have convinced themselves that it is impossible to be a liberal without helping the Communists.

Last year they called a "people's congress" to combat communism and formed an anti-Communist committee headed by Rev. D. J. Vorster brother of Justice Minister B. J. Vorster.

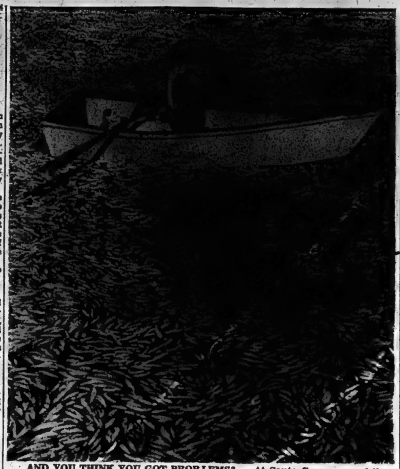
The cabinet minister believes it his mission in life to save South Africa from Red or liberal influences. Recently one of his supporters a prominent civil servant, told a public meeting that the Bodin - like statue of the late Jan Christian Smuts unveiled in Cape Town some weeks ago was an example of Communist infiltration of the arts.

Not even the government newspaper Die Burger could accept such thinking, however, and in a leading article it warned its own supporters that in their zealous hunt for Communist and liberal influences they should refrain from stupid lies that could only make them a laughing stock.

ATTACKED BY STUDENTS

It is unlikely however, that the moderation of Die Burger will stop the rabid anti-liberal feeling among the more fiery Transvaal Nationalists.

For example at a congress of the Afrikaans Students' Association at Potchefstroom, three papers on liberalism made such points as these:



—"Liberalism is a threat to family life in South Africa, a great cause of child neglect and a competitor of communism."

—"The emancipation of women is definitely liberally oriented."

—"School children should be taught about the dangers of liberalism in the same way that they have classes on road safety and vocational guidance."

Far from being contained to students, this sort of thinking is rife among conservative Nationalists and it is being used to distort the liberal image in such a way that liberalism has become a swear word in South Africa.

It is also a convenient way of destroying the Liberal party, for the government might not wish to risk open banning of a party headed by such respected figures as Alan Paton, its president and the author of Cry the Beloved Country, and Dr. Edgar Brookes, former senator representing the natives of Natal and Zululand, now president of history and political science at the University of Natal.

AND YOU THINK YOU GOT PROBLEMS? — At Santa Cruz, a sea of thoroughly dead anchovies has flooded into the small craft harbor, covering the water with an odoriferous layer of pale green corpses. Kim Thevenin, 11, gives an eloquent opinion. The fish were killed by the "red tides". Tide patterns at Santa Cruz don't let the fish wash back to the sea, so they have piled up by the thousands. Herdsman Will Get $30,000 For His Tip

LONDON (AP) — A British bank said Tuesday it will pay £10,000 ($30,000) to John Marfa, the herdsman who tipped off police about the hideout of the gang which carried out last year's $7,250,000 train robbery in Britain.

The money will be paid by the Midland Bank which lost £486,434 ($1,485,000) of the total which the gang netted in its night hold-up of the Glasgow London express mail. About £300,000 ($900,000) of the money has been recovered.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1964

YOUNG FANS surround Tex Ritter for autographs after veteran cowboy finishes headlining of grandstand show.

T. NEIL DAVIDSON, works manager at Northern Electric, congratulates Sue Hart of Campbellford and Allan Hompson of Moira on being top girl and boy in yesterday's junior livestock judging competition at Belleville Fair. The juniors were presented with cash prizes.

Tex Ritter Delights Large Crowd With Cowboy Tunes

Tex Ritter, still riding showbusiness' sage brush trail armed with guitar discharged a loaded repertoire at nearly 1,000 Belleville Fair patrons last night.

The result was more relayed than explosive. Tex, after 30 years as one of the continent's top performers and the original — in show business that is — singing cowboy, has the knack of appearing to take it easy while rolling out his presentation.

Not everything went smoothly at first. The audience, needing warming up — the tempers tore unexpectedly dropping to autumnal regions as the night wore on. Right off, one of Ritter's supporting trio of musicians ran into trouble with electronic equipment and had to leave the stage.

However, once the veteran star started into full stride the atmosphere relaxed and the familiar numbers of the old maestro rolled across the grandstand grounds.

"Wayward Wind", "Jack 'O Diamonds", "Deck of Cards"— all the old favorite Ritter numbers from a hit - series stretching back three decades — were applauded as they rolled out in quick succession.

Flavored with such all - time cowboy classics as "High Noon" the show went off in fine style.

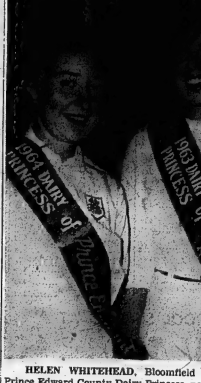
Keynote to the whole event was Ritter's easy manner, as he chatted informally between numbers, eventually becoming so relaxed he sat down and continued his act from a chair.

Afterwards, he signed autographs for youngsters of his fans of a generation ago.

Also on stage through the evening were Neal Hale, a young impressionist whose shortage of years was balanced out by an astonishing vitality, and banjo star Eddie Collins.

Helen Whitehead Dairy Princess Of P. E. County

Helen Whitehead, 19, of R.R. 1, Bloomfield, will be the Prince Edward county representative at the CNE provincial Dairy Queen contest.



The grade 13 high school student was chosen the Prince Edward dairy princess at a milking contest held last night at Belleville Fair. Last year's winner, Janet Parks of Picton, crowned the new dairy princess.

Miss Whitehead will now compete at the CNE for Ontario dairy queen honors and a possible trip to the United Kingdom.

Other contestants in the competition were Mary Whiteford of Cherry Valley; Patricia Townsend of Carrying Place and Anne Springings of R.R. 2, Bloomfield.

An active Junior Farmer and 4-H Club member for the past three years, Miss Whitehead frequently milks the 15 Holsteins on her parents' farm, but has her sights set either on teaching or the position of a research scientist.

Judges for last night's competition were Keith Reynolds, fieldman supervisor for the Ontario Department of Agriculture; E. W. Henderson, and agricultural representative, Doug Tipper, both of Stirling.

No Dilution of Ontario Portable Pension Legislation Claim of Premier Robarts

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts issued a statement Wednesday denying there had been any "dilution of the Ontario portable pension legislation."

His comment referred to a published story which said the plan had been "hacked and chopped about for 17 months" and that its portability feature had been watered down. This was "completely erroneous and irresponsible," the premier said.

However, The Globe and Mail says today that Queen's Park officials confirmed that the portable pension plan, in its original draft, had called for progressive vesting of company contributions over a period of years, between the ages of 30 and 34, but that this was later changed to vesting at 30, and that a further amendment this action act requiring all companies with 10 or more employees to introduce a standard, minimum pension plan. This was done, he added, to make room for the federal government's Canada Pension Plan.

The section repealed contained the provisions for vesting of company contributions at the age of 30, the newspaper says, leaving only the sections of the act dealing with supplementary benefits—pension benefits in excess of the standard pension—which were to be subject to vesting at 45.

Mr. Robarts said Wednesday that before the amendment the Ontario plan — which deals only with private plans — provided that part of the pension benefits (the standard portion) was portable at 30 and the remainder was portable at 45. The premier said that now the whole of the private pension plan benefits will be portable only at 45 after 10 years of service.

Mr. Robarts suggested employees are not much interested in portable pensions before they are 45.

"Many employees who leave their jobs under the age of 45," he said, "have more use for cash refunds than for deferred annuities and would not welcome immediate portability."

Michael Sharp Gives Support To Bob Nixon

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A candidate for leadership of the Ontario Liberal party, J. J. Greene, Wednesday challenged Andrew Thompson to produce the names of his supporters on the Liberal front bench at Ottawa.

Mr. Thompson, legislature member for Toronto Dovercourt, claimed in St. Thomas Tuesday night that he had the undivided support of the federal Liberal bench in his pursuit of the leadership of the party.

"I doubt that such a claim is true and I have no hesitancy in challenging the member of the legislature, also a candidate, to make public the names of these men," Mr. Greene, member of Parliament for Renfrew South, said at a luncheon for London and district Liberals.

However, Mr. Thompson said in Matrick, Ont., Wednesday that he was misunderstood.

"I have the majority support of the provincial Liberal front bench and these Liberal leaders are working for me. I also have solid support from the (federal) Liberal front bench but I do not claim their undivided support," Mr. Thompson said in his second statement while campaigning in Kent East.

Mr. Greene, who officially entered the leadership race just 10 days ago—repeated an earlier statement that he is convinced the outcome of the fight rests between himself and Charles Templeton, former evangelist, newspaper executive and television commentator.

Meanwhile, federal Trade Minister Sharp Wednesday gave his "unqualified support" to Robert Nixon, another of the six candidates for leadership of the Ontario Liberals. Mr. Nixon is member of the Ontario legislature for Brant.

In a telegram to Mr. Nixon's home in St. George, Ont., the federal minister said: "I wish to assure you that I am continuing to give you my unqualified support as Ontario Liberal leader."

Litter Gets Two Tickets For Beatles

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two teen-agers scooped up an armful of litter from a San Francisco street Wednesday after a garage attendant said it had been discarded by the Beatles.

The pair, John Debow, 17, of White City, Ore., and Jennifer Talt, 16, of Monterey, Calif., searched through the refuse with an eye toward selling the scraps to Beatle fans.

In the lobby of the Hilton Hotel, the stomping grounds for Beatle fans while the British singing group is here, John and Jennifer discovered many of the papers looked like legal documents.

They put the papers in a locker at the Greyhound bus depot. Back at the hotel they came across a worried Paul Catalana, promoter for the Beatles' Cow Palace appearance Wednesday night. Several performing contracts had disappeared mysteriously, Catalana said.

The youngsters turned over the cache in exchange for front-row tickets for the singing group's performance.

Organized American Labor At the Top for Johnson

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Organized labor is at the top, at least, is more deeply committed than ever to the Democratic party and Lyndon Johnson's presidential election approaches.

But there is evidence that factors including the Civil Rights Act and Negro riots in the ghettos could cost the 13,500,000-member AFL-CIO with the biggest hurt the leadership pointing one way and rank - and - filers another while fewer rank - and - filers than usual follow, and how many fewer there will be remains uncertain.

This is the situation that the Canadian Labor Congress has experienced in endorsing the New Democratic Party in that 1,060,000 affiliated members have not kicked in with as much battle - box endorsement as had been hoped originally.

President George Meany of the AFL-CIO brought underlining his stand for President Johnson against Republican Senator Goldwater when he flew Tuesday to the Democratic party's election platform committee. Its conclusions will be put to the Democratic nominating convention at Atlantic City next week.

"I regret to say that we can find very little evidence of our efforts in the Republican platform as written," said Meany, who also spoke to the Republican platform drafters. "I further regret that we can find few specifics with regard to that party's policies anywhere in that platform."

WANTS MORE DONE

But Meany pointedly did not share the enthusiasm voiced Tuesday by administration spokesmen who spoke glowingly of economic progress under the Democrats.

Meany said chronic unemployment is certain unless massive investment by the government can compensate for the steady decline of job opportunity in industry, mining, agriculture and other private profit - making enterprises that normally have injected the bulk of new jobs into the economy.

Meany said nothing in the worker reaction in the industrial north to the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the riots that are traced by polls and other pollsters have produced perceptible reductions in support for President Johnson and gains for Goldwater although the Republican presidential candidate still shows as trailing well back.

Anger at the Negro riots has been reported as running strong in Polish and other ethnic working sections normally Democratic. There is similar evidence too that while northern industrial workers have no special objection to sharing the production line with Negroes, they naturally oppose generally sharing neighborhoods.

Union membership complacency about further economic gains, at a time when the boom continues in the shape of higher personal incomes, may also be some part in labor support for Goldwater, some suggest.

Meany was explicit in warning that the unemployment rate of 4.5 per cent hasn't changed really since 1956 and that despite what he called the longest uninterrupted peacetime book in at least a generation, one-fifth of the population continues to live in poverty. He said the jobless rate among non-whites is nearly double the national rate.

President David J. McDonald of the United Steelworkers went further: "It would be venture to say that much of what has passed under the label of racial unrest in this country is basically a protest against the economic conditions. . . It is a tragic fact that the brunt of the unemployment problem and of the problem of housing, education, housing, food and clothing has been felt by Negro."

Police Chief Still Refuses To Resign Post

PORT ELGIN, Ont. (CP) — Town council met again Tuesday night to ask Police Chief Charles Riley for his immediate resignation.

And Wednesday Chief Riley repeated the stand he took after the council's first vote last week.

"I'm still refusing," he said in Lake Huron town 30 miles west of Owen Sound.

"I still have not been given any reason for the request, so the position is still the same. A meeting of the police commission from Toronto is down here now looking into the matter."

The council repeated its demand Tuesday, despite opposition from Mayor W. A. Davey, who voted against the motion.

In a statement, Mayor Davey urged council to obtain a peaceful solution to the controversy before the town received more publicity.

He felt "a small but vociferous group of mostly young adults who resent strong police control" were behind the trouble.

Chief Riley said last week that he was being badgered by some councillors "because I believe there is only one law and that is for all the people . . . I will not do police work in the way they want."

Northumberland Girl, Hastings Boy Wins Honors

A Northumberland County girl from the Campbellford district, and a Hastings County boy won top honors in yesterday's crops and livestock judging competition held as part of the junior fair program.

Top girl in the judging competition was Sue Hart, while Allan Thompson of Moira scored the most points among the boys.

Their efforts they each received a special cash prize from the Northern Electric Company in Belleville.

Top contestant in the livestock judging session of the competition was Robert Hamilton of Sidney Township, who received a silver tray from the Bank of Montreal in Belleville.

PRIZES PRESENTED

The crops and livestock judging competition entered by juniors for farmers and 4-H club members from the four counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Northumberland, now possibly the greatest number of entrants in the history of the Fair.

Lyall McLaughlan, assistant agricultural representative for Hastings County, under whose direction the contest was run, said 338 juniors competed.

Prizes to the top juniors were presented in front of the grandstand during the evening fair performance.

HUNGARIANS DIG

BUDAPEST (AP) — A Hungarian archeological team headed by Laszlo Castiglione has been assigned a four-mile strip along the Nile River above the temple of Abu Simbel before seasonal waters reach it. It is in the area where the new Aswan High Dam reservoir will eventually inundate many Egyptian relics.

Avert Violence As Workers Walk Off Jobs

PORT HOPE (CP)—Violence was narrowly averted Wednesday after 200 employees of Nicholson File Company, members of Local 6497 of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC), walked off their jobs in a contract dispute with the company.

The union voted to strike after rejecting a proposed contract, first for the young local formed only eight months ago, over the matter of check-off of union dues for non-union members.

A conciliation board report recommended that check-off of union dues be voluntary but the union insists that all members pay the fee whether or not they are active union members.

About 12 workers not in sympathy with the strike entered the plant after the walk-out by crossing adjacent fields to avoid passing picket lines at the gates.

Pickets rushed to intercept them but the presence of town police restrained them from interfering with the men.

All other matters in the contract have been approved. The contract called for a six-cent hourly increase to hourly-paid employees in each year of the two-year contract.

GRANTS WAITING

Tax People Polish Image!

WELLINGTON (CP — The inland revenue department, New Zealand's tax-collector, has embarked upon a determined campaign to improve its relationship with the public.

Taxpayers have found a remarkable increase in cordiality in interviews with the department and some say it's becoming almost a pleasure to visit the tax man.

One indication of the change is that the department now even tells jokes about itself. Its latest information bulletin quotes several bowlers perpetrated by members of its staff in the past.

—A farmer had a claim for depreciation on a topdresser (top spreading fertilizer) disallowed on the grounds that "the act does not allow depreciation on private furniture."

—Another farmer, claiming on a hydraulic ram, said that his plan had failed "because special depreciation cannot be claimed on livestock."

—Still another farmer was asked why according to his records, there had been no natural increase from his wethers. The farmer replied that after 25 years he had been unable to find the answer and would be delighted if the department could help.

Minority Regime Treads Tightrope Bringing Progress to Venezuela

Despite a good record of progress, popular voting supports the Venezuela's Democratic Action government has fallen. Paul Kidd, Latin American reporter discusses this apparent anomaly.

By PAUL KIDD

CARACAS (CP) — On paper the Democratic Action government of Venezuela has an impressive record.

Yet only one in three Venezuelans support it.

In the ambiguous climate of Latin American politics, there is no clear-cut answer to this political paradox.

But in searching for an explanation, one encounters some interesting facets to the movement which has led the fight against communism on the southern continent.

As one Canadian resident of Venezuela told me: "The United States will continue to do all it can to keep the Democratic Action party in power."

In many ways, the left-wing tag is a misnomer; during its five years in office, the government party has developed an acute awareness of the value of co-operating with the private sector of the economy whenever possible.

Back in 1958, when former President Romulo Betancourt led the party to victory at the polls, one in two Venezuelans supported Democratic Action.

When President Raul Leoni took over the party leadership and the chief executive's office following last December's elections, that support dwindled to one-third of the electorate.

It seemed a strange rejection of a government which had given Venezuela fiscal stability, made forced strides in inroads against illiteracy, stimulated industrial growth and launched an ambitious agrarian reform program.

The achievements—and criticisms—surrounding the Democratic Action party's record are worth putting under the spotlight.

After inheriting some $500,000,000 of debt in unpaid bills and IOU notes from the free-wheeling Perez Jimenez dictatorship, the government imposed austerity controls. The economic belt-tightening measures weren't popular, but they worked.

BUDGET BALANCED

Today, the budget is balanced and Venezuela has some $700,000,000 in international reserves.

The national treasury is kept in good condition by the billion dollars which annually flow in from oil tax revenues.

From 1904 to 1958, only 883 schools were built in Venezuela. The Democratic Action government has constructed some 3,000.

Elementary school enrolment has jumped 80 per cent since 1958, and five of every six children now receive at least some education.

According to official figures, illiteracy has dropped from 53 per cent to 20 per cent during the last five years.

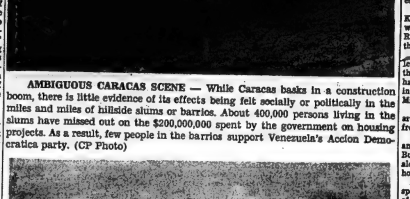
Although President Betancourt fired 2,000 teachers for espousing Communist ideas, the number of primary school teachers has risen from 20,000 to 40,000.

Government expenditures for education have increased from 10 per cent of the national budget before 1958 to 20 per cent today.

PRODUCTION RISES

Despite terrorist sabotage, economic growth has been substantial. Some figures given Venezuela the highest per capita income in Latin America—about $800 a year—although at least a third of its 8,100,000 population haven't enough income to be part of the consuming market.

Under each year of Democratic Action government, the republic's gross national product has been boosted an average of 4.5 per cent a year until today it exceeds $6,000,000,000.



In five years, the nation's consumption of electricity has doubled.

Since the 1960 agrarian reform act, parcels of land have been distributed to about 60,000 peasant families.

With each family getting about 25 acres, the scheme has cost the government about $120,000,000 for the purchase and supplementary preparation of the land.

AMBIGUOUS CARACAS SCENE — While Caracas basks in a construction boom, there is little evidence of its effects being felt socially or politically in the miles and miles of hillside slums and shanties. About 400,000 persons living in the slums have missed out on the $200,000,000 spent by the government on housing projects. As a result, few people in the barrios support Venezuela's Acción Democratica party. (CP Photo)

LAND REFORM—STUCK IN MUD—Of 150,00 landless or land-poor families expected to be settled under an agrarian reform program, only slightly more than 5,000 have been settled. Criticism has come in the face of increasing unemployment and, because, in many cases, the program has dealt with unsuitable land or unsuitable people for the land. (CP Photo)

That, then, is the credit side of the Democratic Action party's performance.

On the debit side, the government's record is tarnished by angry criticism from its political opponents.

HELP RURAL AREAS

Broadly assessed, it amounts to this. Just as the Perez Jimenez regime built Caracas into a metropolitan showcase at the expense of the countryside, the Democratic Action government has courted its political support from the rural areas at the expense of the capital.

In this, perhaps, there is a half-truth. While Caracas is currently basking in a construction boom, there is little evidence of a social penetration into the miles and miles of hillside slums.

The Democratic Action government may have spent more than $200,000,000 on housing projects since it came into office and it may have built 12,000 rural houses last year. But for the most part, such accommodation has been out of reach of the barrio-dwellers, as the 400,000 have-nots who live in the slums are known.

When I toured the barrios, I found little support for Action Democratica, which is the ruling party's official name.

MANY UNEMPLOYED

Many residents consider that the government makes tremendous political capital out of every house it launches in the barrios, but that it really looks upon them as a forgotten people which keeps its projects to a minimum.

Certainly, amid the teeming shanty towns, I saw scant evidence of government activity. But I observed ample evidence of the need for it.

Another criticism of the government has been its inability to deal with Venezuela's fierce unemployment, now running at more than 12 per cent of the work force.

With one of the highest birth rates in the world, about 3.5 per cent, new jobs must be found for 70,000 workers a year during the next 10 years to keep pace with the population growth.

Even the much-lauded agrarian reform scheme has a black side. Of the 150,000 landless or land-poor families expected to be settled under the first phase of the program, slightly more than one-third are in business on the land they farm.

It is not the law of land reform which has been criticized, but the manner in which it has been implemented.

LAND COSTLY

In buying land from big estate owners, the government is widely considered to have often paid exorbitant prices.

Then, after giving a peasant from 10 to 25 acres, a house and tools, livestock and seeds at long-term, low-interest loans, the land would be unsatisfactory for the type of farming intended.

Conversely, a peasant would sometimes prove to be the wrong kind of person, by training or character, to make the most of his land-and-home opportunity, and would give up.

Today, some 350,000 peasant families wait to be resettled.

It promises to be a long, hard task. But at least a start has been made, and the agrarian program, when working properly, could well serve as a model for other Latin American nations.

As a minority government, the Democratic Action party is walking the tightrope of Venezuelan politics.

If it is to remain in power, it must continue that precarious walk through Congress for the next 4½ years.

Tomorrow: Canadian girl works wonders in Caracas slums.

Nov. Showdown Between Goldwater and Johnson Will Be Fluid and Very Bitter

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson and Senator Barry Goldwater have a set official starting dates for their election campaigns.

In fact, they are both already well on the road to the November showdown in what is expected to be an unusually fluid and probably bitter campaign.

Latest public opinion samplings show that perhaps 30 per cent of the more than 70,000,000 eligible voters haven't made up their minds.

They show that day-to-day events such as the gulf of Tonkin naval incidents and Negro riots in northern U.S. cities can cause significant shifts.

They suggest that November is a long way off.

The president has said he will hold his tenth official news conference of his presidency before launching his campaign.

He has been having a steady round of dinners with large and influential groups and a number of press conferences. He has lashed back at Goldwater's suggestion that nuclear weapons were specified for U.S. air strikes against North Viet Nam.

The Republican senator suggested that the president appeared to favor nuclear weapons in the arsenal that could be used if necessary, Johnson denied it specifily as loose and harmful talk.

But if the president has started pretty close to the white house, his family with his blessing has been flitting actively around the country from Lady Bird's river excursions on a rubber raft in the Western Rockies to various barbecues and other socializing by daughter Lynda Bird, 20, and Luci Baines, 17.

Challenger Goldwater fired his first salvo a long time ago although he has set Sept. 3 in his native Arizona as the official opening date of his campaign.

One interesting phenomenon of the campaign so far, which some suggest smacks of the 1948 campaign when Harry Truman upset Republican challenger Thomas Dewey, is the large mass of voters outside those already committed.

Some are Democrats from the South who cannot stomach the Civil Rights Act and who emotionally and philosophically seem on Goldwater's wavelength.

Others are Republican moderates who dislike the Goldwater rightwing slant.

It may be a measure of things to come that the civil rights issue and the Negro, regarded generally as the key underlying issue of the campaign, have been avoided so far by both leaders.

Northern Negro riots benefited Goldwater in the Eastern U.S. and trimmed Johnson's lead, pollsters say. Conversely, the President's quick North Viet Nam intervention earned him points in the South where Goldwater leads the president in many areas.

U. S. Cigarette Sales Rebound

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cigarettes have rocketed back from the slump that followed a 1963 government report in January linking them to lung cancer and heart disease.

U.S. factories shipped almost 45,200,000,000 cigarettes in June —an increase of about 8.5 per cent over June, 1963, the internal revenue service announced today.

Small cigars, to which many switched early this year, took a nose - dive. Shipments dropped from 190,000,000 in May to 36,000,000 in June. But the June figure was still double that for small cigars in June, 1963.

CNE Has Big Hobby Show

More than 100 clubs have enlisted some 6,000 craftsmen and collectors to demonstrate and give information. The exhibits take up the entire north wall of the General Exhibits Building, an area of 12,000 square feet.

A large section of the Hobby Show is devoted to the model field - - interesting to every boy with the right to fly. The model railroad layout is operating continuously from 9.30 a.m. to 10.30 p.m. Model car, or slot car racing, is being demonstrated on a 70 by 40 foot track by the Ontario section of the Canadian Model Car Racing Association. Members of the Balsa Beavers Flying Club are on hand to display and build various types of planes.

Outstanding Canadian craftsmen from the leathercraft, metalcraft, woodcraft and weavers guilds are demonstrating the various techniques used to profound little wagers for small sums.

For those interested in photography there is a salon showing the finest prints collected from 13 camera clubs in the Metro Toronto area. The six Toronto stamp clubs and the 40 Ontario coin clubs are showing rare collections.

If Bobby Hull's accident-stiffened right forefinger doesn't affect his hockey-playing any more than it does his softball pitching, the Black Hawks shouldn't have any worry along these lines. Bobby showed me the stiffened digit the other day, wiggled it a bit and smiled, "It will be all right. After I fill it with glove and stick it shouldn't give me any trouble."

SORRY, JOYCE KILLMER

I think that I shall never see
A hazard haunting as a tree.
A tree whose greedy arms reach high
To grab my ball as it goes by.
A tree that looks so near and nice —
But catches every hook and slice.
A tree that may on others smile
Is just a ghost that makes me "bile."
A tree that looks at me all day
And paints a crooked limb to say
"Bogies are made by fools like thee,
But only pros can clear a tree."

Beans stiffened and flung back:

Arrangements have been changed somewhat this year, and it was announced this morning that the draw will be made at the tee Saturday morning.

While Chicago White Sox are rushing pell-mell toward the top of the American League, New York Yankees are having trickle trouble.

The White Sox moved to within a half game of first-place Baltimore Orioles Wednesday night, taking advantage of three Yankee errors for four unearned runs and a 4-3 victory. The Orioles lost to Boston Red Sox 4-2 in 10 innings.

Pitcher Jim Bouton and third baseman Clete Boyer were the Yankees who had the trickies.

The malady first appeared in the third inning after the White Sox loaded the bases with two out. Pete Ward grounded to first baseman Joe Pepitone, who tossed the ball to Bouton at first. The throw was in time but Bouton missed the base, allowing Ray Herbert to score.

THREW BALL DOWN

His error upset Bouton so much that he threw the ball down in disgust. As it trickled near the first base coaching box, Jim Landis, who had reached third on the first miscue, dashed home with the run that gave Chicago a 3-1 lead.

The trickles mushroomed into catastrophe again in the seventh inning when Chicago scored two runs, breaking a 3-3 deadlock.

With runners at first and second and none out, J. C. Martin bunted along the third base line. Boyer grabbed the ball but his throw to third for the force was too late. But wait. Mike Hershberger slid past the base.

Boyer pounced on the runner, tagging him for an apparent out. Wait again. The ball trickled out of Boyer's glove and the White Sox had the bases loaded.

The Sox kept the Yankees four games behind Baltimore. In other games, Detroit Tigers defeated Los Angeles Angels 8-3 Minnesota Twins downed Washington Senators 3-1 and Cleveland Indians whipped Kansas City Athletics 6-4.

HAD TROUBLES TOO

Even the Orioles experienced difficulty with a trickling baseball. In their case it was a couple of bunts that rolled foul. They came off the bat of Boston rookie Tony Horton in the 10th inning with Carl Yastrzemski at first. After he failed to sacrifice, Horton slammed a double into the left field corner, scoring Yastrzemski with the winning run.

Detroit grabbed sole possession of fourth place behind Don Demeter and Norm Cash. Demeter's pinch single drove in the tie-breaking run against the Angels in the seventh inning while Cash added a two-run homer in the eighth. Jim Fregosi had tied the game 3-3 with a homer in the Angels' seventh.

Jim Kaat and Al Worthington pitched the Twins past the Senators. Kaat had a shutout until the ninth when Worthington replaced him.

Vic Davalillo drove in three runs and Joe Azcue two for the Indians. All of Davalillo's runs batted in came on a third-inning single with the bases loaded and two out. The hit capped a five-run outburst by Indians ahead to stay. Jim Gentile socked his 32nd homer for the Athletics in the fourth.

Finals Series All Square

Juniors Turn Back Tweed 5-3

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

MADOC — Bob Ebbier, given a 4-0 lead in the first inning, turned in a strong pitching performance before a big crowd here last night to guide Ellis Juniors to a 5-3 B. and D. softball finals victory over Tweed Lombards.

The win evened the 4-of-7 titular series at two games each. Fifth game of the series will be played at Belleville's CNRA Park Monday night at 6.30.

Ebbier worked a low, sinking pitch to perfection in a torrid strikeout duel with Blaine Healey. Ellis had a 4-1 lead going into the bottom of the ninth when a leadoff error gave Lombards a life. Healey belted his own cause-at-this point with a long home run blast to deep left. That made it 5-3 with none out but the next three men went down in order, two on strikes.

Lombards managed seven hits in all off Ebbier while he struck out 13 and walked a pair. Healey gave up nine hits and blazed third strikes past 15 batters, walking one.

A bad first frame gave Ebbier the edge and hurt Healey's cause. A one-out error opened the door for that explosion and bunt hits by Muirhead and Chatland, plus another error, got two more runs across. Boomhower clouted a double over the infield, scoring another, and Malloy singled home the fourth marker.

Tweed put together hits by Meraw and Morton plus a throwing error to cut the lead to 4-1 in the fourth. Juniors got that back when Soule got on via a missed third strike and scored when Gardiner doubled past third in the sixth.

The losers best chance came in the seventh when they had the bases loaded with one out after Wilbo had led off with a triple. He got caught in a rundown but failed to score after being left on base and Ebbier knocked flat over third base while the ball bounced into centre field. Lombards left three on that inning and nine over all. The Juniors stranded seven.

Stu Muirhead was the lone Ellis player with two hits, one of them a double. Don Gardiner and Carl Boomhower had doubles, Bob Boyle, Stu Malloy, Bob Ebbier, Mike Chatland and Bob Soule singles.

Terry LeSage and Rich Morton gained two one-baggers apiece in losing effort. Healey's circuit blast, Tom White's triple and Paul Meraw's single accounted for the others.

Bob clubs have key OASA tilts scheduled prior to their next meeting. Tweed clashes with Battersea at Napanee Saturday night in the third game of their three-game set, while Ellis Juniors open their Junior "A" series against Oshawa at the CNRA Saturday evening.

EARLY OPENING

QUEBEC (CP) — Migratory bird hunters will be able to get off to an early start in Quebec this year go to Schefferville for the opening of the new Ungava district Sept. 1. Hunting in the north, central and south districts of Quebec begins Sept. 15, Sept. 19 and Sept. 26 for ducks, Canada and snow geese and Wilson's snipe. The season ends in these three districts Dec. 20. In the Ungava district, north of the 52nd parallel, it ends Dec. 13.

KOUFAX OUT AGAIN

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Left-hander Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles Dodgers has come down with a sore pitching arm again, a doctor reported Wednesday.

"But it's nothing serious," said Dr. Robert Woods, "and he shouldn't miss more than one turn.' Koufax, who has won 19 of his 24 decisions, had a sore arm again to bother him in Milwaukee earlier this month.

Young Tosses No-Hitter

A two-out walk in the first inning marred a perfect game as George Young pitched Lightfoot Construction to a 9-0 Commercial softball semi-final victory over Point Anne last night.

Young, who twice earlier this season lost no-hit bids in the final inning, made one mistake in earning his no-hitter last night. After the walk to H. Fewell, Young set the Cementmen down in order in the seven-inning contest.

Young struck out 13 batters and he got errorless support from his mates.

Lightfoot gave Lightfoots a 3-3 lead in the 4-of-7 series with the next game slated for Point Anne Monday night at 6.30. Barriages and City Hotel are tied 3-3 in the other semi-final and they clash tonight at King George School.

Lightfoots did not have an easy win last night despite Young's fine hurling. They broke a scoreless tie with Whaling's two-out homer to left field in the fourth.

The score remained 1-0 until two were out in the sixth. Brooks drove in another run with a triple and then himself on McLean's base knock.

Young came close to losing his no-hitter in the seventh when the Cementmen's Jim Horwood tagged a long ball. It was pulled in with a good catch.

Vern Whalen gave up six hits over the route on the Pt. Anne mound. He struck out one and walked two while his club erred four times.

Jack Young and Whiting's home run and a triple and single by Ken Brooks were the big Lightfoot hits. Rusty Garvin, Don Smith and Bev McLean added the other safeties.

Soaring Phils Up Lead To Six Games

—Giants Beaten—

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia Phillies are burning a six-game lead in the National League pennant race today while San Francisco Giants and Cincinnati Reds are nursing their injuries.

The Phillies built their lead over second-place San Francisco by whipping Chicago Cubs 9-5 Wednesday after the Reds handed the Giants their fourth straight loss 7-1 in the biggest baseball battle of the season.

The Reds-Giants game was still in the first inning when Cincinnati's Frank Robinson was hit on the left arm by a Ron Herbel pitch. Robinson started toward the San Francisco pitcher but was restrained by umpire Chris Pelekoudas while Giant shortstop Jim Davenport grabbed Herbel as both benches emptied.

The umpires had to step in again a few minutes later when Robinson started from first base toward Herbel. And, later, when Robinson was retired at second base on a double play, he and Davenport had a few words.

Reds' starter Bob Purkey was hit by a John Pregenzer pitch in the fourth inning, bringing a warning from Pelkoudas and an automatic fine. Purkey meanwhile, evened the struggle by hitting Jim Hart twice.

ROBINSON HOMERS TWICE

In between, Robinson hit two homers and Chico Ruiz collected four hits in support of Purkey's six - hit pitching, pulling the Reds to within one game of the Giants in the standings.

Elsewhere, Jim Hickman's grand slam homer gave New York Mets a 4-3 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates, Houston Colts edged St. Louis Cardinals 5-7 on a run-producing single by Nellie Fox in the 10th inning and Los Angeles Dodgers outslugged Milwaukee Braves 7-6.

The Phillies got the job done in the eighth inning, overcoming a 5-4 deficit with a five-run explosion. Clay Dalrymple and Tony Taylor triggered the rally with singles before Wes Covington drove in the tying and winning runs with a pinch double.

The Cubs' Ron Santo had earlier hit his 24th homer.

The Mets won their fourth straight, their longest winning streak of the season, when Hickman blasted a Vern Law pitch into the parking area beyond left field with the bases loaded in the sixth inning.

The win was more than enough for Tracy Stallard, who had a shutout until Bill Virdo hit a two-run homer in the ninth.

The colts won in the 10th when Al Spangler singled, continued to second on Curt Flood's error and rode home on Fox's single.

Frank Howard hit his first homer in 25 days and drove in three runs for the Dodgers, who blew most of a five-run lead but held on behind Ron Perranoski's relief pitching. Perranoski struck out Lee Maye with the bases loaded and two runs in, cutting off the Braves final threat in the eighth inning.

Boxer Dies After K. O.

TOKYO (AP) — A 22-year-old Japanese professional boxer died after 82 hours in a coma following his sixth-round knockout in Tokyo Sunday night.

Featherweight Takashi Hasegawa was floored once in the fourth round before his fatal knockout in the sixth. He lost consciousness as the referee counted him out and never regained it.

Has A Bowed Tendon

Believe 'Dancer' Track Days Over

TORONTO (CP)—Although a verdict is not expected for about three weeks, the brilliant racing career of Northern Dancer is believed over. The great Canadian thoroughbred has a bowed tendon.

The Dancer, who won $580,647 for Windfields Farm of Toronto in his two years of racing on Canadian and United States tracks, kicked himself on the left forleg while training at Belmont Park July 30.

A leg cast was put on to reduce swelling and inflammation. The results of treatment will not be known until it comes off in about three weeks.

Owner E. P. Taylor said in an interview the injury was very grievous and disappointing.

"There is some chance the Dancer will come back, but I've been in the business long enough to know it's very slim."

Other knowledgeable horsemen were pessimistic of the Dancer's chances at returning to action.

"Several horses who have bowed have returned to the races but not stakers, they've dropped down in company, even down to slowvance races," one said.

Taylor described the Dancer's injury Wednesday as "a very slight bow."

"For several days after the accident there was no indication of any injury to the tendon which remained completely straight," Taylor said. "However, inflammation and swelling in the area did not respond to treatment."

The horse, only Canadian-bred to win the Kentucky Derby, was examined by Taylor, trainer Horatio Luro and a veterinary surgeon three days ago and "a very slight bow in the tendon had appeared," Taylor said.

Victoria Park, another Taylor horse which placed third in the 1962 Kentucky Derby, also suffered a bowed tendon after winning $238,307 in purses. He was retired to stud.

The injury to the Dancer came during a routine workout on an off-track. He was treated immediately for the injury.

Taylor said he had planned to run the Dancer in the Aug. 8 Arlington Classic at Baltimore and the Queen Stakes at Saratoga in New York this Saturday.

Defeat Sasky Riders 22-16

Fleming Brilliant In Lions' 4th Victory

By DENNIS ORCHARD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders dished up another football spectacle Wednesday night, but British Columbia Lions refused to watch.

Lions won 37-16 after a spell-binding minute of fourth-quarter play that provided one of the most exciting Western Conference games here in years. It left Lions undefeated after four games, with a first-place lead of three points over Saskatchewan and Calgary.

A crowd of 35,618, second largest in the 10-year history of regular season play at Empire Stadium sat in.

Riders drove from their own 36-yard-line as they trailed 14-9 with less than 10 minutes left.

Four running plays and a 12-yard pass from quarterback Ron Lancaster to flanker Hugh Campbell took the ball to the Lions' 30. But on a wide sweep by fullback George Reed, Rider halfback Ed Buchanan was ejected from the game for fighting and Saskatchewan incurred another flag for holding. It meant penalties of 25 and 10 yards, taking the ball back to the Rider 45-yard-line, where the club scrimmaged and second down with 43 yards to go.

FORGE AHEAD

Lancaster, trading linemen in a crazy backfield scamper, fired passes to halfback Bob Good for gains of 18 and 10 yards. That made it first down on the B.C. seven. Reed took the ball four yards and Lancaster hit Good again from the three-yard-line for the go-ahead touchdown. Gerry James's convert made it 16-14 and there were six minutes left.

But on the second scrimmage play after kickoff, B.C. quarterback Joe Kapp retreated from his own 28-yard-line, passed 72 yards into the hands of halfback Willie Fleming and Fleming, the defender Bob Pierce in a 33-yard streak to complete a 78-yard touchdown play.

It gave B.C. a 20-16 lead and broke the back of the Saskatchewan rally. Another B.C. touchdown in the final minute came almost incidentally.

Lions' offensive stars were running and with six one big touchdown and Bob Swift, rookie Canadian fullback who heaved through the line for Lions' other three. Peter Kempf converted on three of four tries.

Rider touchdowns were by Buchanan and Good, with James converting one of them and kicking a first-quarter field goal.

Riders led 3-0 after the first quarter but Lions made it 14-3 by halftime and held a 14-9 edge at end of quarters.

Saskatchewan gained 22 first downs on 313 yards rushing and 122 passing, and B.C. was 136 yards on the ground, 141 in the air for 18 first downs. Kapp completed six of 11 passes and had two intercepted. Lancaster completed nine of 19 and lost three on interceptions.

ROOKIE ON WAIVERS

OTTAWA (CP) —Rookie halfback Bill Harris, who dropped two passes and fumbled twice in Tuesday night's Canadian Football League game here against Winnipeg Blue Bombers, was placed on waivers Wednesday by Ottawa Rough Riders. Harris will be replaced by Charlie Killett, another import.

THE Arnold Palmer METHOD
Four-Time Winner of the Masters

FOR BETTER CHIP SHOTS

There is really no reason to move your body on short chip shots from around the edge of a green.

For accuracy, follow the same advice I give in putting: keep your head and body still. Let your arms and hands do the work.

The golfer who shifts his body laterally to the rear on short shots ("I") is liable to strike the turf behind the ball and "poop" the shot.

If a player moves his body forward with the club on such shots ("2"), he may strike too high on the ball. This is called "blading the shot."

If you keep your body steady, your chances of returning the iron to its original position, under the ball, will be improved. Just brush the turf with your iron and sweep the ball away.

Will Seek Clay, Liston Rematch

NEW YORK (AP) — Garland Cherry, a spokesman for Intercontinental Promotions Incorporated, said Wednesday night he has accepted an invitation to appear at the World Boxing Association convention in connection with a proposed Cassius Clay - Sonny Liston heavyweight title rematch.

"The return bout between Clay and Liston was tentatively scheduled for late September," Cherry said, "and while we had offers from several cities, it was decided not to pursue any further negotiations in deference to the WBA which has scheduled a hearing on the match."

Intercontinental holds the contract for the first title bout by Clay, who scored a seventh-round technical knockout of Liston. They have signed for a return bout in the fall with the location and date left open.

The WBA has opposed the bout since it no longer ranks Liston among the top challengers.

The convention is scheduled in Norfolk, Va., starting Aug. 26.

Argos, Larks Tonight

By TED BLACKMAN

MONTREAL (CP)—Although the football season is barely under way, the first "wrench" of the year has been removed from winter storage and attached to tonight's Eastern Football Conference encounter between Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts.

It's only the fifth contest played in the east this year, but both coaches, Montreal's Jim Trimble and Toronto's Nobby Wirkowski, are aware of the significance it will carry when the standings are tabulated at the close of warfare in November.

Alouettes won the opener of the three-game series with Toronto, 21-13 last Saturday and if they can win tonight they'll have the season edge decided. If the two teams are tied at the end of the schedule, the Alouettes will get the nod.

Both teams will be short on manpower, although the Als' disabled players are definitely out while Argos' injured likely will do sunforms.

PARKER MAY DRESS

Toronto quarterback Jackie Parker likely will dress, although Wirkowski said a decision won't be made until just before game time.

"Even if he does play he won't be 100-per-cent effective," he explained. "He was kicked in the ankle in the Montreal game. He missed last week but he practised Tuesday and Wednesday."

Wirkowski was confident either Don Fuell and Kay Sweeting Quarterback Saturday.

"One of them will sit out," said Wirkowski. "It'll be Parker or Radicic or Howell."

The Alouettes, the only unbeaten, untied team in the country this side of the Lions, Tackle Bob Minihane and Jim Andrews already have missed one game and were ruled out for this contest, and rookie end Al Irwin was sidelined Wednesday.

The lanky freshman from McMaster University suffered a broken nose in Toronto and infection developed.

Sundown Grand Prix At Mosport

ORONO, Ont. (CP)—A four-hour sundown Grand Prix of endurance is scheduled for the sparkling Mosport sports car track Saturday.

The race is expected to produce about two hours of night driving, the first in the four-year history of the track.

The race, which begins at 6 p.m., will feature sports and sports-racing cars using a Le Mans type of start with drivers and cars lined up on opposite sides of the track for the start.

Twenty-One Enter

Predict Swim Hard To Finish

By STERLING TAYLOR

TORONTO (CP)—Twenty-one distance swimmers were expected to enter the 15- to 59-degree water at St. Catharines tonight in the first organized attempt to make the 33-mile Lake Ontario crossing since 1957.

But water temperatures which are expected to get progressively colder as the swimmers approach Toronto led Herman Willemse of Holland to predict Wednesday night that "it will be hard for any to finish."

Willemse, winner of the last five Atlantic City swims, made the prediction on the eve of the much criticized Canadian National Exhibition marathon which gets under way at 6 p.m. with a total of $17,500 in prize money at stake. The race is expected to take about 20 hours.

A weather forecaster said readings along the 32-mile route Wednesday showed the water temperature at St. Catharines between 65 and 69 degrees. It was around 60 degrees at the half-way point, dropping to 53 degrees 10 miles from Toronto and to 48 degrees in the final five miles.

These temperatures were not likely to change, the forecaster said, with easterly winds increasing tonight and early Friday to 15 miles an hour, might tend to shift warmer water closer to Toronto.

Willemse, 30, indicated Wednesday night that he may not enter because of the cold water.

The cold water favorite is Abdel Latif Abou Heif of Egypt, winner of last year's CNE swim over a triangular 15-mile course at the Toronto waterfront.

A 22-boat flotilla will accompany the swimmers from St. Catharines to the CNE waterfront. Each swimmer will be accompanied by a power yacht and a small craft which will carry a manager-coach and a rower.

There will also be three medical boats, three Royal Canadian Navy ships, two sea cadet brigantines, two RCMP craft, two coast guard craft and 15 press boats.

The winner of the swim will win $7,000 if it is a man and $8,500 if it is a woman. The first woman to finish will collect $1,500. Should none of the swimmers finish, a committee of judges will decide distribution of prize money.

Toronto Downs Crackers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The leaders stalled in the battle for first place in the International League Wednesday, but a real race is shaping up for the fourth and last playoff spot.

Rochester Red Wings moved into a fourth-place tie with Toronto Maple Leafs as they swept a doubleheader from Richmond Virginians 3-0 and 4-3, while Toronto downed Atlanta Crackers 7-2.

But the Leafs and Red Wings are still nine games behind Syracuse Chiefs, who lost 8-0 to Columbus Jets, while second-place Jacksonville Suns dropped a 12-3 verdict to Buffalo Bisons.

Bill Short pitched a two-hitter in the seven-inning opener for Rochester and Lou Jackson hammered a two-run triple in the second to put the Red Wings ahead of the Virginians who had held a one-run edge.

Tom Butters took the punch out of the Syracuse attack with a two-hitter as the Jets won their third consecutive game from the leaders.

At Buffalo, John Stephenson lashed out a bases - loaded double in the sixth inning to lead a five-run Bison uprising.

Canadian Amateur

Thirty-Two Enter 2nd Round

SASKATOON (CP) — The attrition rate on big-name competitors in the 1964 Canadian amateur golf championship was expected to soar today as 32 players entered the second round of the chase for a championship captured last year by Nick Weslock of Toronto

Weslock, a 46-year-old representative on 16 Ontario Willingdon Cup teams, was one of those facing tough tests in the second round. He was drawn against Frank Bostock of Scottsdale, Ariz., who dumped Quebec team player Bob Simpson of Ottawa 4 and 3 Wednesday.

Weslock rebounded from a siege of muscle trouble in his back to batter Bob Eagale of Edmonton 7 and 6 for the biggest margin of the day.

Len Brayton of Calgary was forced to the 19th green to nip Bill Parkes of Woodstock. Paul Williams of Hamilton defeated Ron Simmons of Calgary 6 and 5 and Gary Cowan of Kitchener drubbed Bill Fulwiler of Saskatoon 7 and 5. Bruce Brewer of Whitevale, Ont., made brilliant shots on the 14th and 15th holes to nip Andy Black of Regina one up.

Cowan takes on Henry Setlake of Thetford Mines, Que., today. North Bay's Dave Morland, 4 and 3 winner over Doug MacAfee of Sussex, N.B., meets Bob Kidd of Vancouver and Brewer goes against Claude Clement of Valleyfield, Que.

The third round was set for this afternoon. Two 18 - hole rounds are scheduled for Friday with a 36-hole final Saturday.

Wins Swim At Kingston

KINGSTON (CP)—Erend Bosen, 18, of Brockville captured a two-mile swim sponsored by the Kingston Recreation Committee in a time of 34 minutes 10.6 seconds Wednesday.

Second was 13-year-old Pat Gibson of London, Ont., with a time of 45:30.6, while Shaun Davidson of Brockville placed third.

Miss Gibson led the junior women's field while Davidson took the junior men's title. Bosen was the senior men's winner.

Two Carry Canadian Net Hopes

OTTAWA (CP) — Bob Puddicombe of Vancouver and Pierre Lagarche of Montreal today carry Canada's hopes in the top event of the Canadian junior tennis open championships. The six-day tourney ends Saturday.

Puddicombe and Lamarche survived the fifth round of the boys 18-and-under singles Wednesday. Both won their matches in straight sets.

Four Canadians remained in the girls 18-and-under singles. Twin sisters Maureen and Lindsay Watts of Vancouver won their third round matches as did Nancy Green of Toronto and Andree Martin of Montreal.

The real test for the Canadians starts today when they begin opposing top foreign seeds. Americans took all eight open titles here last year.

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Alouettes, a sprightly folk song deadened to a dirge by despairing Montreal football fans the last several seasons, has become once more a sprightly tune on the lips of sporting Montreal.

The song of Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference carries overtones of a victory chant since the team that almost everybody picked to finish near the bottom opened the season like champions. The real champions Hamilton Tiger-Cats, were the first victims of the Alouettes, succumbing 33-5 in the season opener.

The experts who assigned Montreal to the EFC cellar in pre-season predictions are still trying to adjust to the reality that Alouettes are winning football games and looking good while they're at it.

The winter manpower changes made in Montreal seemed to be minimal compared with the usual frantic recruitment programs of a perennial loser. The tried stars like galloping George Dixon remained, but newcomers were undergoing an paper. . .

It was hard to see, for example, why Montreal negotiated the trade with Winnipeg which brought Alouettes Vernon Cole, a rusty rookie quarterback. Cole had been an understudy with the Bombers in 1960 and had played no serious football in three subsequent years with the U.S. Air Forces.

But in Montreal's first two games, Cole displayed poise and skill in manoeuvring for the defeat of Hamilton and toppling Toronto Argonauts 21-13.

A trade with Toronto which sent Don Paquette to Argos brought Montreal Jerry Philp who scored a touchdown against his old club, and an unexpected bonus in Chuck Wood, who has played standout ball on the Montreal defensive line.

The clue to the early success of Montreal, however, lies less in the manner in which unspectacular trades have paid off than in the display of drive and toughness by an inspired defence and opportunistic offence.

Insiders agree that the invigoration of Montreal Alouettes is due primarily to the rebuilding job of coach Jim Trimble, hired from Hamilton for 1963.

Jungle Jim quietly proceeded to discard Alouettes he felt swinging the lead under the protection of fat contracts. I training camp, he drove his players hard and came up with a tough crew resolved to win.

Marilyn Bell's Only Regret

'Don't Remember Finishing'

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

WILLINGBORO, N.J. (CP)—One day, many years ago, a tiny 15 - year - old girl drifting along the Toronto lakefront asked her father a silly question.

"Daddy, did anybody ever swim across Lake Ontario?"

"No, of course not," replied her father. "That's much too far."

The years went by and the 15-year - old, whose name was Marilyn Bell, didn't grow much bigger but she became a strong swimmer.

Finally, on a cool September night 10 years ago, she went for a swim in Lake Ontario, to see how far she could go.

About 20 hours later, at 8:06 p.m. Sept. 8, 1954, she became the first person to make it all the way across.

She was so tired she didn't know where she was, nor was she aware of the thousands of people crowding the Toronto lakefront to cheer her victorious arrival.

Sitting in the living room of her comfortable home in this quiet Philadelphia suburb recently, Marilyn—now Mrs. Joseph Di Lascio — enjoyed recalling her brief life as an athletic celebrity but had no wish to experience it all over again.

NO MORE GOALS

"I suppose it sounds silly to talk of being in retirement at my age," said the 26-year-old Marilyn, "but I accomplished everything I wanted to."

If she had any regrets, they were only that she didn't recall the very moment when victory was hers.

"The Lake Ontario swim is the one that will always mean the most to me but I honestly and truly don't remember finishing it.

"I have no recollection of actually touching the breakwater. Before I was aware that I was on land again, the last thing I remember is seeing a vague skyline and hearing my coach, Gus Ryder, saying from the boat 'swim for the yellow building,' swim for the yellow building.'

"I think I dozed off repeating that to myself.

"I was amazed when I listened to broadcast recordings of the finish and heard all that noise and pandemonium — the horns blowing and people yelling and shouting."

However, she had no trouble remembering the exciting moment, 11:07 p.m. the night of Sept. 8, 1954, when she plunged into the lake from a log retaining wall in Youngstown, N.Y.

From Youngstown it is only a few hundred yards to Canada, across the Niagara River. The way Marilyn—and a few other swimmers—intended to go. it is 32 miles.

OUTSWIM CHADWICK

"All I was thinking about when I got into the water was that I wanted to go farther than Florence Chadwick. If she went five miles, I remember thinking, I would be happy to go six and then get out."

Florence Chadwick of the United States, the darling of marathon swim fans before Marilyn came along, failed to swim across Lake Ontario but perhaps Marilyn wouldn't have done it either, had it not been for her.

"I didn't grow up with any burning ambition to do it," she said, "although I realized soon after I took up swimming that I was better at long distances.

"I think it really became a serious idea when I heard that the Canadian National Exhibition was offering Miss Chadwick a prize to swim across the lake and not inviting anybody else to compete for it.

"This just didn't seem right to me. I was 15 and a Canadian and I didn't think Canadian swimmers should just sit around and let somebody else be the first to cross the lake. I guess that's a 16-year-old's thinking for you but anyway, I talked about it with Gus and he agreed that I could take a crack at it."

Most of the fanfare at the start in Youngstown surrounded Miss Chadwick. Spotlights played upon her and she even had a U.S. military escort into the water.

ONLY MARILYN LEFT

But the American woman, then 34 and at the height of her fame, gave up after a few hours in the lake. A third candidate was hauled out later and by late afternoon, the public's gaze was focused right on the Toronto schoolgirl still crawling her weary way across the lake.

What stands out in Marilyn's memory?

"Oh, just about everything except the finish," she said.

She remembers her nervousness about swimming in darkness for the first time in her life and the eels clinging to her thighs. She remembers how badly she wanted to give up in the bleak hours before dawn, how her stomach ached, how her legs grew numb and how often she wondered how much farther she had to go.

"Toward the end, everybody kept telling me it was just another three miles, but nobody said to where."

She also remembers how "nice and warm" the water was when she got in. She remembers the "glorious" sunrise she saw after she had been several hours in the water. "I think it must have been the first sunrise I had ever seen."

She remembers the renewal of confidence she felt when Ryder, watching over her from a lifeboat, held up a blackboard to tell her Miss Chadwick had quit.

GOT ENCOURAGEMENT

She has a vague recollection of a splash toward nightfall, her bosom friend, Joan Cooke, diving into the water to swim beside her, and somebody screaming, "don't touch her, don't touch her."

It was Ryder doing the screaming. At his suggestion, Miss Cooke, now the wife of long - distance swimmer Cliff Lumsden, had gone in to encourage her but he didn't want the other girl to disqualify Marilyn by touching her, especially so close to the goal.

Joan didn't touch her and onward Marilyn went, following into shore by one of the oddest armadas ever seen in Toronto—him yachts, motorboats, official launches, sailboats, an ugly harbor tugboat and even kayaks and rowboats.

Only half-conscious when she was hauled aboard her coach's boat after touching a Toronto Harbor breakwater, she awoke to international acclaim, an avalanche of gifts and two more years as a headliner in professional swimming. Blown a bit off course by the wind, she had covered a distance of 40 miles in 20 hours 59 minutes.

Newspaper editors named her Canada's Woman of the Year in 1954 and again the next year, when she became the youngest person to swim across the English Channel.

Her last big swim was in August, 1956, when she became the first woman to cross Juan de Fuca Strait from the U.S. to Vancouver Island.

MARRIED LIFEGUARD

In 1957 she got married and settled down in New Jersey. In 1958 she was selected for Canada's Sports Hall of Fame.

She met her husband, a New Jersey civil service examiner, at Atlantic City, N.J., in 1954. He was a lifeguard and she had just scored her first big-time success by becoming the first female competitor ever to finish the Atlantic City mixed marathon.

They have four children, Lisa, 5, Michael, 4, Janet, 2, and Jodi, 1.

Marilyn, who didn't learn to swim properly herself until she was nine, is in no hurry to make swimmers out of them.

"The oldest one is really starting to swim this year," she said, "but I don't plan to teach her anything but the barest fundamentals until next year."

They go to a schoolyard pool several blocks away.

In the meantime, with the anniversary of her Lake Ontario swim approaching, Marilyn was "very excited" about returning to the scene this month for a special appearance.

The CNE is sponsoring a race across Lake Ontario Aug. 21 and optimistically offering cash prizes ranging from $7,000 to $400 for the first seven finishers, although only three persons since Marilyn have been able to beat the lake.

Marilyn, who picked up the $10,000 prize originally intended for Miss Chadwick in 1954 and earned about $100,000 during her swimming career, will be a broadcast commentator this time.

"I'll be going across in a boat," she said with a laugh. "Believe me, that's the best way. Besides, I'll see what it's like at the finish.'

The Trots

TORONTO (CP)—Mighty Kawartha raced to his first win in upsetting Kelly Mac Hal Wednesday night in the $6 060 final of the Standard-bred Futurity Pace for two year olds at Greenwood Raceway.

The son of Capetown was winless in 11 previous starts for owner Mrs. Vera Johnston of Peterborough. Mrs. Johnston also qualified Kawartha Star and Kawartha Babe for the final.

In the first trial, Kelly Mac Hal was a handy winner and picked up $2,281, a sum also gained in the second trial by the Herbert Stable of London, owners of Ben Herbert.

The first five finishers in each trial gained berths in the final.

In the junior invitation pace, Sonny Creed gained a near decision over 3-to-4 choice Bob Brook, owned by Don Mackenzie of Glace Bay, N.S. Clarence Lockhart of Collingwood, Ont., was in the sulky behind Sonny Creed.

The finish of Sonny Creed and Bob Brook provided a quinella of $21.10.

A daily double of $83.10 came up when Princess Volo H. won the opening race and the second went to Maxie's Chief.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE (CP)—Recourse, a three-year-old geleding which trainer Jerry Meyer claimed for $2,500 on July 28, at Delaware, made his first start in Canada Monday and responded at Fort Erie and just eked out victory.

With Jim Fitzsimmons in the saddle, Recourse ran a straight course through the stretch and just nipped Amapip and Prince Anthony at the wire. A nose and a head separated the first three horses.

Recourse was the hottest tip of the day and most of the 8,343 fans went along with the information. He returned $5.80, $3.40 and $2.90 after running six and one-half furlongs in 1.18 3-5.

The daily double of Drifting Heather and Sky Spark paid $72.90, while the quinella of River Party and Blacks Charge paid $38.90.

ATTRACTED TO U.S.

MEXICO CITY (AP)—More than 101,000 migrant Mexican workers have gone to the United States this year, the government announced.

Says Trawlers Entering Inside 12-Mile-Limit

WEST ST. MODISTE, Nfld. (CP)—A Roman Catholic priest in this tiny Labrador fishing community says large foreign trawlers are entering the Strait of Belle Isle — well inside the 12-mile limit—and are destroying locally-set fishing gear.

Rev. Alfred Tessier said in an interview that "the trawlers come as close as one mile from shore. . . ."

He said many trawlers were destroyed recently by the big ships near West St. Modiste. Trawls set by local fishermen are long nets set with hundreds of hooks for catching codfish. The big trawlers catch fish with drag nets.

Nationality of the ships involved was not disclosed.

Unconfirmed reports reaching St. John's in the last few weeks include descriptions of fishermen chasing trawlers out of their water. One report said a large trawler tried to run down a fisherman after he had come close enough to take down the ship's name and number. The fisherman, who was not named, said he passed on his information to the fisheries department.

However, area fisheries director H. R. Bradley said in St. John's he had not received no complaints from fishermen in the area about trawlers violating the fishing limit or of broken trawls.

Two New TV Comedy Series Will Spoof Horror Movies

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There will not be a single problem on our series that could not be handled by The Donna Reed Show", said Carl Lewis in the earnest manner that endeared him to Car 54 audiences when he played Officer Schnauser.

But Donna Reed and her sunny, suburban family seemed far away. Lewis' face was covered with a thick layer of mauve grease paint, his lips were an eerie combination of black and red paste. And behind him as he spoke, his old Car 54 playmate, Fred Gwynne unrecognizable in a foam-rubber - and - mauve Frankenstein's monster make-up, lay strapped grotesquely in a torture chair in a cobweb - filled dungeon beside a mad scientist's work table where noxious brews bubbled and steamed.

"See?" said Lewis happily "He's strapped down to keep from eating because he's gone on a crash diet so he can get back into his uniform for a reunion with his wartime buddies. Later he breaks loose and eats the neighbor's Thanksgiving dinner."

That, kiddies of all ages, is the way It's going to be with The Munsters, CBS' comedy series this fall. The basic device is that the Munster family consists of Gwynne's Frankeinstein type; a wife who looks like a vampire; Grandpa (Lewis) a member of the Dracula family; and a mother-less son —and a pretty blonde niece, a source of worry because, to them, she looks abnormal.

CAROLYN, TOO

A few miles away, in another studio, Carolyn Jones, in a long black wig and slinky vampire - type dress was casually lowing to be among TV husband (John Austin, made up to look like Peter Lorre at his best) sweater with a three—sleeves which she was knitting. Behind her were a conservatory, where she grew poisonous and man - eating plants, and a display of her husband's toy trains (his hobby is setting up miniature train weeks).

Fast, lovers of laughter, is the way It's going to be with The Addams Family, ABC's comedy series, this fall.

"I have long felt that TV comedy needed a new look," said the creator and executive producer, David Levy, who worked with cartoonist Charles Addams to convert his diabolic family from the pages of the New Yorker magazine to the small screen.

The Munsters, it seems, will be a broader, more obvious spoof on the horror film Grandpa's easy chair is an electric chair; the family phone booth is an upended, upholstered casket; the sun will shine on all the neat houses in the block, but it will always be stormy around the crumbling Victorian monstrosity where the Munsters live.

Ed Sullivan, who likes to be where the action is, will tape the opening of his Democratic convention eve program next Sunday in Atlantic City — but the program itself will be a patchwork of re-runs from old shows.

Movie Column

"Behold a Pale Horse" Short of Being Masterpiece

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The new movie Behold a Pale Horse falls short of being a masterpiece by Fred Zinnemann, but any film by the Vienna-born creator is an important event.

This is Zinnemann's first movie in four years, the last: one being the poignant study of family strife, The Nun's Story. He then tried to adapt James Michener's massive Hawaii for the screen. He wanted to make two movies from the novel: United Artists wanted one. Impasse.

The director threatened him-self in the Emeric Pressburger Novel, Killing a Mouse On Sunday, a story of the aftermath of the Spanish Civil War.

The project brought trouble from the start. The Spanish government blasted it as an anti-activities of Columbia Pictures, which was sponsoring the film. The Spanish Reds, like Peck's book, and now Zinnemann reports they don't like the movie. Columbia is still mum.

CLAIMS NOT POLITICAL

The director claims Behold a Pale Horse is no more political than movies that show the KKK in a bad light. But the division of good and evil is plainly evident.

The good guy is Gregory Peck, an aging (50), irreverent guerrilla who has continued the war long after his side has lost, making forays from his exile home in France.

The bad guy is Anthony Quinn, a corrupt, adulterous commandant of the Spanish national police force. For years he has been Rodefiller Ray Peck's raide. Now, with the guerrilla's dying mother as bait, he sets a trap.

The confluence of opposing forces was materially portrayed by Zinnemann in High Noon, perhaps the perfect western. He uses the same technique in Behold a Pale Horse, with excellent results.

The pace in the beginning is deceptively slow and filled with seemingly extraneous incident. But then, the incidents fall into a pattern, and the buildup comes to a violent, shattering climax.

FAILS IN CLIMAX

It is in the climax that Behold a Pale Horse fails to achieve greatness. Peck's final show of defiance appears a pointless waste of life. Including his own. It is an ending more suited for an existential European movie than a U.S.-made one.

Peck creates one of his finest characterizations since The Gunfighter, in which he had a parallel role. Quinn is his blustery self, and Omar Sharif is sympathetic though passive as a priest caught in the crossfire.

The movie was shot in the Pyrenees — northern Spain, of course. The title? It's from the Book of Revelation: "And I lookèd, and behold a pale horse: And his name that sat on him was death, and hell following with him."

MONEY MAKER

Bridge on the River Kwai has earned $3,000,000 in the first month of its general release, making it the biggest money winner for Columbia Pictures since Gone With the Wind.

Killed Oswald On Spur of Moment -- Ruby

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Ruby has been quoted from purported actual word-by-word testimony before the Warren commission as insisting he killed Lee Harvey Oswald on the spur of the moment.

In a copyrighted story Tuesday by New York Journal-American columnist Dorothy Kilgallen, Ruby is quoted as having told Chief Justice Earl Warren during interrogation June 7:

"I was never malicious toward this person. No one else requested me to do anything. I never spoke to anyone about attempting to do anything. No subversive organization gave me any idea. No underworld persons made any effort to contact me."

Ruby, 53, stepped out of a crowd of newspaper men and onlookers in the basement of Dallas police headquarters Nov. 24 and fired a single fatal bullet into Oswald, who had been formally charged as the assassin of President John F. Kennedy two days earlier.

Condemned to death by a Dallas trial jury March 14, Ruby now is held in the Dallas County jail pending an appeal of his conviction.

The new names are "peaceful," "shining," "harvest," and the like.

Seek to Free Bodies of Two Killed in Mine

KIRKLAND LAKE- (CP) — Rescue crews dug today in an effort to free the bodies of two miners crushed by a rock burst at the 4,000-foot level at the Wright-Hargreaves mine here.

Mine officials said they believe Donald Worrell, 43, and Edouard Duchesne, 55, both of Kirkland Lake, were buried by the cave-in, but that they have abandoned hope of finding them alive.

An underground tremor in the mine was recorded Wednesday but it was in another part of the mine and did not interrupt rescue operations.

Other work at the mine has been stopped until the men are reached.

Mine Manager Frank Buckle said Wednesday the recent series of rock bursts will shorten the expiring life of the mine. Mr. Buckle said the company planned to close the mine at the end of this year but the rock bursts have made several of the levels difficult to work. He said it was difficult to say how much the life of the mine would be shortened.

Rock bursts are cave-ins that occur in worked mine properties. The Wright - Hargreaves mine, entered 10 feet below sea level, is the deepest mine in North America.

Orchestra Defies Order to Shed Designation

LONDON (AP)—A discordant note echoed over Britain today as the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra defied a government order to shed its "royal" designation.

The orchestra has had a difficult time since the death of its wealthy and talented founder, Sir Thomas Beecham, four years ago. Last year it split with management under Beecham's widow and the musicians set out to manage themselves as a co-operative. At the same time their fate was severed with the Royal Philharmonic Society.

Then Home Secretary Henry Brooke told the orchestra it could no longer use the title "royal."

"The orchestra's existence depends on the name. It would be irresponsible for the company to acquiesce in the destruction of the orchestra on other than artistic grounds," the Philharmonic management replied.

The society, with royal approval, has held its title since the 19th century. It is an amateur-professional body which runs a choir and sponsors concerts.

Three Charged With Scattering Rats in Town

PICTON (Staff) A pied piper is not needed in Picton—three local men have been doing a good job of ridding the town of the rodents according to evidence produced in Magistrate's Court Wednesday.

Ronald Ferguson, Carl Byers and Lawrence Elsbury, all of Picton, were each charged with littering. The three men had killed over 100 rats in the town dump and at 1.45 a.m. began an early morning spree of spreading them in a trail along the road as they proceeded up the town's main street. The young men, two of them in their teens, when apprehended were made to pick up all the rats that they had so gaily flung around. Magistrate T. Y. Wills said that this was probably the best punishment they could receive, to pick up the rats and fined each $10 and costs.

GIVEN 14 DAYS

Norval A. Aitken, Picton, was charged with driving while impaired and sentenced to 14 days in the common jail. This was a second offence for Aitken. He was apprehended on July 17 while leaning out the window of his automobile which was stopped in the centre of the road on Lake St. The man had suffered previous heart attacks and claimed that he had had a similar attack at the time that he was apprehended.

Dr. J. Anderson, called to the stand as witness for the defence was asked by the magistrate if it was reasonable that a heart attack would affect him in this manner.

Dr. Anderson replied that "No it would not."

Aitken was found by Sergt. Hele of the Picton police force to be unable to assist himself and had to be helped to stand and walk. Sgt. Hele also testified that there was a strong smell of alcohol on the accused.

GIVEN 30 DAYS

Earl Barnhart pleaded guilty to a charge of care and control of an automobile while intoxicated.

It was Barnhart's second offence and he was sentenced by Magistrate Wills to 30 days in jail.

'Too Much Paternalism' Race Consciousness Grows Among Canada's Indians

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A new mood of racial self-consciousness akin to the ferment affecting the French-Canadian and the American Negro is spreading among Canada's 200,000 Indians.

The mood is manifest in sometimes-stumbling efforts by Indians to find leadership among themselves. The aim is to diminish reliance on white agents of the federal Indian Affairs Branch who guide administration of 2,240 reservations.

"There's been too much government paternalism in the past," says Chief Richard Pine of the Garden River Ojibway reserve near Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. "Now we're going to do things for ourselves."

The chief's prediction has an ironic ring in the wake of a squabble-infested conference of the young National Indian Council on his reserve at the end of July.

A bitter power struggle between NIC Chief William Wuttunee, a Calgary lawyer, and Mohawk fashion model Kahn-tineh Horn almost wrecked the four-year-old council.

FUTURE DOUBTFUL

The scars of the battle of Garden River could reopen to destroy the National Indian Council, just as two previous attempts to form a Canada-wide Indian league succumbed to tribal hostilities and apathy.

But council leaders are hopeful that the Garden River squabbles have helped purge petty dissension. The differences involved personalities more than basic aims.

"The air has been cleared," said one neutral delegate who had been disgusted by the bickering. One elated by a final show of harmony. "Now we can make progress."

Progress to the new Indian leaders means lifting Canada's first citizens out of second-class status by way of education and economic self-help.

The traditional path of progress for the Indian caught between his aboriginal past and the white man's world has been away from the reserves, where the economic emphasis is on smallhold farming, fur trapping and fishing. More than one-quarter of Canada's registered Indians live away from reserves.

WANT SCHOOLING

But most who take this path find only poverty in the white man's world, chiefly because of lack of education and skills.

Education in many cases is there for the asking. But while more than 55 per cent of the exploding Indian population is under 21, only about 47,000 or less than half of them are attending school. Only about 3,500 of these are in high school and fewer than 500 are taking technical or professional training.

"It has been shown that Indian intelligence levels are as high as whites," says Indian schoolteacher Clive Linklater of St. Paul's, Alta. "But the motivation to education is missing and we can't find out why. . . .

"There is a feeling that Indian parents are pulling back, perhaps unconsciously asking their children: 'Do you think you are going to do better than me?' "

Whatever the cause of the mounting problem, Mr. Linklater and others like him are determined to work — preferably through a national campaign, to change the don't-care attitude of Indians towards education.

With the Indian population expanding faster than any other Canadian ethnic group, the strain on reservation resources will reach crisis proportions soon. Leaders fear that without education and economic development, Indians will never escape from the welfare-poverty cycle.

Accompanying the desire for educational and economic development is a feeling that assimilation with the white man is not necessarily, progress.

Miss Horn and others believe that the reserves—improved—must remain the basis of Indian life. She holds that Indians must be separate but equal with whites, not just "brown Canadians."

"The Jewish people have managed to maintain a separate way of life by keeping their religion and traditions but are integrated in every other way," Miss Horn says. "That is what the Indians should aim for."

The sense of identity—what one Indian writer calls "the Indian exercise renaissance of the Indian people"—finds expression in a range of ideas as varied as a new sensitivity to racial discrimination and to thoughts of pan-Indianism.

The NIC is working to bring equality to a people who have been discriminated against and who have lost their dignity in the face of white attitudes of superiority. Marie Smallface, 20-year-old Edmonton sociology student, told the council in a passionate speech which she finally broke off near tears because "I'm getting too emotional."

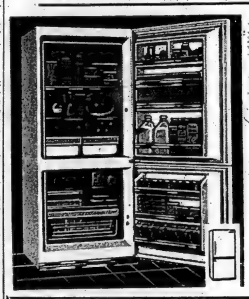
ONE GOD

Elizabeth Samson, a director of the Toronto Indian Centre, says of moves to remove the stigma "pagan" from Indian religion: "People like myself who have combined their Indian beliefs with their Christian religion have never seen where there is a difference between Manitou and God. To us, He is one and the same being."

In efforts to record Indian history, Mrs. Joseph Hill of the Six Nations Indians at Brantford, Ont., says: "Remember, if it wasn't for us there would be no Canada. Our people drove off the American invaders at the Battle of Queenston Heights in 1812."

Leaders stress the similarities among Indians in an effort to overcome historic differences within a race divided in Canada into a dozen language groups as different as English and Chinese, into scores of tribes that include ancient enemies and more than 550 bands nurturing modern resentments and on unequal living standards.

"We are part of a community of 50,000,000 Indians in the Americas," says Mr. Wuttunee. "We are part of the same people as Aztecs and Mayas. And we are going to play a more important part in our communities."



Said pretty Nancy Beauvais, 18-year-old Mohawk girl from Oka, Que., who is about to enroll in McGill University: "We shall prove that noble fathers have noble children."

SEASON CLOSED ON ICE CREAM TRUCKS—Nola Brown, 29, a suburban Toronto housewife who has won marksmanship medals with her rifle was bound by court order to keep the peace for two years on a charge of possessing a dangerous weapon and discharging a firearm in a public place. An ice cream truck driver told police she shouted at him to get off the street, then shot out one of his tires. Magistrate M. J. Cloney restricted her shooting to target practice and hunting. Crack CP Train Derailed - Eight Dead

Gravel Truck Causes Wreck Near Ottawa

Village General Store Being Used as Hospital

By PAUL DUNN

LEONARD, Ont. (CP)—Eight persons were reported killed and an undetermined number injured, some critically, when a gravel truck rammed into a fast CPR Ottawa-Montreal passenger train today in this farming community 17 rail miles east of Ottawa.

Seven, of the dead were passengers on the train, commonly called the "businessman's special," which was struck at a level crossing in clear weather. The eighth was the truck driver. Identified as Bazil Czopyk of Ottawa.

The truck knifed into the side of a day coach, which then careened into a concrete pumphouse and looped a grove of poplars. Two following parlor cars were derailed but remained upright. A dining car bounced.

"It was the most dreadful thing you could imagine," said Howard Graffety, Conservative MP for Brome-Missisquoi, who was in the dining car.

Mr. Graffety said he hurried to help the injured but could do little. "About all I could do was console a little boy who watched as his mother and father died." He said he heard some priests giving the last rite by dying or critically injured.

MPs UNHURT

Mr. Graffety said Jean-Luc Pepin, Liberal MP for Drummond - Arthabaska, and Undersecretary of State Ernest Sieds also were aboard the CPR train but neither was hurt.

The 12-car train was said son of Commons committee clerk E. W. Innes, told The Canadian Press he thought he was one of only two or three survivors in the coach, which he believed was carrying about 12 persons.

"Some people were thrown out the windows and the train rolled on three times," said, adding that he believed the dead were businessmen and nuns and several elderly women.

Mr. Innes said he saved himself by "curling my arms around my head and neck, then getting down in the seat and holding on." He said he thought his quick action saved his life, adding that older persons in the car had "sheer reactions and didn't have a chance."

The train's diesel engine, baggage car and first passenger car of the train did not leave the track. That part of the train

Rebels Hit Congolese At Bukavu

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—The hard-pressed Congo Army, reinforced with troopers and supplies, battled today against rebel-backed rebels threatening Bukavu, last key northeastern city in government hands.

The fighting 3,000 miles east of this capital went on as the fate of three Americans reported missing in Bukavu remained unknown.

In Washington, the U.S. role in The Congo was apparently due for high - level review. G. Mennen Williams, assistant state secretary for African affairs, arrived home Thursday night to report on his talks here with Premier Moise Tshombe.

Reports on the battle of Bukavu were sketchy.

U.S. Air Force transport planes ferried reinforcements Thursday to the Congo Army garrison of 800 men, who were last reported losing ground in the besieged city. Radio messages said they had pushed back Col. Leonard Mulamba's troops into Bukavu's European sector.

A message to the UN said the missing Americans may have been captured, but there was no official word.

CROSS TO RWANDA

Earlier, the six-man U.S. embassy staff evacuated to neighboring republic of Rwanda.

William's trip to The Congo, his 10th, coincided with an increase in U.S. aid to the shaky central government. Since June 1 100 U.S. troops and four cargo planes arrived last week.

U.S. officials said the men and aircraft would be used only in rescue and support missions against the rebels.

Williams denied that the United States had offered to underwrite the expenses of possible mil i t ary support from other African nations. Tshombe has appealed for five African states for troops. His request has so far gone unanswered.

Deadlock On Flag Still On

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Prodded on by a panorama of suggestions from the Commons, the five party leaders, were to meet again today in the third round of talks seeking a way out of the parliamentary flag deadlock.

And unlike Thursday's meeting of the five, which came on the heels of a snarling session of the Commons flag debate, today's get - together follows a Commons session Thursday that, while scarcely chummy, was distinctly mellowed by conciliatory suggestions.

One MP who stood back to take a detached view of the 12-day flag debate was Marcel Lessard (SC — Lac St. Jean). He said that if English Canada were going to be divided on the flag, Quebec wouldn't want it. There were more pressing needs, and both sides in the Commons should relax their stand and accept a compromise.

Say PM To Abandon Flag Plan

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—The Free Press says in an Ottawa story that "unless something goes awry" Prime Minister Pearson is about to "bust down for all time his proposed national flag" and accept a "compromise" proposal that an all-party committee of the Commons fashion a new and distinctive flag."

The newspaper says Parliament will then recess and a committee will be appointed to choose and recommend a new flag design.

The Free Press gave no source for its report.

It says:

"The record - in the - making will stipulate that all parties agree in advance to accept whatever flag design the select committee chooses."

"There has to be some loss of face here and there," said Conservative Alvin Hamilton, suggesting that Commons committee be established to elect a design that Parliament can approve unanimously.

H. A. Olson (SC — Medicine Hat) urged the government to abandon the maple leaf flag as an amendment from an opposition party, to make the new flag a bipartisan design. And he urged that party whips be called off so there could be a free vote.

VOICE OPTIMISM

The increasing pleas for compromise seemed to give the five party leaders a growing cheering section as they tried again to reach an agreement. After Thursday's private session they appeared more optimistic than when they glumly emerged from the first round Monday.

The five tossed around various proposals and NDP Leader Douglas Fisher said "possible-just possible" that a major compromise would be reached.

But the compromises discussed, it was reported, was a distinctive Canadian flag with a single red bar, the Union Jack and the adoption of the Red Ensign, instead of the Union Jack, as symbolic of Commonwealth membership.

Meanwhile the Commons will get a free run from the repetitious flag issue today as it tackles the spending estimates of the department of forestry. Unless an unexpected development occurs, the flag debate will go into its 13th day Monday.

As usual, there were heated shouts across the Commons floor whenever a prickly point was raised during Thursday's debate.

Buddhist Students Demand End of Khanh Dictatorship

SAIGON (AP) — Students in Saigon and other South Vietnamese cities staged anti-government rallies today and demanded that President Nguyen Khanh step aside in favor of a civilian government.

The rallies came on the heels of the death of four U.S. military advisors and heavy Vietnamese losses in a Communist ambush south of Saigon.

In Saigon today, Buddhist student leader Tho That Tue told 500 students that Khanh's "dictatorship is even worse than the Ngo Dinh Diem dictatorship, and we must fight harder than ever."

The group marched to Khanh's office building shouting anti - government slogans and waving banners reading "dictatorship digs a grave for itself."

Khanh was at the seaside resort of Cape St. Jacques, 40 miles southeast of Saigon, putting together a new cabinet.

Informed sources said a delegation of students went to see him there also.

Rallies against Khanh's regime were also staged in Hue, Duy Hoa, Can Tho and other towns. The demonstrations—ill legal under Viet Nam's state of emergency decree — were not stopped, but police and troops kept watch.

Student leader Tue was allowed inside Khanh's Saigon office building, where he presented an "ultimatum" to officials of the government's information agency.

The student demands included freedom of the press, abrogation of the national charter promulgated by Khanh last Sunday, an end of alleged repression of Buddhists and replacement of the military government by civilians.

Student leader Tue said they would give Khanh until next Tuesday to give them satisfactory replies, or they would "enlarge the struggle."

Student boycotts of high schools and universities appeared to be widespread today, and examinations were being cut. More demonstrations are planned for today and for the week to come.

The Americans, military advisers to a South Vietnamese infantry unit, were killed in Kien Hoa province south of Saigon while the outfit was searching for Viet Cong guerrillas who overran the military outpost of

Nuclear Plant Planned

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts of Ontario says a 1,000,000-kilowatt nuclear power plant for the province "assures that Canada's leading role in developing peaceful uses of the atom will continue."

Premier Robarts announced Thursday a co-operating agreement among the Ontario government, the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and the federal government to build the plant, which will start feeding electricity into the provincial grid in 1970. His announcement of the project, first reported a week ago, came just before a similar announcement in the House of Commons by Federal Industry Minister Drury.

The agreement provides that about two-thirds of the $256,000,000 estimated cost of the nuclear plant will come from Ontario Hydro and will pay $120,000,000 — an amount equal to the cost of a coal-burning power station to produce that much electricity. The Ontario government will provide $66,500,000 and $79,500,000 will come from the federal government.

"At the national level, the plant mark s an impressive advance along the road to utilizing the natural and technological resources for the benefit of the entire nation," Premier Robarts said.

"The advent of nuclear power in Ontario might be compared to the discovery of a dozen new Niagaras."

THANKS SCIENTISTS

After the announcement in the Commons, Gordon Churchill, former Conservative trade minister, said Canada's 20-year-old nuclear program has been a major success. The scientists of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited deserve the thanks of all Canada.

Site of the plant has not been selected. Ontario wants to use a 150 - acre site owned by Hydro on Lake Ontario at Fairport, east of Toronto.

Hydro ...Chairman W. Ross Strike said approval of the site as the atomic energy control board in Ottawa could be given this fall. He said the commission hopes construction will begin in late 1965. Estimated production costs indicate the plant will produce at about the same rate as coal-fired power, about four mills a kilowatt-hour, he said.

The station follows experimental developments in a 20,000-kilowatt plant on the Ottawa River at Rolphton, Ont., and a 200,000-kilowatt station at Douglas Point, on Lake Huron, which is due to start feeding power into the provincial grid next year.

A Hydro spokesman said initial uranium oxide loading will be about 224 tons for the first two reactors, subsequent refinements will be half the initial loading.

Cost of uranium for the Douglas Point plant is about $30 a pound and for Rolphton it is about $25 a pound for the new plant. This would amount to an annual cost of $5,800,000.

Greeks Charge Turkish Planes Fly Over Island

No Casualties Reported In Fighting Near Ktima

NICOSIA (AP) — Renewed fighting between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots, and a government charge that Turkish planes flew over Cyprus, threatened today to shatter the shaky truce on this Mediterranean island.

No casualties were reported in the fighting Thursday near Ktima in southwest Cyprus. Shooting between the communal factions lasted about an hour, a UN spokesman said.

Turkish reconnaissance flights were reported in the Kokkina-Mansoura area where two weeks ago Greek - Cypriot advances on Turkish positions triggered retaliatory air strikes by Turkey. A UN - sponsored cease-fire has been in effect since the Turkish assaults.

Turkey had agreed to suspend its reconnaissance missions but warned that new attacks by Greek-Cypriots would lead to their resumption.

The sudden visit here of Greece Defence Minister Petros Garoufalias roused speculation. He said Thursday night after arriving from Athens that he would speak with President Makarios and inspect Greece's 950-man contingent assigned to the island under the 1960 treaty which granted independence to Cyprus.

RUMORS CIRCULATE

There were rumors, however, the Garoufalias had come to persuade Makarios to reject an offer of Soviet military aid, pledged in case of a Turkish attack. A Greek-Cypriot delegation was expected to depart soon for Moscow for talks on the subject.

The 6,000-member UN peacekeeping force made its strongest show of force on Cyprus Thursday. A task force tore apart three Turkish-Cypriot positions in Nicosia in a move to create a greater no-man's land between opposing sides.

Irate Turkish-Cypriot fighters fired a few small mortar weapons but did not interfere with the UN soldiers.

At UN headquarters in New York, Secretary - General U Thant said the peace-keeping force might be forced to withdraw before its second three-month assignment expires Sept. 26, unless $2,000,000 can be raised for its support. Thant said that estimated expense of the force could reach $12,730,000 and that pledges covered only five-sixths of this amount.

The UN official also denied reports he had chosen Ecuadorian diplomat Galo Plaza Lasso to succeed UN mediator Carl S. Tuomioja of Finland, who is leaving ill in mid-September. Thant said no decision had been reached.

2nd Bench Warrant For Banks

MONTREAL (CP) —Wherever he may be the missing Hal C. Banks has yet another legal tangle to contemplate today.

The deposed president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) now has been charged with being "unlawfully at large" and a second bench warrant has been issued for his arrest. The complaint, filed by the Crown Thursday would make him liable to as much as two years in prison.

It results from his non-appearance at a hearing earlier this week on a charge that he and 13 other men conspired to incite seamen to abandon their ships.

The burly, ex-boss had deposited $1,000 bail but a month his exact whereabouts have been a mystery.

Some observers have speculated he may be in the United States and the Canadian government has asked the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation for information about his possible movements there.

NO REPORT RECEIVED

But Justice Minister Guy Favreau told the Commons Thursday his department has received no report from the FBI.

The first bench warrant for Banks went out Monday, the day of his non - appearance. Given then, another special warrant—this one a civil document —was out for him. It was at the time a bailiff was to serve this warrant on the 56 - year - old unionist that Banks decamped for parts unknown.

Another skein in the legal web surrounding him will be played out today when the Crown presents a petition for the cancellation of the $1,000 bail.

Another $25,000 bail has been deposited pending his appeal from a two-year prison sentence in the assault of a rival officer of the SIU of Canada. The missing man also faces three counts charge of conspiring to assault Richard Greaves of Vancouver with intent to cause bodily harm.

One of the other 13 did not appear at the court commission and is also sought on a bench warrant.

The preliminary hearing for the 12 has been set for Oct. 14.

The boys, aged 14 and 16, are believed to be two reported missing from a reformatory school in southeastern England five days ago.

The luxury yacht is owned by Edward Mash, director of a food firm. It was intercepted about 20 miles from Dublin off the Irish coast.

Earlier it was rumored that Wilson, sentenced to 30 years in prison for his part in last year's £2,600,000 ($7,800,000) mail train holdup might be heading for the Irish Republic aboard the yacht. He escaped from Birmingham's Winson Green prison Aug. 12.

Red Chinese Influence Growing in Congo Area

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Red Chinese influence is growing in the former French Congo. Peking agents seem intent on transforming it into a base for revolution in Central and West Africa.

Brazzaville, capital of the Congo Republic, provides headquarters for what seems to be a mastermind committee of the rebellion in the other Congo, to the east, against the Leopoldville government.

Red China may see bright prospects for the spread of revolutionary violence from seeds planted in the two Congos. Portuguese Angola to the south is prime target.

Rebels holding a large chunk of the eastern area of Leopoldville Congo, including the city of Stanleyville, refer to their forces as "the people's liberation army." The Red Chinese apply the same name to their army.

Evidently, the anti - Leopoldville uprising gets significant help from Brazzaville, an important transport hub for all Central Africa. It is headquarters for an organization called the National Council for Liberation of the Congo. This group issues communiques on the progress of rebellion in the neighboring Congo, and describes itself as devoted to "Lumumbism." Patrice Lumumba a pro-Communist premier of Leopoldville, was murdered in 1961.

Premier Moise Tshombe in Leopoldville complained in this week of "interference from certain foreign countries in the

Hereditary Sense of Tolerance Will Solve Our Troubles - Massey

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's first native-born Governor-General said today he believes a hereditary sense of tolerance and compromise will ultimately help us to solve our problems now facing the country.

Rt. Hon Vincent Massey told the opening session of the third Commonwealth education conference there Canada is passing through a period experienced by most countries and federations of conditions of political strain and readjustment to find a new equilibrium.

"The hereditary sense of tolerance and compromise which has enabled us to carry on over the generations will, I have no doubt, ultimately help us to solve the questions which today beset us," he said.

"We have learned tolerance in a hard and practical school," Mr. Massey said this country's mise in Canadian life, however, has always somewhat forced Canadians' image of themselves and had often discouraged bold initiatives in nation-building.

He said Confederation one of the great political experiments with which Canadians have been concerned.

"Although our loose federal constitutional structure, with its division of power vested in the provincial governments, has sometimes made it difficult to achieve some national purpose, it has allowed the establishment and development of a single state from two original European cultures and a host of minorities have co-existed and flourished."

Mr. Massey said Canada has complicated national pattern.

"We are a land of many cultures. There is a large French part, a large English part and a host of smaller ethnic parts.

"Every part by itself is a minority, separate and distinc.."

Sometimes Pays To Re-Tender A Road Job

At least city council saved something like $1,500 on a road construction job which was let yesterday to Lightfoot Construction Ltd. after tenders had been recalled.

In the early summer council called tenders for a road construction project and Lightfoots submitted the lowest tender at $13,411.50.

But the price was higher than the city engineer's estimate, and the tender was not accepted, the idea being for considertation to be given to the works department doing the job on its own.

Then the job was re-tendered and Lightfoots came back with a bid of $11,900.

ACCEPTED BY COUNCIL

This second tender by Lightfoot was accepted by council when it was seen in line with the engineer's estimates.

There was no actual objection to the acceptance of the tender although Alderman Ben Corke and William Jarvah wanted to know whether works department administration costs were figured in the city engineer's estimate of the road job.

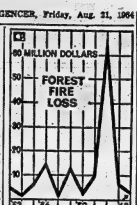
Also yesterday council accepted the tender of DeMille Construction Ltd. at $3,128.90 for the construction of sidewalks on Sidney Street and Victoria Ave. The tender was approved subject to agreement by the Ontario Municipal Board.

New Building For Public Works Is Approved

City council at a special meeting yesterday approved the proposed layout for the new public works buildings to be erected on Coleman Flats.

But at the same time the public works committee and the city engineering department was directed to work with the city parks board to arrange garage facilities for parks board equipment.

The proposed new city works barn has been a topic of discussion for council for many months. Plans were finally approved for erection of the barns on city-owned property in Foster Ward, council changed the site location to Wallbridge Crescent.



A change in building layout had to be made to fit the structures into the new site.

The new lay-out was approved by council yesterday, but before it was passed Alderman Don Joas, chairman of the Parks Board, asked that facilities be provided for storage of parks board equipment.

Mayor Jack Mills and Aldermen J. Bancroft and J. Allin were opposed on the grounds that plans will have to be again revised, but the motion was carried by a majority vote.

May Conduct Regular Council Meets in Summer

Instead of holding special meetings as the occasion demands during the summer recess, Belleville city council will give consideration to changing the procedural by-law to allow holding of regular monthly meetings during the summer period.

Alderman Frank Murray broached the subject yesterday at a special meeting stating that in his opinion a meeting on specified dates during July and August would be preferable to the present system when special meetings are called at possibly inconvenient times.

Policy for many years has been for council to recess during July and August with special meetings being called when required.

In many years, however, it turns out that more special meetings are held than would be the case if regular sessions were continued during the summer.

Amendment of the procedural by-law as suggested by Ald. Murray will be considered when council again meets in regular session.

Ald. Thinks Boxes Should Be Painted Yellow

Traffic light control boxes in the city could take on a brighter hue if a suggestion made by Alderman William Jarvah proposed that the control boxes be painted a bright yellow instead of the present green.

Ald. Jarvah says there have been complaints by people bumping into the boxes after they failed to see them in the dark.

Alderman Jarvah suggests that if the boxes were painted yellow they would be more readily visible.

The remaining alderman asked that a pedestrian walk crossing be painted on Sidney Street at the Wilkins Street intersection to give more protection to Northern Electric workers crossing the street at this point.

Unburned Tobacco Said Harmful

WASHINGTON (AP) — New tests with mice suggest that unburned tobacco in cigarettes may help cause human lung cancer as well as the burned part, a team of Buffalo researchers said Thursday.

And if their theory is proved, they said, the information might help in producing "less hazardous cigarettes."

The scientists said skin tumors were produced with the help of extracts of unburned tobacco painted on the rodents' skin.

This, they added, gave an experimental tie-in with suspicions evidence reported by various scientists over the years that tobacco chewing is associated with cancer of the mouth.

Reporting their research in the technical journal Science, the official weekly of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Roswell Park Memorial Institute group said:

"It is probable that the carcinogenic (cancer-causing) hydrocarbons of cigarette smoke result from destructive distillation of the cigarette components. Nevertheless, a host of carcinogens or tumor promoters may be formed in cigarette tobacco might be volatilized by . . . the heat from the burning part . . . and pass into the smoke, which is known to contain a number of carcinogens and tumor-promoting agents.

The tobacco industry has long held that the production of skin tumors in mice with chemicals derived from tobacco smoke is not proof that cigarette smoking may cause lung cancer, or any other form of cancer, of humans.

Authors of the Roswell Park report were Researchers Fred G. Bock, George E. Moore and Shirley K. Crouch.

14 U. S. Scouts Guests of District Scout Council

A group of 14 Louisville, Kentucky, scouts started on their way home shortly after a seven-teen day trip to Ontario which included activities in Algonquin Park, a visit to Ottawa, and an overnight bivouac at Camp Quinte where they were the guests of the Belleville District Scout Council.

The group, under Scoutmaster Gerry Hodgins of Louisville, left for Toronto today where they scheduled activities to visit the CNE before leaving Canada.

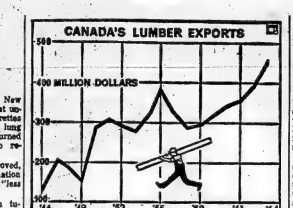
Yesterday's overnight visit to the Vandewater park, took the form of an informational scout meeting with local scouts and scouting officials joining in a campfire, Canadian and American skits, songs, and hopes for future brotherhood.

Earlier the boys enjoyed a dinner of Kentucky Fried Chicken, roasted corn and watermelon.

Scout leader Hodgins told his Belleville area hosts that Belleville ville on this occasion had played hosts to Kentuckians. He hoped that soon Kentucky could play host to Ontario and suggested that Belleville district scouts visit scouts in Kentucky and further the good relations built up over the years.

Highlight of the Kentucky scouts' Canadian visit was the canoe trip through Algonquin Park under the leadership of Algonquin rangers and guides supplied by Mr. McLaren of Louisville.

The group visited the parliament buildings in Ottawa and the Ottawa scout headquarters before coming to Belleville yesterday.



Local Scouters, Terry, Brennan, Kirby and Scouter Russell from Metro, headed up arrangements for last night's party at Camp Sagonaska.

The annual Bay of Quinte Field Day, scheduled for tomorrow has been cancelled for this year, it was announced by a club official this morning.

There will be a mixed two ball at the club Sunday, starting one o'clock.

DESERONTO—A two car accident in Deseronto this morning resulted in $150 damage to a ranch wagon owned by Jim Barkley of Deseronto. The other car involved in the accident was an American car from Michigan. There were no injuries.

Robert Brooks was riding on a tractor box when he fell out of the box and the rear wheels of the tractor driven by his 17-year-old brother, John, passed over his chest.

The boy was rushed to the Belleville hospital by White's Ambulance of Deseronto.

July Smoking Declined Over May and June

OTTAWA (CP) — Latest figures issued by the bureau of statistics show an apparent decline in smoking in July as compared with June and May.

The bureau said the number of cigarettes for which excise tax stamps were purchased by manufacturing and selling firms out of warehouses totalled 2,815,329,190 in July. This compared with 3,060,239,286 in June and 3,319,927,233 in May.

Sources at the bureau said the slump sales, while indicating general trends, cannot be interpreted too precisely.

For one thing, the stamps sold during one month do not reach packages of cigarettes before another six weeks to two months. Nor do the excise stamps reflect various tobacco stocks on hand or exports.

NEW YORK (AP)—Dr. Luther Terry, the U.S. surgeon-general, said Thursday he was disappointed U.S. cigarette consumption had risen again.

Americans had cut down on cigarettes following a federal report in January blaming cigarette smoking as a principal factor of lung cancer.

He told about 70 persons in a smoke-filled dining room of the Overseas Press Club, where about half of the audience puffed away on cigarettes, pipes and cigars:

"We have one clear lesson—the problem of smoking cigarettes is not to be conquered by appealing to people who have smoked 10, 15 or 20 years."

Any anti-cigarette smoking campaign, he said, would depend on the youth of the country.

Parliamentary Notebook

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Except for party leaders, most members of the cabinet, and a few ranking frontbenchers in the Commons, talk of a summer holiday for MPs has become little more than an academic exercise.

Most of the backbenchers have slipped away from Ottawa at various times during the past six weeks for a vacation, and only a few will not have had a holiday by the time Labor Day weekend rolls around.

This is the first session of Parliament since 1958 in which Commons sittings have gone on so long without a recess either at Easter or midsummer. (The 1903 session took four days off at Easter.)

Some MPs admit that as things have turned out, the new holiday-less schedule has worked relatively well for them.

One eastern Ontario Liberal MP, for instance, says it has resulted in a clean desk. All old correspondence has been handled and the last few weeks have seen a vacation-like decline of constituents' requests.

There has actually been time left over to do a little research.

SOME GO ABROAD

A Prairie Conservative not only is caught up with his work but has had a holiday abroad—largely at the taxpayers' expense. He was sent off on a parliamentary mission. Elected others now are in Copenhagen, and a trip to Moscow is being planned for later this year for another group.

As another MP put it: "We're really not able to gripe too much about not having a recess. I know I said anything to complain about it to my constituents, they might get the idea someone else could represent down here. At $18,000 a year, you know—"

Party whips deny that there has been any formal rotation system in effect to let some members have holidays while others remain here to carry on the debates.

Another Liberal MP says the device of slipping away for a holiday unofficially has resulted in a real holiday for most of the members who have done so.

For one thing, they have not been away, but in some other part of Canada or abroad.

If a recess had been called, constituents would have expected members to come home and there would have been no holiday with constant telephone calls and political fence-feeding to do.

Gravel

continued to Montreal. Work trains moved in to clear the remaining wreckage and two other passenger trains, one the eastbound CNR Trans - Continental, were rerouted.

The wreck was No. 232. It leaves Ottawa six days a week at 7:55 a.m. on a fast, non-stop run to Montreal, normally arriving at 10 a.m. It is a favored run for businessmen and MPs travelling to and from the capital.

There are no flasher signals on the crossing.

BODIES SCATTERED

Residents of this little farming community arrived at the scene to find the dead and injured scattered for about 100 feet along the track. The truck was ripped into three sections and the driver's body was found 50 feet from the crossing.

Ten ambulances arrived at the scene, carrying the injured to hospitals in Ottawa. Leonard's small general store, its only business establishment, was used briefly as an emergency hospital.

Mrs. Ruby Woods, an elderly woman who lives near the track, said the crash woke her about 8:30 a.m. She rushed downstairs to find people crawling, staggering to her back door and fainting. Her back porch was stained with blood.

Her daughter-in-law, Mrs. F. J. Woods, said she had just driven her husband to work and returned to see the wreckage, including one coat on her mother-in-law's lawn.

"It was very awful. I saw some people whose bodies were in pieces. A lot of people were screaming. I was not panic."

PRIESTS IN COACH

In the coach were Rev. Garton Lassonde, 52, who with his brother, Rev. Andrew Lassonde was travelling to Montreal for their father's 80th birthday. Both are Roman Catholic priests from the Redemptorist Fathers seminary at Aylmer, Que.

"I was sitting on the window side of the seat," Father Andrew said.

"There was a loud crash and I was thrown up against the baggage rack. My brother was pushed out the window. All the windows in our car were smashed and most of the people fell on top of the ground.

"The gravel truck seemed to hit our coach from the opposite side. I'm still spitting gravel out of my mouth."

Hamilton Mayor In Liberal Leadership Race

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Mayor Vic Copps entered the Ontario Liberal leadership race today with a promise "to put a lot more pep into this campaign than it has seen to date."

The 45-year-old mayor said he would give his "heart and soul" to the fight.

He indicated that he would employ the type of whirlwind campaign which caused him to become senior controller in his first attempt for elected office in 1960. Two years later, he steamrolled into the mayor's chair.

The mayor announced that he would take his vacation at once and stump the province to seek delegate support.

Mayor Copps must win majority support from the more than 1,200 delegates who are expected to attend the leadership convention in Toronto Sept. 17-19.

The mayor kicked off his campaign by stating that he would seek to have the convention moved from Toronto.

He said that the entire theme of his campaign will be decentralization, with Toronto as his target.

He was a radio advertising salesman here before becoming mayor and was elected to all three of his terms by acclamation.

Newly-Laid Pavement Will Have to Be Lifted to Find Leaks in PUC Water Main

TRENTON — Somebody goofed! And the Trenton Public Utilities Commission wants to know who. And furthermore the commission members want it known it wasn't them.

Yesterday, before the horrified eyes of Dufferin Ave. residents, and others, workmen started to dig up a newly-laid portion of asphalt pavement on the street, between Prince Charles, School and Dundas St. West. The pavement had been laid a day or so before, and motorists, having detoured the street section for months, proceeded to drive down the street, gleefully.

At yesterday's meeting of the commission, Commissioner Clifford A. Baker wanted an explanation for the upheaval of the new asphalt. He got it from utilities manager James Page. The asphalt layers hadn't waited for utilities men to test the newly-laid 16-inch water main. The main was tested, after it was nicely covered, and found to have two leaks . . . now nobody knows where they are. Now, the whole main may have to be uncovered to find the leaks.

With another section of the main, (between Dundas St. W. and Henry St.) to be tested, the PUC talked forcefully about bringing an injunction against the paving contractor, the general contractor, Rayners of Toronto, to stop all paving until the leaks are found.

However, Mayor James MacDonald said he would move heaven and earth to get hold of the consulting engineer, hired by the PUC, and the commission, J. Tomlinson of Burlington, and demand an explanation.

"There's not much use of us spending $25,000 this year to discover leaks," Eddie Sargent, MLA (Grey North) and Charles Templeton, a former newspaper man.

TORONTO (CP) — Cloudy skies and a 67-degree temperature were predicted for today's 88th opening of the Canadian National Exhibition.

Federal Agricultural Minister Hayes Hazlitt Minister Tyrnond of Ontario; federal Labor Minister MacEachen; Mayor Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa; Rev. David Bauer, coach of Canada's 1964 Olympic hockey team; and Ralph Allen, managing editor of the Toronto Star, will be among the speakers at daily directors' luncheons.

photo-electric cells. Lights would go on when a certain density of darkness existed. They would go off, automatically, when a certain degree of lightness existed. Trenton street lights are now controlled in this manner. Once in a while, something goes wrong at one relay, and the lights stay on in the daytime — at least until the trouble is discovered and dealt with by utilities workmen. But on the whole, the system works very well. Operators wishing to use the flat rate, dusk to dawn system, will be required to put up a year's deposit, and will have this refunded at the end of ten years.

And the commission opened tenders for the supply of street lighting needs. Four tenders were opened. Prices ranged from $23,000 to $24,000, but the tenders will be examined in depth by utilities manager James Page before a decision as to the awarding of the tender is made by the commission.

Senior Citizens Enjoy Trip to Niagara Falls

TRENTON — To be a Trenton resident is the equivalent to do a "Jack Benny" in reverse and up one's age by ten or twenty years. In order to be able to join the Senior Citizens' Club. The reason? The single requisite in this town having more fun than anyone!

Last Tuesday, for example, a gay group of seniors, with Cec Rathbun as driver and guide, made a trip to Niagara Falls. They started bright and early from the recreation hall, stopped at Hamilton for a coffee break and made the first official stop at Toronto's new international airport.

Here, they were told by the "nice young ladies," who conducted tours of the airport, "it was too windy for them on the observation platform on top of the main terminal building."

Some of the club members chose not to believe her, and went up, where they didn't "blow away," but enjoyed an excellent view of the surrounding countryside. Unfortunately of one large plane landing and another taking off.

Next stop was the monument at Queenston Heights but everyone enjoyed the tour of the Brock's Rest Hydro Generating Station, (No. 2) and sat in the 100-seat theatre to view the film depicting the history of man's achievement in the field of power.

Lunch was eaten on the bus and in Niagara Falls the group was met up, some to enjoy a view of the falls from the land and sight see.

At the Russell's Wax Works, the seniors saw many important people—in wax, and the Chamber of Horrors held them a glimpse of how "justice" is meted out in the "olde days." They started to break up on their British and Canadian history as a result of this visit.

UNEXPECTED STOP

The unexpected stop at Drahmmes' Gardien Centre Hotel at Vineland Station, revealed a hearty meal which Rathbun had phoned ahead for reservations and the group enjoyed a hearty meal.

Another stop at a roadside fruit stand new 20 baskets of Niagara fruit bell peaches were led away in the baggage compartment.

Just west of Port Hope, another "surprise" awaited everyone—including Mr. Rathbun—and this one wasn't so pleasant. An inner tire on the big bus blew out, ("unheard of," according to the driver) and everyone cooled his heels while it was being fixed.

The trip home brought out the best in the members who fancy themselves as frustrated metropolitan opera stars or refugees from a barber shop quartet, and jokes were the order of the day.

Arriving home at 12 midnight, the oldsters were told by Mr. Rathbun, "you're the best group I ever took on a trip," and got told, "you're a jolly good fellow," in song. Acting president of the club, Mrs. Celia Rosenplot also voiced the club's gratitude to the driver.

GETS CLEANING JOB

"There's no place like home," . . . Trenton dry cleaner Jack Goldberg was surprised last week to receive an airmail parcel from France, containing a dress and instructions for it to be dry cleaned and air mailed back to France.

Mrs. Marjorie Gray, a former Trenton resident and the wife of Wing Commander W. B. Smith, RCAF, post didn't feel like trusting her finery to a French dry cleaning firm.

Brighton Girl Found Guilty Of Robbery

TRENTON—A former Brighton girl, and a resident of Trenton for the past few weeks, Barbara More, charged with robbery in an incident which occurred in Brighton township July 31, was found guilty on the charge in magistrate's court at Brighton yesterday and remanded until next week for sentencing. The magistrate has called for a pre-sentence report.

Miss More, 19, was said to have attempted to take money from a Trenton taxi driver, John A. (Major) Richardson, after wielding a knife. Richardson suffered superficial wounds in the struggle. He succeeded in subduing Miss More and called OPP from the Brighton detachment.

DONATE TO CAMP

The Trenton Rotary-Club has made a donation of $441 towards the building of a new recreation hall at Merrywood Camp, the campsite for crippled children on the Rideau Canal.

During the summer months, crippled children from this area attend the camp, and from time to time, club members visit the camp.

While the Rotary Club contributes to other community projects, emphasis is put on work with crippled children and each year the local club joins with Rotary Clubs across Ontario to sponsor the Easter Seal campaign, proceeds from which go to assist in this work.

HOLD COOKOUT

Wednesday night, a large number of Trenton Rotarians and their wives, as well as friends of club members were the guests of ex-president Clifford A. Baker at "Baker's Retreat," on the south shore of the Bay of Quinte for a barbecue cookout. Mrs. Baker, who with the help of husband Cliff, following an operation, sent her regrets at not being able to assist "Friend Husband," with the entertaining.

Is Centralization Wise?

Port Elgin, a village on the shores of Lake Huron, is in the throes of a squabble over its police force. The chief of police has been requested by the majority of the town council to resign. He has refused to do so, charging that the request stems from his support for a constable who preferred charges against a friend of one councillor.

The Toronto Globe and Mail, commenting on the case, declares: "The bulk of the sober, sensible citizens in Ontario are in favor of good policing, but that is not what a lot of them get. They do not get it because their police forces are too small and too subject to local political pressure."

That such pressures exist, no knowledgeable person will deny.

The Globe and Mail urges implementing recommendations by Mr. Justice Wilfrid D. Roach and Judge B. J. S. Macdonald for the elimination of local police forces of fewer than 250 members.

Would this be an effective remedy?

Somehow we doubt it. There is no question but that the number of cases in which political pressures were applied would be reduced, but political influence would not be entirely eliminated. In those cases where it was applied, would it not likely be more effective than that exerted locally, on local police forces? We suspect that it would and we offer as support for this view the fact that in the Port Elgin case the police chief is being backed by the mayor and two councillors. Centralization of police powers can be dangerous, precisely for the reason that it diminishes the influence of the ordinary citizen. A corrupt police force in a small town is soon confronted by an aroused citizenry, which is able to protest effectively because the police force is locally controlled. But if the force is merely a small segment of a much larger unit, local opinion may be largely ineffective.

There are things to be said on both sides of this argument. The Globe and Mail has stated the case for centralization. We have attempted to give some of the arguments for the other side. Perhaps, on balance, centralization is desirable —but it is not without its drawbacks and these should be carefully considered by our legislators before recommendations by legal experts are adopted. These recommendations carry weight, because they are made by men of experience with the law, but sometimes experts err because of the fact that they are too close to part of the problem, without having practical experience of the other side. Policemen have a tendency to treat judges with more respect than they sometimes show for the average citizen.

Man Is Strange

Man is sometimes described as a reasoning animal. It is this ability to reason which is said to distinguish him from all the other animals.

Sometimes one would be hard put to it to defend this contention. There are occasions when man seems the least reasonable of animals.

Take the case of Lester Maddox. He is the Atlanta restaurateur who waves pistols and arms his white customers with axe handles to drive Negroes from his door.

The other day he closed his restaurant, because of court action under the Federal civil rights law. He plans to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. Meanwhile 66 employees are out of work. Two thirds of these are Negroes All, he says, will be taken care of as long as "there is a dime in the cheque book."

They probably will, too.

Here is a man who will risk bankruptcy to keep Negroes from paying for services he offers, yet will add to the risk of financial ruin by paying other Negroes in spite of the fact that they are not doing any work.

Bigoted? Yes. But base? Hardly.

Which is what makes the racial strife, in the U.S. and elsewhere, so complex and so difficult to solve. There are good, kind men in both camps, but goodness and kindness are often strangely limited by certain conceptions which appear to others to run contrary to these virtues.

Consider three children born in 1945; one in Toronto, one in Sydney, Australia, and one in London, England. The chance that the Canadian is a full-time university student is about 1 in 6. The chance that the Australian is a full-time university student is about 1 in 9. The chance that the Londoner is a full-time university student is about 1 in 20.—Sir Eric Ashby, Master of Clare College, Cambridge.

The Liberal Inquisition

By Rev. Desmond Bowen
in the United Church Observer

I'm a liberal from way back. I've been on the razing platform with the Red Dean of Canterbury; I've walked the streets of Ottawa to protest the Sharpeville massacre in South Africa; I've spoken at nuclear disarmament rallies; and I join the general resentment of the John Birchite editorial policies which are suppressed in a local community newspaper. Almost instinctively I express righteous indignation over every outbreak of anti-semitism, racism or warmongering that I hear of.

But recently I have begun to be a bit alarmed over the crusading zeal shown by some of my fellow liberals. A local community seems to be becoming professional inquisitors — self-appointed watchdogs over public morality.

For example, the Rev. J. R. Hord, of the United Church's board of evangelism and social service, spoke out a few months ago against the universities in Canada which, in his opinion, condone racial discrimination by allowing landladies to state what type of student they would like to have in the house.

As soon as Mr. Hord made his accusation, the professional liberals took the bit in their teeth. They demanded that university documents be changed, so that they would not be used to record nationality, race, ethnic origin, or religion of any student.

This means that as long as a landlady cannot find out anything about the background of who is sent to her for housing, the university administration can wash its hands of the affair and announce that it has in no way contributed to racial or any other form of discrimination. The newly arrived overseas student can then tramp from boarding house to boarding house to discover for himself what discrimination exists in Canada.

He will find a good deal. Canadian landladies do discriminate. Some will not take a student if they can by means at their disposal to keep out of their homes representatives of the many racial and ethnic groups that are to be found in our society — Africans, Asians, Europeans, Jews, Negroes, Protestants, Jehovah's Witnesses, even French and English.

But this may not be a shocking to the overseas student as some of the professional liberals think. Only those who discriminate, too. He may not want to live in a Jewish home, or an Oriental home, or even in a liberal home!

• • •

The professional liberal tends to ignore the fact that we live in a pluralistic society, with many minority groups. We do not wish to lose their identity and disappear into some kind of secular melting pot.

The melting pot may be the best of all possible worlds to the liberal, but it may not be judged in this fashion by members of minority groups, everywhere they are to be found.

I first began to question the liberal inquisition when resistance to one of the Jehovah Witness community paper came to a climax with the charge that it was anti-semitic. The editorial pressure finally forced the paper to stop commenting on politics and the evils of modern society.

I confess that I was pleased with this at first, because the paper under fire had a habit of using that its fatuous articles represented a Christian viewpoint. But as the weeks went by and I was deprived of my weekly chuckle over the reasoning of the John Birchers about the Communist threat to Canada, I began to have second thoughts about the liberal attitude.

• • •

I never hear the liberals threaten to pressure out of existence the Canadian Tribune, the Communist publication, or a pro-Nazi rag. Yet it says just as harsh things about people in our society as do the John Birchers.

The thought began to plague me that perhaps liberals do not oppose the ideas of all minority groups — perhaps they discriminate only against some of them.

The more I considered this the more I began to come to the conclusion that the professional liberals have an unspoken but well-defined code of public morality, which reveals to them which ideas are to be opposed, and which are to be tolerated.

For example, they know that the magazine market is now being flooded by an undesirable minority of writers and publishers of smut — the hucksters who want to make a fast buck out of the current hysteria. Most liberals would admit that the activities of this group are not socially desirable, but they would oppose any move to censor what it peddles. On the other hand, they would not hesitate to oppose the ideas of a minority group that the liberals choose to label as "bigoted," "reactionary," etc.

• • •

The professional liberals represent a new establishment in our society. They are public moralists who decide what is intellectually and ethically acceptable. And they are quite willing to force their value judgments upon every minority group. They seem to have little regard for the blessings of a pluralistic society.

One of the great tragedies of our times is that this new establishment is really anti-intellectual. Like most old-fashioned liberals it is not big on the conflict of ideas. But the professional liberal really does not want any ideas to stir his public complacency.

I suggest that it is time that the professional liberals stop their witch-hunting of the right have they to force minority groups, or non-conformist individuals, to abide by their social dogma?

Thank God we do have a pluralistic society, that we do have groups of people among us who have their own ideas about the ultimate questions, and who choose to hive off from the rest of us.

I don't fear the ideas of minority groups, but I do fear those of the professional liberals. I suspect that their inquisition is a distinct threat to our pluralistic society.

Strictly Personal
Censorship Takes Total Control of Mind

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

According to a recent article in the German periodical, "Der Spiegel," Carl Foreman, the American film writer and producer, has had trouble with the censors everywhere. Of his latest film, "The Victors," Foreman told an interviewer:

"The French Government demanded that the scene be cut in which French troops shot down Germans who had surrendered with a white flag. The Italians would not stand for a scene in which two Neapolitan children took food from convicts.

"Egypt," he went on, "does not want to see the prisoners' break-out from the concentration camp, for that strikes them as pro-Zionist. The moralists-minded U.S. censors objected to a nude shot of Elke Sommer. As for the Russians, I didn't even trouble to show them — because in one of the scenes there is a rather drunken Red Army officer."

It has always struck me as oddly inconsistent that many of the same people who are so unanimously against government interference with the life of the individual are so unanimously in favor of censorship. They fall so see, or do not want to see, that censorship is the severest device of a repressive government.

If the police are given the power to ban "obscene" books that are deemed injurious to the community, why should they not have the power to ban books that defame God, motherhood and the flag? The pornographers must go, why not the moralists, the cynics, the heretics? And after all, "moral morality" includes much more than sex.

This is precisely what happened in Russia. Any work of art that smacks even faintly of "bourgeois corruption" is given the official ax. Even composers must rigidly follow the party line. The Russians don't mind sex half as much as we do, but they certainly hate to see a naked mind at work.

Actually, censorship and seduction are opposite sides of the same coin. The censor will not stop until he has taken total possession of what he wants; little by little, he makes all free encroachments. In the same way, censorship moves in by drips and drabs, and we cannot be content with limited goals, it must take total control of men's minds. The philosophy cannot be puritan are both wholly immoderate creatures.

Besides, I wonder if our American obsession with sex (both pro and con) is not really a displacement of what should be our real concerns — the basic immorality in our person-to-person relations with one another. So long as we can feel "moral" in the sex department, we feel no responsibility for the broader and deeper areas of injustice in our social life.

Dollar Key To Unity

Stratford Beacon-Herald

One standard item in this country that is completely and exactly bilingual, is the dollar bill. Any reader who is fortunate enough to have at least one of them in his possession can easily verify, by reaching in his pocket, that the word "One" on the design there is as "Un" for every "Banque' in the dollars printed message and for "Bank." and the promise to "Pay To The Bearer On Demand" is exactly balanced by the promise to "Faiera Au Prieur Sur Demande."

It is a good point to keep in mind, any time the emotional noises about Quebec separatism seem to be getting rather loud.

A Canadian dollar is a Canadian dollar, in either language. There is a great deal more real respect for the value of a dollar, among Canadians of either language, than there is among English - speaking Canadians who say they would like to get rid of it. It would be a step up and down if they noticed that making Canada smaller would hurt the up and down Canadians more than it would most of the noisy French speaking Canadians who talk about secession and leaving Quebec out of Confederation.

In the English-speaking world it is a little odd that the French as being cautious and careful with a dollar. The thrifty Scots are spendthrifts by comparison with the long-headed Normans. There is no more practical and business like race of people on earth than the farmers and the townsmen of Normandy and the adjacent regions of Northern France. They can squeeze a coin until it squeals.

The basic stock of English-speaking Canada contains a strong core of frugal Scots and frugal Hessians and frugal Ulstermen. It should not be forgotten that the United Empire Loyalist Province of Canada came from Normandy, Picardy and the Ile de France, a part of the world where the greatest sin is to waste a sou that might have been saved.

A Canadian named Jean-Louis Lachance quite down just as fast as a Canadian named Dougal McDougall, if you show him that keeping Canada together makes more dollars than tearing Canda apart. Emotion is a powerful force, but on either side of the Ottawa River, regard for wages and profits is likely to be stronger.

There aren't many Canadians, of either language group, who won't put down a flag to pick up a dollar.

To Your Good Health
Avoid Rough Foods Which Irritate Spastic Colon

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a spastic colon and was told not to eat rough foods. Which ones are they? — M. L.

Your goal is to avoid foods which will irritate the colon, and that means two main categories.

One is the group which contains a lot of roughage, or fibres or particles which are reduced to a soft state by the time they reach the colon. The other consists of foods which have laxative properties — that is, they act on the colon so as to stimulate it into action.

The roughage or high residue foods include nuts, corn, bran, cabbage, broccoli, parsnips, turnips, lettuce, celery, radishes, raw pineapple and cucumbers.

You will note that these in general have vegetable fibres, or cellulose which will not digest easily.

For most of us, a certain amount of this roughage does no harm, and indeed, helps keep the bowel active and adequately busy eliminating wastes.

When one has colitis, the bowel is too "nervous" and sensitive and needs to be kept calm instead of stirred up. So you avoid such foods with a residue of roughage.

Foods with laxative properties would include prunes, figs, rhubarb, berries, whole sections of citrus fruits (the kind you eat right, however,) and pineapple.

Cooking in general softens the fibres of most vegetables and fruits, or if not, they can be strained or pureed. (With berries, however, you certainly must remove the seeds; cooking doesn't soften them.)

Any number of cereals (barring those containing bran) are easily tolerated. They may be crispy and crunchy in the dry but they soften nicely after they have been eaten; corn, rice wheat and oat products are fine. They don't have to be as soft as cruel when you eat them.

Alcoholic beverages (including beer) may be very irritating, to a spastic colon. Be cautious!

The foregoing lists are by no means complete, but they give you an idea of what to avoid and what you may safely eat.

Because cooking softens vegetable fibres, you will find many that you can eat cooked (and perhaps strained) but not raw.

Dear Dr. Molner: My hands used to be bothered by dishwashing detergents. I changed creams. My hands cleared up in a few days. — M. J.

What's good for one person can be bad for another. Changing brands, or discontinuing detergents to soaps, or vice versa, and the use of hand creams to soothe irritated skin, is the answer for many women. But they'll have to find out by trial and error what suits them.

Note to Mrs. A. L. F.: The sun-tan creams are not, to the best of my knowledge (and that of Food and Drug Administration) harmful. Two things are involved. One is a chemical which darkens the pigment in the superficial layers of skin. This does the "tanning." The other (the new ingredient) is included is a material which filters the ultra-violet rays, permitting slow sun-tanning to occur. But people still have to use good judgment. Nothing will prevent burning if you have a sensitive skin and stay in the sun too long.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it by reading the booklet, "The Way To Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 136, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope, and 10 cents in coin to cover printing and handling.

Strange Idea About Roads

Montreal Gazette

A strange idea seems to be growing that any one who wish to make a demonstration for some alleged grievance or other may set themselves up on the highway and block traffic.

On Sunday a group of some 100 men, women and children blocked the Laurentian Autoroute for 30 minutes. They used this method to emphasize their demand for an overpass across the highway for the town of Provost, 35 miles north of Montreal.

In the same spirit the Quebec Truckers Union had threatened to throw a blockade across Route 9 from Lake St. Louis South Shore highway between Montreal and Quebec, at a point about 30 miles south-west of Quebec City. They were to use this blockade to back up demands regarding contractual rights through the Roads Department of the Quebec Government.

The union has now become "satisfied in principle" with the terms of a deal worked out with the Roads Department and the blockade has been called off. But if there had not been satisfaction, the inconvenience to the whole travelling public on the South Shore highway near Quebec would have been indefinitely obstructed, no matter how urgent their business might have been.

There is also that fact that some "peace demonstrators" have taken the view that they have the right to block roads leading to certain installations of which they do not happen to approve.

If this sort of practice is allowed to grow, any highway may be blocked at any time. Some group will have a grievance of some kind against somebody. Those making such demonstrations may or may not be justified in their grievances. But massive illegality is not a permissible way for any group to seek its end.

The highways have to be kept open to all on their lawful business.

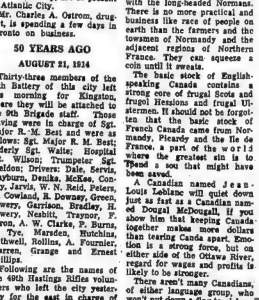
Hitler launched a 10-year peace pact with Russia 25 years ago today—in 1939. Hitler had long feared that should he go to war with Britain he would leave his eastern flank unprotected. He needed the assurance of peace from Russia before making Canada's cause he thought might lead to war. Less than a year after the pact was signed Germany, 23, Hiller attacked Russia, by which time the Fuehrer felt strong enough to tackle war on both his eastern and western borders.

1944—Paris residents began an uprising against German troops occupying the city.



1953 — Hawaii was proclaimed the 50th U.S. State.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP)—Prices were higher on index on the stock market today, but there was an undercue of weakness.

In the industrial list, Aluminium gained ¼ to 31¼, Dofasco ¼ to 24 and Royal Bank ¼ to 79¼. Massey - Ferguson dipped ¼ to 29¾.

Speculative mining issues generated some steam. Magnet advanced .1¼ to 1.95¼ cents on turnover of more than 300,000 shares. MacDonald was up two cents to 28 cents while Baptist and Windfall fell two cents each to 21.97 and .97 cents respectively.

In western oils, Calgary and Edmonton and Canadian Superior were ahead ¼ each to 24 and 21 while Husky tacked on ¼ to 10¾.

Base metals were fractionally higher. Hudson Bay added ¼ to 69 while Noranda was up ¼ to 48¾.

On index, industrials were up .24 to 150.67, golds were unchanged at 135.37, base metals were up .01 to 67.69, western oils .27 to 96.30 and the Exchange index .23 to 149.94. Volume at 11 a.m. was 1,120,000 shares compared with 816,000 shares traded at the same time Thursday.

Prices moved lower in moderate trading Thursday.

Golds made an insignificant advance while industrials, base metals and western oils took modest losses.

There was some selective support in the industrial list with Massey - Ferguson ahead 3/4 to 29. After the close the company announced that earnings in the first nine months of 1964 were more than double those of the same period of 1963. Moore Corp. added 1 to 53¼ and Calgary Power ½ to 24¼.

Noranda advanced ¼ to 47¾ on speculation (later denied) that the Quebec government will offer about $22 a share for all the outstanding Donco shares.

Another industrial feature was a block of 62,800 shares of S. K. D. Manufacturing which crossed the tape at 24.75. This constitutes almost one-quarter of S. K. D.'s outstanding common stock, but control of the company did not change hands on the transaction.

Banks led industrials to the downside with Nova Scotia off ¾ to 77¾, Montreal ¼ to 69¼ and Toronto - Dominion ¼ to 69¼.

Speculative mining issues trended higher although at the close gains in most stocks had been pegged back to fractional on six cents to $1.99, Magnet four to 17 cents, Golf two to 24 cents and Windfall two to 59 cents.

Base-metals fell to profit taking. Falconbridge slipped ¼ to $5.40 and Hudson Bay eased ¼ to $8.80. Rio Algom steadied 10 cents to $9.80.

Golds were quiet. Dome advanced ¼ to 30¼.

Teamsters Stick by Hoffa During Appeals

MIAMI BEACH, FL. (AP)— The Teamsters union executive council says it will stick by President James R. Hoffa while his appeals from convictions on federal charges.

A statement issued by the council Thursday after a closed session said Hoffa is innocent until he has exhausted his legal rights and the union will do nothing to deprive him of these rights.

The statement did not say what would happen if the convictions are upheld.

Hoffa said she statement was "very gratifying to me. It is positive, living proof of no dissension in the union."

Harold Gibbons, who resigned last December as a top personal aide to Hoffa but remained as a union vice-president, read the statement to reporters. He said he saw no significance in the omission of any declaration of confidence.

He also said he knew of no meeting scheduled with Hoffa.

The meeting was the first for the council since Hoffa was convicted of attempted jury tampering in Chattanooga, Tenn., and of conspiracy to defraud the Teamsters pension fund in Chicago. He has been sentenced to a total of 13 years.

Hoffa said the statement had nothing to do with the controversy about who is going to pay legal expenses. He said he expected that issue to be settled in court. More than 300 council officials members have filed suit seeking recovery of union money spent for Hoffa's defence.

Start Probe On Testimony 'That Leaked'

WASHINGTON (AP) —The special commission investigating the assassination of the late president John Kennedy said Thursday a federal investigation has been started into the "premature publication" of some testimony to the commission.

J. Lee Rankin, general counsel for the commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, disclosed the investigation by releasing copies of a telegram he sent to a California newspaper editor.

The text of testimony given by Jack Ruby in the Dallas, Texas, jail.

The New York Journal-American has been carrying under a copyright a verbatim transcript of some of Ruby's testimony.

The Journal - American account carries the byline of columnist Dorothy Kilgallen, who said she obtained the transcript "through sources close to the commission in Washington."

The Dallas Times-Herald also published an article quoting some of the same testimony.

Ruby is under conviction here for the fatal shooting of Lee Harvey Oswald, who had been arrested and charged with killing Kennedy in Dallas last November.

Teen-agers Mob Centre Where Beatles Play

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Screaming teen-agers mobbed the Las Vegas Convention Centre Thursday night as the Beatles invaded this southern Nevada desert resort.

All 7,200 seats were sold out for both performances here.

Youngsters crowded outside the quartet's hotel rooms all day. Juvanille probation chief Robert E. Mullen warned the fans he would enforce a 10 p.m. curfew for those under 16 years, even though the Beatles' second show wouldn't end until after that hour. Juvenile Judge William Compton agreed with Mullen but said the youngsters could stay later if they were with parents or guardians.

The Beatles were flown into the old McCarran field terminal and taken downtown in limousines with lights turned off. A half-dozen youth shrobe police lines at the hotel. No guns were chased off by officers.

Reuther offered newspaper photographer Terry Fincher of the Review-Journal $10 for the electronic flash—and therefore unacceptable."

Spokesmen for the three auto companies had no comment on the union's action in postponing its selection of a strike target until next week.

When the economic proposal was made, Malcolm Denise, Ford vice-president for labor relations, termed it the "most generous we've ever made to the UAW."

And Louis Seaton, GM vice president in charge of personnel, said the proposed new contract was sound and forward looking, realistically meeting "the needs of our employees, our own business, and the nation's economy."

Reuther said next Wednesday's meeting in Detroit of the union's 24-member international executive board would review the status of negotiations at that time and receive reports on strike votes now being taken among workers at each company.

Then, if necessary, the board will select a strike target from among the Big Three. In 1961, the target was GM. In 1955 and 1958, it was Ford.

Present UAW contracts with GM, Ford and Chrysler expire Aug. 31.

In their parallel package proposals, the Big Three offered pay increases ranging from 18 to 36 cents an hour over a three-year period and a boost in pensions ranging from $2.80 a month for each year of service to $3.25.

They also proposed making 60 years the normal retirement age rather than 65.

Auto Industry Notified Strike May Come Next Week

DETROIT (AP)—Notice has been served on the U.S. auto industry that a strike will be scheduled next week against General Motors, Ford or Chrysler if negotiations for a new labor contract remain stalemated.

United Auto Workers Union officials declined Thursday in Chicago to defer until next Wednesday at a special meeting in Detroit the question of whether to authorize a strike at one of the U.S. automotive industry's Big Three.

"If the companies persist in their present offers, there will be a strike," said UAW President Walter P Reuther.

Reuther was referring to virtually identical economic package proposals made last Monday by the auto companies.

The offer provided for higher wages, earlier retirement and larger pensions for more than 500,000 UAW members at auto motive plants around the U.S.

Reuther promptly branded the proposals "miserably inadequate" by union leaders.

Reuther categorized the Big Three proposals as "unfair, inadequate, unrealistic and inequitable—and therefore unacceptable."

Spokesmen for the three auto companies had no comment on the union's action in postponing its selection of a strike target until next week.

let's talk "cents" about entertaining!

Nearly everybody likes to entertain. And everybody wants to be considered a good host or hostess.

Problem is that a family income budgeted for mortgage, car payments, insurance and other fixed expenses won't stand big entertainment bills. It doesn't make economic sense.

So what to do —when you know that among your guests some prefer gin, others rye, vodka, rum, sherry or beer—and your budget won't stand such an assortment?

Here's the solution that will delight everyone—and keep your entertainment cost at a minimum—

Buy just one Liquor: A special brand of extra light rum. Its name: TROPICANA. Made by Wood's, who have been distilling fine rums for over 75 years . . . And what's special about TROPICANA?

It's so versatile, it's practically a one-brand bar! Besides being a superior light rum by itself, your guests will enjoy it in any rum drink imaginable.

It makes delightful versions of almost any drink you can name! Just try TROPICANA with three or four quite different mixes. You'll realize you're on to something good!

Tropi-cola, for instance! Lots of people have already discovered Tropi-cola. They will be delighted with your Tropicana and Ginger, Tropicana and Tonic, Tropicana and Bitter Lemon, or what will you have!

"A refreshing change" . . . "a delightful idea" . . . "mighty satisfying" . . . With TROPICANA your reputation is established . . . and your budget saved!

Marlon Brando's Double Sounds a 'False Note'

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This letter is no gag. I'm dead serious and I need some help. I look like Marlon Brando and it's ruining my life.

I'm 30 years old, happily married and the father of three children. I'm a steady churchgoer.

The girl who runs the elevator in this building takes me down to the basement, pushes the stop button and tries to get friendly. The baby sitter keeps asking me to kiss her goodnight when I drive her home because I am so "mature" and she is sick of high school boys.

ANN LANDERS

When I stop at a lunch counter, women come over and ask for my autograph. I tell them they are mistaken but they sit down anyway and want to get acquainted.

Yesterday my wife saw me having a cup of coffee with a beautiful young girl from the office who has been making a pest of herself lately. I may be in a little trouble at home. Please give me some help. — CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

* * *

DEAR CASE — Why don't you arm yourself with a whip and a chair — or wear goggles and a Beetle wig?

A thirty - year - old married man doesn't want to get mixed up with dames knows how to steer clear without any help from me, so put that show on the road, Dad.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — There are five children in our family and I am the last to be married. Father is not wealthy, but he has provided well for us and is extremely generous.

When my brothers and sisters married he gave each a sum of money to help them get started. The oldest brother used his money to return to college for a master's degree. The second brother made a down - payment on a beautiful bungalow. My sisters bought furniture.

The problem is my fiance. He does not believe in accepting money from parents. I have great respect for his spirit of independence, but I also feel I'm entitled to the same amount my brothers and sisters received.

Will you give us your opinion, please? — NO ORPHAN ME.

* * *

DEAR NO ORPHAN YOU — It seems clear these sums of money have been wedding gifts. Your fiance should not insult your father by refusing to accept such a gift.

After marriage, however, your fiance would be perfectly justified if he refused to accept money from your father — And I say more power to him.

* * *

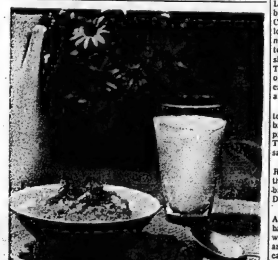
DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'll make it short and sweet. I'm a liar. I met this dreamy guy a few months ago at a resort. I told him I was a high school junior. The truth is I'm only a freshman. He was in college and I was dying to make a hit with him. I thought it would help if he believed I was a junior.

He is coming to this city in a few weeks and I'm afraid he will find out the truth.

Should I tell him I was sick in the hospital for two years? Or would it be better if I told him my folks took me on a trip around the world and I missed a lot of school?

I will straighten out the lie about my age later. I said I was 17 and I am really 15. Right now I want to square this thing about being two years behind in school. The truth is I am right where I ought to be. — HEAP BIG TROUBLES.

* * *



DEAR HEAP — You've where you ought to be all right — out on a limb with a nice sharp saw.

That's the trouble with a lie — you usually have to tell six more to cover up the first one. Confess that you fibbed because you wanted to impress him and do it promptly before someone beats you to it. Tell him from now on you're going to play it straight. And for heaven's sake do it.

MR. AND MRS. GARFIELD DENIS LOCKE

Locke – Cross

Baskets of assorted summer flowers decorated Roslin United Church for the wedding of Sarah Jane Cross of Roslin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cross to Garfield (Gary) Denis Locke of Belleville, son of Sgt. and Mrs. Denis Locke.

Rev. R. A. Sinclair, assisted by Mr. Ross Manthorpe performed the double ring ceremony. The organist was Mr. Newton Bemille of Shannonville, and the soloist was Mr. Jack Clarke of Corbyville, both brothers-in-law of the bride.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of French chantilly lace with scalloped tiers of lace which flowed out to form a full skirt in mid-Victorian styling. The gown was underlined with illusion net to give it a rich fullness as it fell into a small back train. Traditional long sleeves came to a point at the wrists and a scalloped lace neckline enhanced the beauty of the gown. Her headdress was a circlet of flowers holding a tiered veil, and she carried a bouquet of red sweetheart roses and trailing ivy.

Matron of honour was Mrs. George Beer, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Jack Clarke, Mrs. Newton Demille, sisters of the bride and Miss Elma Hart. Their gowns were fashioned alike of nylon organza over taffeta in coral, blue, yellow and green. The soft fullness of the skirts was enchanced by a fitted cummerbund waistline, and they had high round necklines with short sleeved bouffant jackets. Their flowers were chrysanthemums tinted to match the individual dresses.

The flower girls were Miss Laurie Andrews, cousin of the bridegroom, and Miss Carolyn Cross, niece of the bride. They looked charming in their white nylon organza dresses with fitted bodice and knee length full skirts, white shoes and gloves. They wore white ribbon bands on their bun - style hair, and carried baskets of white mums and ferns.

The ring bearers were Master Barry Beer, nephew of the bride, and Master Kenneth Topping, cousin of the bridegroom. They carried the rings on white satin heart - shaped pillows.

Groomsman was Mr. David Rosenplote of Belleville and the ushers were brothers of the bride, Mr. Earl Cross and Mr. Don Cross, both of Roslin.

For the reception at Roslin Anglican Church hall the bride's table was decorated with pink and white streamers and wedding bells. A wedding cake trimmed with pink and white roses with silver leaves was topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom under an arch of flowers. The bridal bouquets completed the setting.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a light blue lace sheath with three-quarter length lace coat, white accessories and corsage of pink carnations.

The young couple left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and surrounding district with the bride wearing a two-piece pink lace suit, white accessories and matching corsage of pink and white carnations.

Out-of-town guests attended the wedding from Hamilton, Hagersville, Detroit, Kingston, Toronto, Bancroft, Bannockburn, Shannonville, Corbyville, Marysville, Sudbury and Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Locke will reside on Haig Road, Belleville.

Showers honouring the bride were given at Point Anne Parish hall by Mrs. Jack Andrews, Mrs. Milton Akey and Miss Leonard Reid; and at the home of Mrs. John Hart. Roslin with Miss Elmer Hart, Mrs. John Hart and Miss Barbara Simpson as co-hostesses.

University Women to Present Brief

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Federation of University Women decided Thursday to submit a brief to the federal royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

The CFUW triennial conference voted in favor of making a submission based on replies by member clubs to a questionnaire on the subject. The brief will include a resolution to promote the teaching of French or English as a second language in lower elementary school grades.

Mrs. Lillian Stansford of Renfrew, Ont., chairman of the federation's administrative procedure committee, reported that 62 clubs favored the extension of French teaching to lower grades. None were opposed.

She also reported that members felt it would be better for the federation to support existing exchange programs between French- and English - speaking students in Canada than to start a program of its own.

The conference — attended by 300 delegates representing 11,000 members in Canada — referred to its centenary committee a proposal submitted by the Quebec City club to establish travelling fellowships for the exchange of views and opinions among different regions and cultural groups in the country.

Hugh H. Saunderson president of the University of Manitoba, told a CFUW dinner that development of junior colleges to handle Canada's growing university population is almost certain. He said that without junior colleges between high schools and universities, the universities would have to lower their standards to suit students not of true university calibre.

French Praise La Difference, Couturiers Busy Reducing It

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Paradoxically, while Frenchmen glory in la difference, French couturiers are diminishing it by decreeing trousers and more trousers for women.

During a fashion year in which near-nudity also is the vogue, sociologists, fashion historians and designers, too, are pondering the significance of this seemingly masculine trend in the Paris collections just introduced.

Will the eggs of man withstand this Style thievery, as it has survived the long pants competition in-pired by actress Marlene Dietrich?

Or is fashion now about to shift its emphasis toward making the male more than the female — more attractive, a possibility recently suggested by an English-style historian?

CREATE 2-TROUSER SUITS

A year ago the dean of U.S. couturiers Norman Norell, created tiered dinner suits for travel" only. Their success prompted him to add more to his collection this season, even though he admits he personally is not fond of long trousers on women.

So many women bought and wore Norell's pants that other U.S. designers took to adorning them too, for travel, or anything.

Then in Paris the e last few weeks Andre Courreges, Pierre Cardin, Jacques Esterel, Coco Chanel, Balenciaga — almost every couturier but a stubborn young Yves St. Laurent — brought forth tight - legged or bell-bottomed, hip-slung or high-waisted, trousered or unwaisted long pants in every fabric from flannel to lace.

In London, fashion historian James Laver told a trade publication:

"It is typical of a matriarchy when the sexes get very close together in clothes. Women being the breadwinners now can afford to choose husbands who attract them as men, not as providers. Men, therefore, could begin to dress for physical attraction."

DE-MYSTIFY SEX

That seeming feminine extreme in physical attraction the bared bosoms trend, had prompted Laver to sneak up. The trousers trend does not contradict this vogue, he said in effect, because women are subconsciously playing down their sex by de-mystifying it.

"Females can't find a dominant male anymore," is the reason why women are wearing the long pants, in the opinion of Michigan State University sociologist David Gottlieb.

The ogre destroying masculinity, he contends is modern society's worshipfulness of the organization man with his clean fingernails and white collar.

"He smells nice, never sweats (only perspires), and surrenders his young sons to a world of females."

DESIGN FOR DIETRICH

In 1933, when the emancipated woman was not the threat she appears to be now, U.S. designer Anthony Blotta created those famous grey flannel trousers for Marlene Dietrich.

But today, in the height of their popularity, he refuses to make them.

"Today's designers have no other ideas but gimmicks," he says, "and the first gimmick is to confuse a woman by making her look like something else."

An exception among the French fashion houses is a disciple of the late Christian Dior, Yves St. Laurent. He has refused to join the trousering herd.

"Too much of fashion is based on the concept of the American woman who dominates the male," he told the press. He know—I started with that sailor's pea jacket. Now it's fashed for me. No more gimmicks."

Deaf People Slowly Drop Two-Handed Talking Method

DEAR DORIS — About your answer to the fellow who wanted to converse with his deaf barber. You suggested he learn finger spelling, and explained that each finger represents a vowel.

I take it you are talking about the two-handed finger spelling. Some deaf people still use this system, but they are far outnumbered by those of us who spell out words on the fingers of one hand instead of two.

The popularity of the one-handed system can be easily understood if you have ever tried to converse, using the two-handed alphabet, while holding on to a teacup or an armful of packages.

Then next comes our more complicated system of sign language, in which each gesture represents a word. Faster but a lot to learn! — FINGERS

* * *

Thank You, Fingers!

I'm the one who is behind. My deaf cousins talk on one hand (apiece) fast enough for anybody; but will gracefously and laboriously slow down to a walk, on two hands, to include me in their conversation.

They do some lip reading, too; but this, I'm told, leaves gaps in the understanding of most deaf people.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — We are living in a part of my husband's parents' house. His mother is a sickly person. I do what I can to help her out, but when anyone comes in to talk she tells them I don't do anything for her. I have four children to do for besides my husband and myself.

I told my husband this morning I couldn't take much more, and the answer he made was: "You can leave if you like." I would, believe me, if it weren't for the children. I've been living with this for 20 years. — END OF MY ROPE.

* * *

DEAR END — You work too hard, your ma-in-law complains, and they all take you for granted. I know.

But your husband — does he hear nothing but complaints from women? His response shows quite a bit of impatience. Somebody is going to have to take a new approach. Could it be you?

Make it a game to have your children help. When a visitor comes, have your daughter serve tea. Try to find room in your life for some love and good fellowship. And turn a deaf ear to complaints. The young ones are worth it!

* * *

(Put it on paper to Doris. And remember that stamped envelope!)

Come a Long Way Since Birth of the Telescope

By JACK HUTTON

A Dutch man was trying to point out the steeple of a neighborhood church for friends about 350 years ago when a small miracle happened in front of his eyes.

He was holding a "spectacle" lens in either hand, squinting at the church. But when he held one lens behind the other a certain way the steeple suddenly seemed closer.

We've come a long way since the accidental birth of the telescope, a journey that has created — and exploded — countless theories about our universe. But some feel we've just started.

If someone could roll back a couple of years for me this summer, I think I'd seriously think about tackling a science that will answer several important questions in our lifetime — astronomy.

My enthusiasm, I freely admit, was fired this week by watching a TV program in which astronomers discussed the problems facing their science. At the end of one hour, I rated it the best TV one of the year, mainly because of its honesty.

SCIENTISTS BAFFLED

The scientists freely admitted they are still baffled by two questions. Has our universe always existed? And does life exist on other planets somewhere in the universe?

Scientists argue loudly about that first question. Some believe the universe has always existed (something I confess I just can't grasp) while others believe a unique explosion created the universe at a definite point in time.

(That latter argument, by the way, is commonly known as the "Big Bang" theory. Indeed, it must have been.)

Does life exist elsewhere? Years ago my teachers dismissed this possibility as something out of space fiction. Today most astronomers agree that it probably does. But where?

The most probably candidate, according to many scientists, is Mars, a planet which revolves between about 35,000,000 and 63,000,000 miles from us. (It's most easily seen with the naked eye this month).

But if scientists who believe the universe has always existed are right, that increases the chances of life as we know it existing elsewhere in the universe. A spine-tingling thought.

MAY HAVE ANSWERS

What intrigued me most was not the statement of the two main questions. We've all heard them before. But every one of the scientists interviewed predicted we will have answers before the end o. this century.

I realize the astronomer who has read this far is shaking his head right now, muttering, "It's not, that romantic." True, behind any new step in science lie countless hours of drudgery, analyzing specimens, adding up figures and finding nowhere.

But that doesn't hide the lure of answers still hidden from us. Who would have believed 20 years ago that man - made worlds would be accepted as above us?

Who would have believed that millions of people would sit calmly in their livingrooms, as calmly watching scientists explain how they had just catapulted a crew through space to the moon. And Ranger 7 did not just land: it sent back pictures to prove it.

What's next?

If I had my choice all over again, I'd be thinking about astronomy, the one profession you can pick in which the sky isn't the limit.

MANIAC DRIVERS

My beef column on weekend maniac drivers drew a heavy response, all from people who couldn't agree more emphatically that a minority of screwballs give the majority of sensible teen-age drivers a bad image.

These same screwballs are responsible for the high insurance rates you pay during the first years of driving.

Mrs. M. N. R. of Vancouver summed it up for many others: "Thanks for saying what a lot of us believe but wouldn't have nerve enough to say. As far as I'm concerned, policemen should have the right to haul dangerous drivers off the road and force them to take training."

"It's a tragedy that most teen-age drivers are cautious and intelligent behind the wheel but have to shoulder the views handed out to the minority who attract the headlines. Let's give police authority to take that minority off the road."

We'll have more to say on this subject in a later column.

Sunday School Lesson

Right Kind of Obedience

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

In an interesting book on child guidance "Does Your Child Obey?" Regina Wieman, Wichteli, Clark and Co., New York, 1940), Mrs. Regina Wieman points out that there are two kinds of obedience: servile obedience, or the "Scrooge-Hitler" type, and creative obedience. The first is a kind of dictator demands obedience so he can control his subjects. A parent requires obedience as a means of guiding his child.

We all have what Mrs. Wieman calls our "have-to's". We have to obey the law if we want to stay out of trouble. We have to obey the doctor if we want to get well. We have to obey the rules of a game if we want to be a good athlete, or the disciplines of study if we want to be a scholar. The important thing is to know what we must obey to achieve the right goals. We must obey the laws of health if we want to stay healthy. We must obey the laws of self-discipline if we want to grow in character and maintain self-respect.

GOD A FATHER, NOT DICTATOR

God does not demand our obedience as a Dictator, but as a Father. He knows what we must obey in order to achieve worthwhile objectives. And so He said to the Israelites, "You shall therefore keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that you may be strong, and go in and take possession of the land which you are going over to possess." (Deuteronomy 11:8 RSV) Moses specifically tells his people that it is for their own good that they should obey the Lord.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for August 23: "A New Call for Faithfulness (Temperance), Deuteronomy 1:8 through 11.

Israel stood on the verge of a great advance. Behind them lay 40 dreary years in the desert following their liberation from Egypt. Ahead of them lay the promised fields and valleys. If, under the trying conditions of desert living, they had been stubborn and forgetful of God's providence, a fact of which Moses often reminded them, what would they do when they began to enjoy prosperity in Canaan, and became surrounded with false religions? So Moses warned them. "When the Lord your God brings you into the land which He swore to your fathers ...to give you, with great and goodly cities, which you did not build, and houses full of good things which you did not fill ... then take heed lest you forget the Lord, who brought you out of the land of Egypt." Deuteronomy 6:10-12 RSV)

FROM RAGS TO RICHES

Many a person has made promises to God in times of adversity only to forget them in times of prosperity. The proverb writer shows great insight when he prayed, "Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with the food that is needful for me, lest I be full, and deny thee, and say, 'Who is the Lord?' or lest I be poor, and steal, and profane the name of my God." (Proverbs 30:8-9 RSV)

This is the problem. Poverty and adversity often breed discontent and delinquency. Wealth on the other hand, can lead to self-sufficiency. Adversity can make us rai- nst God; prosperity can m- us forget Him. In trouble, we often cry to God, if only to complain. In ease and comfort, we tend to ignore Him, forgetting that only through obedience to Him can men know moral greatness.

If ever a nation needed to heed this warning, it is the United States. America is rich and powerful. It would be easy for Americans to boast, "My power and the might of my hand have gotten me this wealth" forgetting, as Moses put it, that it is God who gives you power to get wealth." (Deuteronomy 8:17-18 RSV) He put the minerals in the earth. He gave us intelligence and skills. He made the laws by which the universe is run, and by which men must learn to live together.

But men do not absorb knowledge of the laws of God by osmosis. They must be taught. And so Moses calls the people to supreme faithfulness to God, and urges them to teach their children to do likewise. In a passage known as the "shema," he says, "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is one Lord; and you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your might." (Deuteronomy 6:4 RSV)

This is one of the great verses in scripture. Along with Leviticus 19:18, Jesus considered it the greatest of all commandments (Mark 12:29 - 31) The people of Israel were not only to obey the commandment, they were to keep it in mind continually, and teach it to their children. As reminders they were to bind it about their arms and even wear it as frontlet on their foreheads. For it would be a tragedy if they possessed the land and then proved unworthy of the trust God had placed in them. Only as they did His bidding would they demonstrate faithfulness to match the fertility of the land, and character to match the crusade to which they were called.

Armed Robbery Charges Are Adjourned

OTTAWA (CP) — The preliminary hearing on a charge of armed robbery against Levesque, (Pretty Boy) Levesque, 25, was adjourned Thursday until Sept. 10.

Levesque, alleged leader of a gang of hooded bandits blamed for about 100 robberies in Quebec and eastern Ontario, was charged specifically with a $40,000 robbery Nov. 9 at the home of Herbert Plant, 71. Another charge of armed robbery and one of rape in the Ottawa area are pending against Levesque.

Montreal jeweller Marcel Leduc and his assistant, Gaston Laliberte, testified that Levesque brought jewellery to Leduc's St. Catherines Street store Nov. 13 to have diamonds removed from settings. The jewels are alleged to be those taken from Mr. Plant's home.

The only other witness heard Thursday was Mr. Plant who identified jewellery remnants as being those stolen from his home when three hooded bandits terrorized him and his wife.

Levesque, who is being guarded closely since his escape from jail in Montreal earlier this year, is to appear at Chicoutimi, Que., on another charge connected with the hooded gang activities before he reappears in court here Sept. 10.

BILL BECOMES LAW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson signed into law Thursday a $947,500,000 anti-poverty bill intended to improve living conditions for millions of Americans. They mean a wrack up a bundle of programs designed to give jobs to idle youths, help low-income families get off relief and provide literacy and job training.

Elliot Lake Mine Closures Terrible Shock to Miners, Families, Says Union Man

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP)— There is a lot of bitterness choking people of this boom-to-bust uranium city of secure.

Less than 10 years ago, the town was born out of the bush and grew to 30,000 population on the basis of one of the world's richest known bodies of uranium ore. Less than five years ago, the collapse started after the United States did not renew its contracts to buy the uranium.

By the end of this year, two mines—Milliken and Stanrock—will be added to the eight others that have closed.

Another, Consolidated Denison, had been expected to cease working, but it received a last-minute reprieve when it got a one-year production contract. It is expected, however, to reduce its working force by about half to 500 men.

That will leave only Rio Algom's Nordic mine operating when it closes in August.

These closures have come at a terrible shock to Elliot Lake miners and their families, says Alcide Brunet, international representative of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC).

SLAP IN FACE

"People came here to put down roots. They were given the impression that the jobs were permanent — the government was involved in the contracts for schools, for low-cost housing, in planning the whole town.

"Then they're told the mines are closing and it's like a slap in the face.

"How would you feel if you were 40 or 45 and you had to come home and tell your wife and kids they had to leave their friends while you tried to find another job?"

Mrs. Ernie MacGregor whose husband is one of the men who found the uranium with another year's work at Denison when the extended contract was awarded, said: "We have mixed feelings about the new life.

"My husband's not too young —he's a veteran—and since the extension is only a year, all it means is that he'll be a year older when he has to look for work somewhere else and it will be just that much harder. "It's only postponing the matter."

TRY NOT TO WORRY

She says the atmosphere around the town for the last four years, as one mine after another closed, has had an unsettling effect on children, too.

"I try not to worry too much, but we have a hard time to get a job unless you're on the spot. Some towns have unemployed men but it is very difficult for an outsider to take a job away from them."

Mrs. John Atkinson, who like Mrs. MacGregor came to Elliot Lake in 1957, says her family liked the town and didn't want to have to pull up roots.

But her husband had got his work at the Milliken mine and, she says, "we can't wait forever, we have children to feed.

The Atkinsons have four children, two who had attended Elliot Lake's spanking modern schools, and they didn't want to leave their friends.

"We liked Elliot Lake very much," says Mrs. Atkinson wistfully. "But we got used to the idea of leaving. I guess you can get used to most anything, can't you?"

Mr. Brunet says many people feel they've been used as pawns in a power-play between governments and between companies.

MINES WILL REOPEN

He says some mines could have been kept open, but were closed because the price of uranium has sagged.

"It'll come back, and then watch the mines open They could have kept more mines going—there's no doubt of that, no doubt at all."

At one mine, he says, the workers were assured operations would continue at least until 1966. "Three weeks later they were told the mine was closing. So no wonder people don't know what to do."

Jim Sisson is the young, crew - cut, capable and ex tremely friendly sales manager of one of the Elliot Lake car dealers.

"If I thought the next few years would be as bad as the last three," he says, "I'd leave. And I really like Elliot Lake.

"But you can't stay in an air of depression. It gets you down and eventually you stagnate."

Like many other residents of Elliot Lake, However, Mr. Sisson figures things have sunk about as low as they can, and everything has to move up now.

IN GOOD SPIRITS

"People have really got good spirit here," he says "They like their town and even though they've only lived here for a few years they believe in it." However, Jack Gauthier, another businessman who works on about a dozen various committees considering plans to tide Elliot Lake's economy over to when uranium is king again, is more brutally realistic.

"Everyone is looking for a great big piece of pie from the sky. Well, it isn't going to come.

"Personally I see a very serious depression. The town will virtually collapse. If it collapses on a solid foundation it can be built back up.

"But it's going to take every-one-5' efforts—the federal government, the provincial government and the people themselves, to do it."

Prime Minister Enjoys Cheese At Breakfast

OTTAWA (CP)—Cheese, with toast and marmalade, is one of Prime Minister Pearson's favorite breakfast treats.

He revealed this today when he received a gift of five pounds of Canadian cheddar cheese from J. M. Hartwick of Wellington, Ont., president of the National Dairy Council.

Mr. Pearson said that many years ago his father-in-law, a doctor, suggested he eat cheese with toast and marmalade to top his breakfast.

"Ever since, it has been my favorite way of eating cheese, and I eat a lot of it," said Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Hartwick made the presentation to mark the centenary of the opening of the first cheese factory in Upper Canada, the founding of the commercial dairy industry in Canada.

Mr. Pearson said he has been making "the nucleus of a museum" with the various things that have been presented to him since becoming prime minister, but "this won't last very long."

Mr. Hartwick said the Canadian cheese industry now is prosperous, with consumption doubling in little more than a decade.

Mr. Pearson said Canadian cheese now sells at a premium on the British market because of its quality.

Private Peace Corps in Venezuela

Montreal Girl in Action Against Caracas Poverty

A privately sponsored peace corps is helping the slum-dwellers of Caracas. This story tells of the work of a Canadian girl in the Venezuelan capital.

By PAUL KIDD

CARACAS (CP) — The jeep lurched and slithered on the red-dirt incline of the Caracas slum.

Raya Pearlman, 26-year-old Canadian girl, struggled to prevent the sturdy little vehicle plunging into a ditch.

She succeeded, and then, with a grin, sent the jeep bouncing on its way.

At the end of the road was home. For the slender, attractive Montreal-born arts graduate is one of the 18,000 residents of Isaias Medina Angarita — the biggest barrio, or slum, in Caracas.

Raya is the only Canadian member of an American-based private Peace Corps known as Accion. The word, in Spanish, means action.

And that is just what Raya personifies.

She is the driving force behind community teamwork through which the barrio-dwellers are learning to bear ignorance and alleviate poverty.

Accion, the little letters of which stand for Americans for Community Co - operation in Other Nations, was formed about three years ago.

OIL COMPANIES HELP

Financially supported by American and Venezuelan business interests, it has a budget of some $220,000, about one-fifth coming from oil companies which have a vital interest in the South American republic's economy.

Aged from 20 to 43, with an average age of 25, Accion volunteers have come here from the United States, Sweden, Colombia, France and Canada.

Recently, however, an increasing number of young Venezuelans have been attracted to the movement, and it currently consists of 16 North Americans and 40 Venezuelans.

For a wage of $140 a month, each Accion worker serves from 15 to 18 months.

Living and working in 25 barrios in four urban and industrial centres in Venezuela, volunteers have sparked the building of schools and community centres at which 4,000 children and 3,000 adult are being educated.

With a master's degree in Slavic studies from the University of California at Berkeley, Raya was doing community development work at Cambridge, Mass., when a pamphlet about Accion came across her desk.

NO ELECTRICITY

"Suddenly I realized that after years of studying, I needed to apply theory to practice and come to grips with human problems in their rawest state," said Raya. "Accion seemed to offer the answer."

Her 29-year-old American-born husband, Gerald, who was teaching at a Boston high school, wasn't so anxious to seek the answer.

But, a year ago, both signed as Accion volunteers and took a plane to Caracas.

After an intensive six-week course in Spanish, the young couple entered Isaias Medina Angarita.

There, they rented a yellow stucco house at the end of a dirt road for $35 a month.

It had no electricity and no running water.

Then, as now, the only way to get water was to buy it from a pump truck at 45 cents a barrel, and to boil it.

But there was a way to get electricity—by illegally tapping the power lines supplying the city of Caracas.

AGREED TO PAY

By the time it reached the barrios by makeshift cables, however, the electricity was little better than candle-power. Most of the residents of the huge slum had been without electric light ever since they squatted there more than five years ago.

The Pearlmans resolved to do something about it.

They organized petitions, in which barrio-dwellers agreed to pay for the electricity at a special rate instead of stealing it, provided the power company installed booster equipment.

After three months of tough negotiations, the barrio got its first legal power supply.

And the Pearlmans got the credit for its arrival.

One day, Gerald went out with a pick and shovel to begin tackling what seemed the hopeless task of levelling the barrio road.

Soon, he was joined by a couple of other residents. Then more joined the gang.

By the week's end, 30 men were helping change the face of the pitted, twisted track into something resembling a road.

BUILT SEWERS

It took two months but today the barrio is proud of its three-kilometre "main highway."

Construction then began on the barrio's first sewage and drainage system.

The government supplied the pipes, workers of the barrio the free labor and the two Accion volunteers the leadership needed to bring men and materials together.

Raya organized a meal service, provided by other residents of the barrio, for those working on construction.

Next a rubble-covered area was cleared and trees planted to create a plaza for fiestas.

Until recently, there was only one primary school for the entire barrio. Operated by the Roman Catholic church, it accommodated 200 pupils; but while classes were in progress thousands of barefoot, illiterate youngsters ran around outside.

The Pearlmans vowed to take at least a few of the urchins off the dirt-covered streets and put them behind desks.

PUPILS PAID TEACHER

They found an abandoned building. Through community effort, it was given a roof, windows and a coat of paint. And so the barrio got its second school.

After searching the sprawling slum, the Accion workers found an uncertified teacher with five years' classroom experience.

Every week, as 55 pupils arrived at the school, each paid for his or her education by placing a 22-cent coin on the teacher's desk.

Gerald and Raya convinced an American foundation that the teacher, through without a diploma, was good and deserved more than a $12 weekly student-provided "salary."

Today, the teacher is paid $100 a month by the foundation and the children get their education free.

Raya, now on her own, simply doubled her efforts.

She located a disused shack, cajoled a supermarket chain into donating an old gas-powered oven and persuaded a yeast - manufacturing firm to send a professional cookery teacher to the barrio.

A cookery course was held, ending with a graduation ceremony for the women-students.

BAKERY MAKES PROFIT

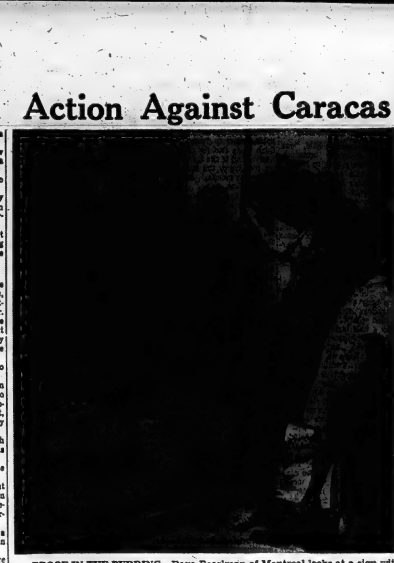
Impressed, the government advanced a $1,200 grant for the purchase of a permanent bakery building, operating six days a week with two shifts, the bakery is producing between 100 and 200 pounds of bread weekly and showing a small profit.

The Canadian girl now is working on her final and most important project: a two-storey community centre which will adjoin the bakery.

Said Raya: "When we first arrived, the barrio was fragmented and suspicious.

"Every person was only interested in himself and his own family; no one was a neighbor of anyone.

"Then came the electricity, the road, the sewers, the plaza, the school and the bakery.



"Now, people know they can best help themselves by helping each other."

The community centre will be a place where residents will be able to discuss their common problems and receive instruction in sewing and other crafts as part of an adult education program.

"It will be the heart of the barrio," says Raya. "Once it becomes a reality, I will leave."

When she does, a Caracas slum will know its loss.

Tomorrow: Political stability clears way for economic programs.

service of Communist China, such as Brazzaville Congo and Burundi." Burundi is on the east of Leopoldville Congo.

POLICY CONFUSED

The Brazzaville regime is headed by President Alfonse Massemba - Debat, who overthrew conservative Fulbert Youlou a year ago. While members of his cabinet make lurid Marxist proclamations, Massemba-Debat seems to be treading water in a sea of confusion.

Massemba-Debat says he is for nonalignment, but looks forward to expanded relations with Red China to help build "scientific socialism" which will "oppose capitalism."

The Chinese make their biggest appeal, evidently, to youth. Young men played a large part in the revolution last August. Youngsters calling themselves "revolutionary commandoes," fan antiwhite hatred.

There are still 8,000 French in the nation of 800,000 but French troops protecting them, according to Massemba - Debat, will soon be withdrawn. The French civilians probably will go, too. Without France, Brazzaville faces economic ruin, but it seems to have little to do with what goes on in many new African nations.

People's Daily of Peking says the Brazzaville regime plays a "positive role in international affairs" in Africa. It says Brazzaville energetically supports "the people" in other African areas in "advancing the cause of African people's solidarity to combat imperialism."

Translated, that can mean the Chinese Communists consider Brazzaville all but safely in the bag and a base for spreading violent revolution.

NO DATE SET

QUEBEC (CP) — No date has yet been set for hearing of an appeal in the case of Ronnie Pilon, originally sentenced to be hanged today for capital murder, his lawyer said Thursday. The execution has been postponed to Dec. 18 pending the appeal, said lawyer Rene Letarte. Pilon, a 23-year-old waiter originally from Port Arthur, was convicted June 15 of shooting a male friend of his wife last October.

Hear Committee Is Opposed To New Coast Patrol Plane

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer has received a special report from a committee he established to suggest the most appropriate new anti-submarine weapons and equipment for Canada's armed forces.

But, informants said Thursday, it will probably be late fall before this study is translated into any construction contracts for Canadian shipyards.

Authorities declined to discuss the contents of the special report but it is believed that the committee rejected on the grounds of cost procurement of either a new long-range patrol plane for the RCAF to replace the Argus in the 1970s or a new fighter plane for the navy.

Canadian shipyards have been starved for defence orders since Mr. Hellyer last year cancelled the previous government's plan to buy eight supertrigates. Mr. Hellyer has said that new warships will be built in Canadian yards but has given no indication whether they will be destroyers, submarines or hydrofoil boats.

NEED MANY CRAFT

The navy says it needs large numbers of inexpensive, anti-submarine craft, such as the 180-ton Canadian hydrofoil now under development. This hydrofoil is expected to be ready for sea trials in 1966.

Other naval needs are: Some destroyer-size warships for control, communications and surface operations; long - range, faster and deeper-running torpedoes; better detection gear, and one or two transport ships for United Nations peace-keeping operations.

The government may decide to buy the American Asroc (anti-submarine rocket) which, it is said, would be cheaper than the navy's current $600,000 program of putting helicopters on destroyers to increase the detection and striking range of ships.

JOBLESS RISE

LONDON (Reuters) — Unemployment in Britain has risen for the first time since January, because of the large number of schoolleavers last month, the ministry of labor reported Thursday. The number of people out of work Aug. 10 was 368,200, or 1.6 per cent of Britain's total labor force. The figure represented an increase of 50,795 over the number of unemployed for July.

Phu Tuc Thursday. Guerrillas killed seven of the 36 Vietnamese defending the Phu Tuc post and wounded 18.

A large number of South Vietnamese soldiers were reported killed in Thursday night's ambush, but figures were not immediately available.

During the day, Buddhist students staged large rallies in the key cities of Saigon and Hue commemorating the first anniversary of the bloody raids on Buddhist pagodas by the regime of the late president Ngo Dinh Diem. Authorities braced for more rallies by strengthening security.

Children and pregnant women were among 1,000 villagers who stalled a government troop column for hours in the coastal area below Tuy Hoa, 230 miles northeast of Saigon. Demonstrators threw themselves in front and behind the column's vehicles.

The anniversary rally in Hue included a torchlight parade by 20,000 students. And in Saigon Buddhist leader Thich Tam Chau criticized President Nguyen Khanh and accused the government of having concealed the facts about incidents involving the government and Buddhists in central Viet Nam.

Observers believed Chau referred to action which the government took in that area after peasants ignored orders to attend a re-educational meeting and went instead to a Buddhist gathering. The officials reacted by burning 270 peasant homes.

A Large Anti-Social Tarantula

AT THE RESEARCH INSTITUTE—Dr. Charles Dondale and Dr. Albert Turnbull of Belleville are two of only four scientists in North America working full time on a study of spiders.

Tut-Tut, Girls, No Tantrums If a Bug-Man's Tarantula Tickles Your Tender Toes

By ANDY TURNBULL

"Lost," the notice said, "one large, anti-social, tarantula. Finder please return to Dr. Albert Turnbull or Dr. Charles Dondale, room 307." The notice went up more than a year ago, and stayed on the notice board only a few days, but people at the Research Institute for Biological Control in Belleville still remember it. For some reason, the thought that a tarantular might be wandering loose in the building disturbed the girls in the office.

A tarantula is a tropical spider. The one that got away has a body about the size of a mouse, legs that could span a six inch plate, poison fangs nearly a half inch long, poison that would probably kill a man, and a mean disposition. It came to Canada on a load of bananas Dr. Turnbull thinks probably from Panama and was turned over to the research team because well because what else would you do with a tarantula? For two years it lived in a cage in room 207 before it escaped. For two or three months it lived behind a radiator in the same room that Dr. Turnbull spotted tracks it left in dust on a table, found it, and returned it to the cage. It's there now. It lives mostly on flies and other insects, but it has eaten a frog in one meal, leaving nothing but skin and bone.

The tarantula is kept as a pet, but other spiders that get into room 207 come on business. Dr. Turnbull and Dr. Dondale study the way spiders help control pest insects. In their spare time they are working on the first authoritative classification of spiders in Canada, (a full time job in itself) and in studies of the anatomy and habits of spiders. They are the only scientists doing such work in Canada, and two of only four full time in North America.

TWO MAIN GROUPS

Spiders, as pest control agents, fall into two main groups. Most important are the "hunting spiders," which roam on foot and catch their prey without webs. They can spin silk as well as any other spiders, but they use it to make cocoons for their eggs, to make safety lines for themselves, lining for nests and other uses. Most spiders have six or more different types of silk "on tap" and there are 10 or more kinds of silk among the spiders of the world. Small spiders can ride the wind for miles at a time, clinging to a strand of silk spun out into the wind.

The web-spinning spiders use their silk as do the hunting spiders, and also to make webs. Nobody knows exactly how many different kinds of spider webs there are in the world, but there are three main types in this area.

TYPES OF WEBS

Most easily recognized is the spiral web, usually in a vertical plane, made between two vertical supports. Radial arms of this web are spun first, of the strongest silk a spider can produce. The cross-strands are spun in a spiral, from the centre out, on elastic silk, (it can stretch to more than twice is original length), covered with spots of an adhesive silk. This type of web usually catches flying insects with the adhesive on the cross-strands. If an insect stuck to the adhesive is big enough or strong enough it can use the web member in its struggle for freedom, the chances are it will brush against other cross-members, sticking to them too. The spider's body is covered with an oily surface, which prevents its sticking to its own web.

Another type of web is a dense horizontal net, with a maze of vertical and slanted strands above it. Flying insects bumping into the strands tumble into the web, where the spider waits to jump on them. Such webs usually are not adhesive, and if the spider is slow on the jump, the insect has a chance to escape. Spiders are seldom slow.

Some spiders spin webs to catch walking or crawling insects. A typical web of this type might consist of a horizontal net supported about half an inch above the ground by vertical strands. Below the net, strands of elastic silk with adhesive spots are stretched and anchored with adhesive to the ground. An insect walking below may brush against one of the adhesive strands and stick to it. Struggling, it will break the strand loose from the ground, and the strand will pull back toward the net. If the insect brushes against enough strands, the prey will be pulled off the ground to await the spider's pleasure.

EYESIGHT POOR

Although spiders have eight eyes, the eyes are unable to focus and a spider's eyesight is usually poor. A web-spinning spider usually detects its prey by the vibration of the web as the prey struggles and if the prey remains still, the spider may not be able to find it. Faced with this problem some spiders will dance about the web plucking individual strands, to locate the strand on which the prey is tangled.

HUNT IN FIELDS

Web-spinning spiders and hunting spiders can be found almost anywhere, but because the web-spinners need support for their webs, they are more common among bushes or in wooded areas. Hunting spiders, which are more common in open fields, are of more interest as pest-control agents for field crops.

Less is known of the hunting spiders than of the web-spinners, partly of course, because they remain still still to be studied. Wolf spiders and jumping spiders hunt by day, locating their prey by sight. Some spiders hunt by night, detecting their prey by means unknown to scientists. Other spiders, usually called "crab spiders," ambush their prey.

The trap door spider, for example, is famous for its silk-lined underground lair complete with silk-hinged trap door. Invisible from above the ground, the trap door spider is alerted by the vibrations when prey passes over or near the trap door. Rushing out, the spider makes its kill.

Some of the devices used by hunting spiders are fantastic. Dr. Turnbull thinks of a "bolas spider," common in this area. The bolas spider rests on the end of a twig and first spins a length of adhesive silk which it bundles up into a ball. This ball is fastened to the ends of a length of strong silk making a weapon similar to an Argentine "bolas." According to Dr. Turnbull, the spider swings the bolas in a circle below the branch until an insect flies by within range, then throws it to catch its prey.

POISON PREY

Regardless of how they catch or trap their prey, spiders have common killing methods and eating habits. Two poison fangs are jabbed into the prey with a motion of the cephalic thorax, (which includes the head), and the prey is paralyzed or killed by the poison. With its mouth, designed for piercing and sucking, the spider injects digestive juices into the prey, then with the fangs and with "pedipalps," (leg-like appendages of the mouth), it kneads the prey until all the edible body parts are dissolved in the spider's own digestive juices. Then it drinks the juices.

Spiders can take no solids through their mouths, but since the process of digestion actually takes place in the prey, rather than in their own bodies they don't have to. Usually they leave only the exoskeleton and wings of an insect.

CAN FAST MONTHS

The value of spiders in pest control lies in their adaptability. They will eat anything that moves, if they can catch it, and they can go for months at a time without eating anything. This means that they can survive a famine that will kill off other pest controls and they will prey heavily on any insect numerous enough to be a pest.

Suppose, for example, a June frost were to kill off almost all of a given species of pest insect. Predators and parasites specific to the pest would be forced to change their diet or habits, or to starve. Either way the next few generations of pests might have no effective controls on them, and multiplying up to 100 for one would soon become a plague. Predators and parasities would catch up eventually, but the pests' head start would be expensive.

But spiders, not relying on the pests for food and able to fast through several generations of most pests anyway, would be unaffected when the pests were nearly wiped out. As the pests increased, the spiders would find them a convenient diet and long before the pests reached plague proportions, spiders would be eating them back to a normal population. As the pests' specific predators and parasites increased, and the pests decreased, the spiders would again vary their diets.

It takes some statistics to illustrate the importance of the spiders eating habits. It takes about 315 adult fruit flies to feed a medium size spider from the egg to the tuil grown adult stage, and the average adult spider will eat more than one insect a day. Dr. Turnbull once counted 14,000 spiders per acre of barren pasturefield near Belleville and the average in productive land is probably closer to about 50,000 spiders per acre. In a tropical rain forest, the count has been as high as nearly 300,000 spiders per acre. Around Belleville, spiders probably kill about 93,000 insects per acre per day. And they do it without presenting any threat to man.

LONG STUDY

Dr. Turnbull, who comes from B.C., is married and the father of three children. He became interested in spiders about ten years ago and moved to Belleville in 1957 to begin his work on them. In his study of spiders as pest controls, he keeps census figures of spiders and pest insects in selected areas through different years, and compares the variations in population between the two groups. He also makes an intensive study of habits, physical ability and characteristics of spiders.

Dr. Dondale comes from Nova Scotia, is married and is the father of four children. He became interested in spiders about eight years ago, and he came to Belleville in 1961. He has been working with two small stands of raspberry cane, one enclosed in a spider-proof "insectorium," the other unprotected nearby.

Large spiders and predators are unable to enter the insectorium, small predators are removed by hand every three days, but the pests are undisturbed. Serious damage to the cane from which the spiders and other predators are excluded indicates the value of predators to the farmer.

Abou Heif, 37, was far ahead of his only rival, Charles Grover, 44, of Boston, reported about 5½ to six miles from shore.

Jensen was several miles ahead of Grover when he had to give up.

Judith de Nys, 22 - year - old Dutch girl now living in London, Ont., was forcibly dragged from the icy waters by officials after she started swimming in circles. She had been in second place about a half-mile behind Heif.

Within minutes George Park, 30, of Toronto, in third place about 3½ miles behind Heif, was also hauled from the water, leaving Ken Jenson of Vancouver in second place well behind the leader and Charles Grover, 44, of Boston, in third about seven miles behind Heif.

Miss de Nys was pulled from the water when she started swimming in circles. When taken from the water she was shivering uncontrollably and was dazed and unable to speak. She was taken to Toronto and whisked to hospital.

At one point, she started to swim back toward St. Catharines where 18 swimmers started the race at 6 p.m. Thursday. She refused repeated pleas to give up and then was dragged into a boat.

Miss de Nys earlier had shown obvious signs of weakening as she rested on her back repeatedly to take nourishment and talk to her mother. But she had kept swimming on, spurred by the cheers of a large flotilla of small boats following her.

She had swum neck and neck with Heif during the long hours of darkness during which 13 exhausted and half-frozen swimmers had given up the battle to cross the lake.

Before the Dutch girl was dragged from the water an official said she was "putting on a tremendous display of courage."

The biggest struggle was against bone-chilling lake temperatures that dropped to 52 degrees during the night. But the temperatures had warmed to 57 as the swimmers neared the finish.

Only five swimmers have ever completed the gruelling lake swim.

STIRLING

Members Make Annual Tour Of Gardens

The Stirling Horticultural Society held its annual garden tour on Monday afternoon with approximately 25 members and several children in attendance.

The group convened at the home of the president, Mrs. Floyd Armstrong, Frankford Road, and viewed her large flower garden which contains a large variety of perennials and gladioli.

Mr. Ernie Munro, Church St., had a lovely pool complete with five white ducks. The pool was surrounded with petunias and perennials and the United Empire Loyalist flower "Bouncing Bet." The pioneers carried roots of this plant with them from the United States when they came to Canada to make their home in the wilderness.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Houchin conducted the party through their large gardens where roses of all shades were in evidence. Begonias were in abundance, also many lovely shrubs. At the garden of Mrs. Frank Hardline a large basket of glads was displayed containing one each of all the varieties in her garden. She also has a wide selection of flowering plants. Mrs. Hollis Rodgers displayed a variety of flowering geraniums and novelty shrubs.

VISIT PARK

The Leaton Park was visited and the group gave suggestions for top dressing the lawn and improving the flower beds in 1965.

Mrs. James Chambers, John Street, had a large display of flowers and shrubs. The centre of attraction was a catalpa tree about five feet in height with large heart-shaped leaves, bell-shaped flowers and long pods about 12 inches in length.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Munro showed their wide variety of annuals. These were gradiated in all sizes, large and small, and in dozens of colors.

SPECIAL TREAT

Mrs. Ivan Caldwell displayed hundreds of gladioli in bloom and also their market garden and perennial bed. This concluded the view of the gardens, and to those who are fond of flowers it was a special treat.

The group returned to the home of Mrs. Armstrong and enjoyed ice cream and cake served by the president and secretary, Mrs. Ray Rose. Thanks were expressed by Mrs. Archie Bailey.

Mrs. Armstrong displayed a special book on flowers and suggested that a copy be placed in Stirling public library.

Rain-Dampened Fair Still Tops Last Year's Figures Drawing Big Crowd to Races

Belleville Fair 1964 is over — after exactly 31,069 testified to its popularity as a crowd-pleaser.

The most rained - upon Fair in years proved it still could pack surprises.

"At least we set one record," mused an official as the rains came down and threatened to swamp the night horse stakes. "This year, it's rained every day!"

While not a record, the gate was well above last year's attendance.

In 1963, with the internationally - famous RCMP Musical Ride as the trump drawing card, 27,865 people clicked through the turnstiles.

FEWER IN GRANDSTAND

However, fewer people paid into this year's various grandstand attractions.

With Tuesday night a virtual washout slightly more than 4,300 were counted turned up through the four days and four nights.

And the Fair unexpectedly may have seized upon something new that likely will become a traditional Tuesday night feature in future years.

More than 1,100 people were in the stands last night for the horse racing heats crowned with the running of the Blaed Diamond Stakes. The event generated general excitement totally unexpected by organizers.

It nearly didn't come off as the most promising Fair fund in years seemed relegated to a rain-filled limbo.

Torrential rain burst over the district shortly before noon and settled into a steady downpour that lasted a good two hours.

By the conclusion, the Fairgrounds' racetrack was not only muddied — it was flooded.

To all intents, the night show was over — and with it the Belleville Fair for another year.

WORK ON TRACK

However, as the rains ceased Fair president Bob Phillips called together Fair officials and took a snap decision — the stakes would go on.

Directors grabbed shovels and bars and headed for the track near the grandstand — where flooding was at its worst.

The rainwater was drained off while a tractor churned up mud to dry in the afternoon sun. Finally, with a coating of top soil on the worst stretch, the races were ready to roll.

Final attendance figures came as a pleasant surprise for most Fair Board directors.

After four days of rain — usually timed to a nicety to discourage attendance — most officials were resigned to a smaller turnout than was written in the final gate receipts.

Balky Computer Refuses to Tell About Satellite

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A balky computer today prevented the U.S. Space Agency from determining if it had launched the world's first stationary satellite—one that hovers over a single spot on the globe.

Officials hoped the computer, at the Goddard Space Flight Centre, Greenbelt, Md., would provide the necessary data by mid-morning.

Councils Want More Control Of Voting

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A brief from the city of Windsor, calling for more municipal control of minimum housing standards and election procedures, was presented Thursday to the Ontario legislature's select committee on municipal legislation.

The 22-page brief urged that legislation be enacted to permit municipalities to establish minimum standards for all types of buildings and prevent the formation of blighted areas and expensive redevelopment.

It suggested that inspectors and a special committee could be set up to administer such a bylaw at the local level.

The brief also called for local council control in fixing nomination and election dates, three - year terms for council members and that both an X and a check mark be acceptable on a ballot as a valid vote.

SUGGESTION OPPOSED

In the afternoon session, the Sarnia Hydro Electric Commission presented a brief opposing an earlier recommendation by the select committee that functions of a public utilities commission be performed by a local municipal council or a committee of council.

George T. Gordon, a committee member and Liberal member of the legislature for Brantford, said he objected to remarks in the Sarnia brief that suggested utility surpluses could be used to reduce mill rates if operations were put under jurisdiction of councils.

Mr. Gordon said there has been a general misunderstanding of the committee's recommendation. He said power rates would still be under the direction of Ontario Hydro and funds still would be used to improve systems and give reduced rates to customers.

Never Took Part in any Plot - - Ruby

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Ruby, in a rambling, almost incoherent appeal to the Warren commission, has insisted he never took part in any plot to assassinate President Kennedy, or to kill Lee Harvey Oswald.

"There was no conspiracy," Ruby is quoted in Thursday's New York Journal-American.

In reply, Chief Justice Earl Warren told Ruby:

"I think I can say to you that there has been no witness before this commission out of the hundreds we have questioned who has claimed to have any personal knowledge that you were a party to any conspiracy to kill our president.

"I just wanted to tell you before our own commission, and I might say to you also that we have explored the situation."

The exchange is a highlight of a final copyrighted instalment in The Journal-American of a 102-page interrogation of Ruby in Dallas June 7 by the Warren commission.

249 Bottles of Blood Donated At Red Cross Clinic Thursday

Two hundred and sixty - five local people donated 249 bottles of blood at the Red Cross Blood Clinic held yesterday at Kiwanis Centre. The clinic did better than last year's August clinic, which collected only 185 bottles, but not as well as the 1962 August clinic, which collected 305 bottles. In 1961, before arrangements were made with local industries for donations during working hours, the August clinic collected only 151 bottles.

Yesterday's was the fourth of five public clinics planned in Belleville this year. Total collections are about 100 bottles above last year's total for the first four clinics. In addition to the five public clinics per year, Belleville people also donate through two private clinics, at Northern Electric and at Belleville General Hospital.

About fifty volunteers worked in two shifts to operate yesterday's clinic. Mrs. Gordon Miller of the local Red Cross Branch worked two shifts as clinic director, members of the St. Julien I.O.D.E. served refreshments upstairs, members of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary served fruit juice downstairs and other volunteers drove cars and worked in the clinic itself, with nurses and assistants from the Red Cross mobile clinic from Toronto.

TAKING IT EASY at yesterday's blood donors' clinic at Kiwanis Centre is C. Brinkman of the I.B.M. Dept. at Northern Electric. Taking his pulse is nurses' aide Pauline Deziel of Toronto. Two hundred and sixty-five people turned out to the clinic.

Two Spacecraft To Be Launched Toward Mars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Space Agency said Thursday it plans to launch two identical Mariner spacecraft late this year on separate eight-month missions toward Mars.

The spacecraft will be equipped with television cameras and other recording devices to gather information perhaps as close as 15,000 miles from the planet.

Radio telemetry equipment will be used to relay the data more than 150,000,000 miles back to earth. After passing beyond Mars, the 570-pound spacecraft will go into looping orbits around the sun.

The objects will be to:

1. Explore interplanetary space between earth and Mars, including the asteroid belt near Mars.

2. Obtain television "close-ups" of the planet which many scientists believe is alive.

3. Gather data on the Martian atmosphere.

FRIDAY

I've always had a yen for bananas—and things pertaining thereto.

Frank-seekers who came to see me a few days after I was born took one look and turned away exclaiming, "Ugh, another Banana-nose."

My nasal appendage never developed to banana proportions, but strangely enough some of my prime favorites in the sports and entertainment world boast overgrown schnozolas.

There's top jockey Eddie Arcaro; stage, radio and television star Jimmy Durante; ditto Danny Thomas, Cyrano de Bergerac, Warren Spahn, the Milwaukee Immortal, and Ted Reeve, my top sports columnist.

Any or all of these can give upper-lip shelter to at least fifty housefllies during a rainstorm.

Durante used to say he was the only man living who could take a shower without getting his feet wet.

Speaking of banana-noses in general, and Warren Spahn in particular, oldtime baseball fans who witnessed the Milwaukee Braves-Chicago Cubs game in Chicago August 1st saw a sad sight.

"Spahnie" and Lou Burdette, Braves pitching buddies for so many years, hurled for opposing sides in relief. And both were so unsuccessful that they failed to survive an inning.

Spahn relieving for the first time since being consigned to the bullpen on a more or less permanent basis, entered the game in the seventh inning and gave up a triple, a walk, a single and the tying run.

Burdette doing a bullpen stint between starts, appeared in the eighth inning and surrendered a home run, a double, a walk and the two runs which saddled him with the defeat.

As a matter of fact both veterans were bombed on the first pitch. Joe Amalfitano hit Spahn's first serve for a triple and Hank Aaron smashed Burdette's into the bleachers for a home run.

Spahnie's relegation to the bullpen did not come exactly as a surprise to major league observers. Up to that point he had completed only four games in 22 starts —and just one in his last fourteen dating back to May 19.

The great lefthander took it philosophically. "Naturally, I don't relish the idea," he said. "I've always said I'm paid to win 20 games, and it's just about impossible to do so working in relief. But at the same time I'm paid to help the ball club so if they want me in the bullpen, that's where I'll go and try to do my best."

That's the kind of stuff great pitchers are made of. That and superb faith in their ability to recoup if it is humanly and physically possible.

"Nothing worked for me against the Cubs that day," recalled Spahn. "But don't write me off yet. I still have a lot of pitching left."

Nor has Braves manager Bobby Bragan lost all faith in the 43-year-old master. "He has the arm, and he can throw. He proved that in two fine innings of relief against the Mets. We'll just have to wait and see how things work out," he said.

But the old guy with the whiskers and scythe is no respecter of persons whether they're baseball pitchers or garbage collectors.

In Spahn's case he is not deviating from pattern when he makes the last mile the longest and toughest.

A 20-game winner 13 times and the "winningest" lefthander of all time with 365 victories, Spahns lifetime targets are becoming mistier as time goes by.

He has his sights set on the National League win record of 375. He also has visions of becoming a 400-game winner. But to do that he'll have to regain that old-time second wizardry — and the comeback trail is tough especially at 43 years of age.

One thing in his favor, he knows what's wrong. "I've been all fouled up", he said. "My arm is sound and I feel great physically, but my timing is off and I'm working to get it back. I've been striding too much or too little in my delivery, not getting the ball where I want it.

Time may be pulling him down in its current but confidence is a great lifesaver. As Spahn says, "Don't write me off yet. I still have a lot of pitching left."

DeGRAW RETURNS

OTTAWA (CP) — Defensive halfback Larry De Graw returned to the Ottawa Rough Riders Thursday after a short stint in the U.S. Army and will work out with the Eastern Football Conference club for the next four weeks. Chisox Shell Yankees; Take Over Top

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

"A bitter blow," moaned Hank Bauer.

"My thoughts of a pennant are high now," beamed Al Lopez.

"We'll be right up near the top again if . . . ," said Yogi Berra hopefully.

Those were the reactions Thursday of three American League managers following a pair of games that left Chicago White Sox in first place Baltimore Orioles without Boog Powell and New York Yankees struggling for air.

Lopez' White Sox replaced the Orioles in first place, blanking New York 5-0 for their fifth straight victory and the Yankees' fourth consecutive defeat. The Orioles' 4-3 loss to Boston Red Sox dropped Bauer's boys one-half game.

Powell, Baltimore's slugging left fielder, broke his left wrist trying for a catch against the wall in the second inning and may be lost to the Orioles for a month.

"We might as well forget him," Bauer grumbled.

Forgetting 31 homers and 80 runs batted in undoubtedly will be difficult. The pilot's disappointment will be even tougher.

"I've been in baseball 40 years and I've never been given me more satisfaction than this one," Lopez said.

Then there's Berra, who is counting on the eight games the top two teams must play with each other. The first of four games in Chicago is tonight.

The Yankees, meanwhile, might be getting to the Yankees. Berra and Infielder Phil Linz became engaged in a hassled row over Linz' harmonica playing in the team bus following the latest defeat. Yankee coach Frank Crosetti called the incident the worst he's seen in his 33 years with the team.

Back on the field, Los Angeles Angels edged Detroit Tigers 4-3 and Kansas City Athletics defeated Cleveland Indians 7-4.

The White Sox shelled Whitey Ford from the mound en route to their victory. The Yankee hurler, making his first start since Aug. 8, lasted only into the fourth inning as Chicago rapped him for nine hits.

Bob Tillman's two-run homer highlighted a four-run second inning that carried the Red Sox past the Orioles. Frank Malzone's single preceded Tillman's blast off Dave Vineyard. Pitcher Dave Morehead then fumbled on the play so which Powell was hurt.

Detroit's Dennis McLain held the Angels to five hits through six innings. But his throwing error on a grounder hit by Felix Torres helped a four-run Los Angeles rally in the seventh. Bob Rodgers scored the tying run on the wild toss. Jim Gilliam followed with a run-scoring single off reliever Julio Navarro.

Rocky Colavito and Doc Edwards' lashed two-run singles in the eighth inning, lifting the Athletics over the Indians. Cleveland had taken a 3-2 lead in the seventh on Woodie Held's run-scoring double.

'Worst Hassle In 33 Years'

Berra Burns At Linz' Harmonica

BOSTON (AP) — CBS may have a spot for Phil Linz and his harmonica on the amateur hour but the New York Yankees infielder obviously has been auditioning for the wrong people in the corporate structure.

Manager Yogi Berra took exception to Linz's harmonica playing in the back of the team bus Thursday and wound up in a hassle described by coach Frank Crosetti as the worst incident he has seen in his 33 years with the perennial American League champions.

The Yankees had taken the bus from Comiskey Park to O'Hare Airport in Chicago, heading to Boston for a series with the Red Sox. The defending champions had just lost fourth straight game to the White Sox, 5-0, and dropped 4½ games behind the first - place Chicagoans.

Linz, sitting in the rear of the bus next to first baseman Joe Pepitone, pulled out his harmonica and started to play. In the front of the bus, Berra snapped his head around and shouted: "Put that thing in your pocket."

SILENCE BROKEN

Silence followed — for a second. Then from the back of the bus came: "Toot, toot."

Berra rushed toward the back of the bus and yelled at Linz, "I said to put it away. You'd think you just won four straight."

Linz, startled, flipped the harmonica into the air toward the manager as if to give it to him. Berra angrily swatted it with a skirts of Guelph.

Landscapers Shade City Hotel

Trailing 3-0 in the top of the first and 5-2 after three frames, Barriage Landscapers rallied in the late innings to defeat City Hotel 8-7 in Commercial Softball League semi-finals last night.

The win pushed Barriages into a 3-2 series lead and the next game in the four-of-seven set is slated for the Alemite on Monday night.

After City scored three in their half of the first, Barriages got two back in their half of the inning. A pair in the third made it 5-2 but Landscapers ripped back with pairs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. A final pair by City in the seventh left them one run down at the end.

Gerry Genereaux, taking over from Lawrence Leveque after three batters in the first, went the remainder to get the victory nod. He allowed five of City's six hits, fanning three and walking three. Leveque had passed one in his short play.

Dave Feeney went the distance in defeat, giving up seven hits. He struck out three and issued two free passes.

Gordie Duff and Gerry Genereaux each clouted a double and single to spearhead the Landscaper attack. Gary Wood belted a home run while Tim Cook and Jim Sopha had singles.

G. Smith rapped three City Hotel singles and Harold Redquest hit a home run. Doug Morcau and Dave Feeney got singles.

In a brief ceremony, Barriages were presented with the O'Connor Trophy in recognition of the winning the Commercial League pennant.

Plenty Of Weekend Action
Juniors Double In Brass

Players on the Elks Junior softball and baseball teams should get their fill of action this weekend.

The softball edition of the team opens an OASA Junior "A" two-of-three series against Oshawa here Saturday evening and according to an unconfirmed report, the baseball club also continues its OBA Junior "A" playdowns on Sunday.

Oshawa defeated the baseballers in Oshawa last weekend in the first of a two-of-three set. Although no word has been received here from either the club management or the OBA, a team player said yesterday that the second game is scheduled for the Belleville Fairgrounds Sunday afternoon.

Should Belleville win that contest, playoffs call for a second game, to decide the series winners, to follow as part of a double-header at the same park.

Meanwhile, the softball club clashes head on with Oshawa Scugog Cleaners at the CNRA Park Saturday evening at 6.00 p.m.

This series should provide top-notch ball and the locals will be forced to put out to cope with the high-flying Oshawa boys. Oshawa ousted Peterborough in the first round, by scores of 12-0 and 22-8.

Young Bob Ethier, fast developing into one of the district's top softball pitchers, will get the starting assignment against the Scugog boys. With softball on the upswing here, the game is expected to draw a big crowd.

The third city team sponsored by Richard Ellis, the OBA Bantam baseball squad, also sees action at home tomorrow.

They play host to Peterborough in the second game of their second-round series at the Park Dale diamond, at 2.00 p.m.

Peterborough leads the series 1-0 and should Belleville deadlock the series tomorrow, the clubs meet in Peterborough Monday at five o'clock in the deciding tilt.

Fontinato To Coach Junior 'C'

GUELPH (CP) — Lou Fontinato, a former defenceman with New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League, will return to hockey this season as a coach of the Orangeville entry in the Junior C division of the Ontario Hockey Association, it was learned here Thursday.

Fontinato's colorful career as a hockey "tough guy" ended March 9, 1965, when he suffered a broken neck after crashing into the boards. An eight-hour operation to fuse the damaged vertebras was followed by months of convalescence.

Except for a stiff neck, Fontinato, who has never coached before, has fully recovered from the injury and successfully operates his farm on the outskirts of Guelph.

Capacity Crowd Sees Meet

Kingston Horse Wins Cheese Stake Race

Fine-L-Touch, driven by owner Ken Newton won the handsome trophy and a $400 share of the $1,300 purse from a field of eight survivors in the final event of the three-heat race.

A capacity grandstand audience that spilled over on the track at times, saw the winner defeat second-place Dominion K. Abbey by a length in the final.

Dominion K Abbe won the second heat, turning back the threat of Moonlight Dolly with a two-length lead.

Mr. Newton and Fine'L-Touch were presented with the Black Diamond Trophy by its donor Alderman Stan Joss at the conclusion of the race.

Race chairman Gerald Vance and race secretary Ron Isaac of the Fair Board, presented the winner with a handsome cooler.

The capacity crowd paid off a mid-afternoon decision by the board to stage the meet. Early rains had reduced the track to a heavy, muddy condition causing Board speculation.

Race times were the slowest in years due to track conditions. The best time was 2.27 2/5 in the ninth race. The Stake Race time was 2.31.

But while times were slow the prices were good. The big crowd sent $9,548 through the pari-mutuel windows.

A lone bettor took home $283.90 in one of the quinellas. The other paid $4.80. The daily doubles paid $89.10 and $13.20.

Best win prices of the night were paid by Bomb B in the first race, $28.60; Double Star in the fifth, $29.70; and Georgina in the eighth, $21.90."

Two highly rated horses entered in the Stake race were scratched at the last minute. Star Magic was withdrawn, said to be suffering from a virus. Riverdale Bill was also taken out.

Close Out Fights TV From Garden

NEW YORK (AP) — An era ends tonight when Johnny Pernol and Henry Hank, a pair of light heavyweights, meet in a fight that marks the last of a 20-year series of televised boxing shows from Madison Square Garden.

The fights are being dropped from television because of lack of sponsor and network interest said to have been brought about by generally poor ratings.

For two months boxing fans throughout North America have been able to watch the game's leading fighters belt each other around the ring. Millions made it a weekend ritual, tuning in to the fights the week.

Some critics contend the televised shows on a regular basis have killed boxing. Others disagree. After Friday night there will be nothing to argue about.

Pernol, ranked fifth by the World Boxing Association, has won 13 bouts and lost one since he turned professional a year and a half ago.

Hank, a veteran of 11 years in the pro ring, has 36 victories, 19 defeats and three draws.

Gord Canniff with relief from Gerry Hang in the sixth, was tagged with the loss. They struck out three, walked one and gave up nine hits.

Ron Urch had a triple and a double for Canniffon. Ken Forsythe collected two singles, O'Connor, Clapp and Harvey hit safely.

Howard Skelly had two singles while Young, Mann, Little and Belanger had singles for Foxboro.

Unbeaten Als Defeat Argonauts 16-1

Too Much Offense

By TED BLACKMAN

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Alouettes defensive team simply refuses to move.

So does the offensive squad, and that's what has coach Jim Trimble concerned.

The defensive unit was near-perfect Thursday night as the Als defeated Toronto Argonauts 16-1 for their third straight victory without a loss this season. But the Als could only muster a total offence of 177 yards and in the second half stumbled to a mere two first downs. A 9-0 lead was their only reward in the lopsided opening 30 minutes.

The trouble, according to Trimble, was quarterback Vernon Cole and an overruled playbook.

"We've had too much stuff for him and I intend to limit the offence for the next game," he said. "We've got to stick to the things he does best. He's reluctant to use the straight-back formation where he gets a lot of work. He throws better on the run."

The victory sent the Als into first place in the Eastern Football Conference. two points ahead of Ottawa. Toronto remained in third, two points in front of winless Hamilton.

The Als' first touchdown came on the initial series of the game with Dave Hoppins completing a 92-yard drive by bundling over from the two-yard line. The only payoff effort was Gino Berretta's field goal in the second quarter.

Then the defence stepped in Jackie Parker, the limping Argo quarterback who replaced rookie Karl Sweetan just before half time, succeeded in moving Toronto to within threatening distance.

But the Als stopped one drive with their 30-yard line after Colts fumbled, stood immobile against three Argo rushes from within their seven-yard stripe and ended another threat when Sherman Lewis fumbled at the 25.

To climax their effort, Larry Dumlosky raced 39 yards with a Parker interception in the last minute to put the game out of reach. Dumlosky recovered the rookie's first pro score.

Olympics Flame Lit Tonight

OLYMPIA, Greece (AP) — Film ceremony of lighting the Olympic flame, considered by many as centuries-old but actually dreamed up in 1936, will be enacted here today in the sacred grove where the ancient Olympic Games were held.

The flame will be lighted with a huge magnifying glass—if the sun shines. If not, someone may have to strike a match—that happened once before, according to archeologists here.

The flame is lighted only a few yards from the ancient stadium where the Olympics were staged every four years for more than 1,000 years. The last Games were in 393 AD before they were resumed in 1896.

Next year the torch will be flown to Japan, with stops at many major Asian cities.

Then it will be carried in elaborate parades through the Japanese countryside and arrive in Tokyo in time for the opening of the Games on Oct. 10.

LA Angels Banish Bo To Hawaii

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bo Belinsky faces another suspension at any moment and his lawyer said he will take it rather than report to Hawaii Islanders of the Pacific Coast League.

The left hander was suspended by Los Angeles Angels for allegedly slugging Brayen Dyer, Los Angeles baseball writer, in a Washington hotel room last week during an altercation about a story.

Last Tuesday, the Angels took Belinsky, 27, off the suspension list but optioned him to Hawaii under a 72-hour reporting time.

If he does not report, the Islanders presumably will suspend him.

Lawyer Paul Caruso said the next step will be an application to baseball commissioner Ford Frick for a hearing. He said the case might eventually go to the courts.

Three Former Champs In Field

By JOHN SHORT

SASKATOON (CP) — Keith Alexander of Calgary, a little man who prefers to play bigger men on their terms, captured two tense matches in the 1964 Canadian amateur golf championship Thursday. His victims were Tom Draper of Royal Oak, Mich., and Bert Tieshurst of Vancouver.

Draper carried Alexander, 1960 Canadian champion to the 21st hole before Alexander canned a 15-footer for a birdie and the match. Against Tieshurst, Alexander made a tricky putt on the 16th to go 2 up. He retained his edge with a par three on the 17th to win 2 and 1.

Quarter-final and semi-final matches were scheduled for today. The 36-hole final for the championship, won last year by Nick Weslock of Toronto, will be played Saturday.

Weslock, Alexander and Gary Cowan of Kitchener were the only former champs remaining in the field. Cowan won the honor at Edmonton in 1961 and lost to Alexander in 1960. Weslock whipped Tieshurst 7 and 6 in the 1963 final.

BEATS AMERICAN

Weslock downed Frank Bostock of Scottsdale, Ariz., 2 up and Lane Rickel of Calgary 3 and 2 to enter the quarter-finals. Cowan downed Henry Setlakwe of Montreal 4 and 3.

Also advancing to the quarter-finals were John Sirman of Fresno, Calif., John Kinsurn of Edmonton, Bruce Draper of Edmonton, Doug Silverberg of Calgary and Johnny Johnston of Vancouver.

Bruce Brewer of Whitevale, Ont., scored a 2 and 1 triumph over Claude Clement of Valleyfield, Que., in the second round, which he dropped a 3 and 2 decision to Robert Kidd of Vancouver.

Thomas, Callison Supply All Phils' Runs

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

The head-me-down and the all-star hero sat quietly in the Philadelphia dressing room.

"It's always a thrill to hit a home run," said Frank Thomas.

"It's about time I did something good for a change," said Johnny Callison.

What Thomas and Callison did was supply all the runs as the Phillies swept a double-header from Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0 and 3-2 Thursday night for a 7½-game lead in the National League pennant race.

Thomas, acquired from New York Mets recently, took care of the opener with a two-run homer in the ninth inning that won it for Art Mahaffey.

Callison, who won the all-star game for the National League, took over in the second game, drove in his 72nd run batted in the sixth inning, then lashing a long sacrifice fly in the eighth inning that drove in the run.

Trailing 3-1, the Pirates got a run back in the ninth on a single by Donn Clendenon and Bill Mazeroski's double. But Callison came through again. He crashed Jerry Lynch's fly ball and cut down Mazeroski, trying to advance to third, to end the threat.

ADVANCE 1½ GAMES

The Twin triumphs, coupled with Cincinnati's 10-7 victory over slipping San Francisco, added 1½ games to the Phillies' lead. Cincy, meanwhile, pulled into a tie for second with the Giants by winning their fourth straight while San Francisco lost its fifth in a row.

In the only other NL game scheduled, Denis Menke drove in three runs with a fifth inning stroke four hits as Milwaukee Braves defeated Dodgers 8-2.

Mahaffey, making his second to 15-6, won his duel with Bob Friend in the opener when Thomas connected after a single by Clay Dalrymple.

In the nightcap, Bob Bailey put the Pirates ahead 1-0 with a third inning homer off Rick Wise. Callison then tagged Don Schwall with the loss.

The Giants led the Reds 4-3 until Deron Johnson slammed a bases-empty homer in the seventh inning. The Reds then broke it open in the eighth inning with a six-run spurt, scoring the go-ahead run when Don Herbel issued a bases-loaded walk to Tommy Harper.

Besides Johnson, Robinson and Leo Cardenas homered for the Reds while Willie Mays, Jose Cepeda and Del Crandall connected for the Giants. Mays' homer was his 38th.

The Braves collected 16 hits while Bob Sadowski held the Dodgers to seven hits. Milwaukee manager Bobby Bragan in the first four innings, then tagged for Moeller and Bob Miller for five extra-base hits and five runs in the fifth and sixth.

Ron Fairly's homer accounted for both Dodger runs.

Won't Take Bullet From Leg

WASHINGTON (AP) — A physician for Washington Senators said Thursday he has decided against removing a bullet that has been in the leg of Toronto Maple Leafs Marshall Bridges for about two years.

Dr. George Resta released Bridges to return to the lineup of the International League baseball team.

He said the bullet, lodged in the ankle, was not giving Bridges any trouble.

Bridges was shot in a night-club incident during spring training at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., about two years ago, Resta said.

Mr. Campbell took in custody without bail a 42-inch muskie, while Mr. Hollings landed a 40-inch muskie.

Accompanying them in another boat was Donald Free and Douglas Maybee.

Mr. Maybee hooked and landed a 40-inch lunge and afterwards smoked a pack of cigarettes in quiet—his shattered nerves. Donald Free, a non-smoker, assisted Mr. Maybee in getting the first cigaret going.

Lucille Ball on Threshold Of New Career, Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —Lucille Ball, who needs another job like a centipede needs another leg, is on the threshold of a new career: Radio. Starting Labor Day, Lucy will preside over a 10-minute weekday CBS program called Let's Talk With Lucy.

Already the star of a popular CBS television series and president of the enormous, multi - million - dollar Desilu productions, Lucy carries a tape recorder wherever she goes, just in case she runs into someone or something interesting.

"I've always liked radio," the red - haired comedienne said, "but I'd sort of forgotten what a really important thing it is to so many people."

The subject of a daily radio show was broached after Garry Moore, who had a daily radio show on CBS for years, decided on a broadcasting sabbatical.

"It seemed to be a good chance to talk about all sorts of things from bluebirds to mousetraps and not always have to be funny," Lucy said.

Gary Morton, Lucy's husband, will join her often on the program. He also is producing the series.

The three major U.S. television networks, which have invested millions of dollars and deployed tons of equipment and their top reporters, are busily stempiing to drum up suspense and excitement over the Democratic national convention, which starts Monday in Atlantic City. Political leaders will be popping up for interviews all over the channels during the weekend.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Four horses have died in the last few days at Fort Erie Race Track and, although track officials said they appeared to be nothing irregular about the deaths, an investigation is under way to determine the cause.

Sailmaker dropped dead outside his stall from a ruptured blood vessel earlier this week after completing a race, and Esprit Gal suffered a heart attack.

Two other horses also have died, and their bodies have been shipped to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph for an autopsy. Cause of these two deaths is unknown.

A report is expected in about a week.

TO HELP HANDICAPPED

The Beatle Invasion Begins In Hollywood on Sunday

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Notes and comment on the Hollywood scene:

The Los Angeles police wish this was the weekend that wasn't. The Beatle invasion begins Sunday when the British quartet set down their chartered plane at an undisclosed field. The plan is for them to radio in their destination shortly before their arrival from Vancouver, thus to avoid a mob scene—they hope.

They will have a press conference, then leave for the concert at the Hollywood Bowl, whose 22,000 seats were sold out hours after they went on sale two months ago.

Turned down by leading hotels, the Beatles are to be staying at the home of a television executive. They are scheduled to appear Monday night at a party tendered by movie stars and others who are permitted to bring their children. All will pay $25 a head to benefit the Hemophilia Foundation.

Venice (Calif.) seemed like a good location for the Venice (Italy) tragedy of Othello, so the Theatre-by-the-Sea put the classic on its summer schedule. Everything went wrong at this week's opening.

Desdemona quit at 4 p.m. before the opening and a sub was hastily called. Iago was another recruit and had to read some of his scenes from the book. Jet planes seemed to delight in circling the outdoor arena.

But Shakespeare's genius prevailed and the audience stayed to 12:45 to cheer the cast. Now Othello appears the bit of the season.

Charges Against Former Mayors Are Remanded

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont. (CP)— The cases against former mayor Wanda Miller of Gravenhurst and former mayor Glen Coates of Bracebridge, charged in connection with share dealings with Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company Limited, were adjourned when the two appeared in court Thursday.

Magistrate Thomas Bradman of Bracebridge, who refused to hear the cases a week ago because the two former mayors are long-time friends of his, continued the adjournment until Oct. 5 for Mr. Coates and Oct. 14 for Mrs. Miller.

Special Magistrate A. J. Marck of Hamilton, who is to hear the cases, was in the court room but did not take the bench.

Magistrate Thomas freed the two without bail last week and he sat no bail Thursday. The charges against them still have been heard in court.

BAIL CONTINUED

Magistrate Marck Wednesday declined to accept $5,000 bail from Orillia mayor Wilbur Cowan, who he appeared in court in Orillia on similar charges.

Mr. Justice Leo Landreville, who resigned as mayor of Sudbury in 1956 to take a place on the Ontario Supreme Court bench, has been remanded on similar charges to Sept. 21. He is free on $5,000 bail.

The charges allege that Mrs. Miller, Cramp and Coates accepted $1,000 shares as consideration for granting franchises to the gas company in 1956. The shares were purchased with Consumers Gas.

Mr. Justice Landreville is charged with accepting the shares as a consideration for granting a franchise and with conspiracy.

Not Directed Against Canada Says Martin

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs—Minister Martin said Thursday he is confident that France's decision to cut certain financial assistance to Canada was not directed towards Ottawa.

Mr. Martin, replying to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker in the Commons question period, said France's diplomatic activity in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization has been helpful.

NATO interest in the Cyprus dispute was not an attempt to interfere with the peacekeeping steps through the United Nations, but was a legitimate interest in a dispute between two of NATO's members, Greece and Turkey, Mr. Martin added.

Mr. Diefenbaker said there is progress report on negotiations to obtain wider powers for the UN peacekeeping force in Cyprus. He also asked for Canadian support to a call by France for an end of NATO interference in Cyprus.

Mr. Martin said the situation in Cyprus has improved. Negotiations for augmented powers for the peacekeeping force are continuing.

Stuart Fleming PC — Okanagan-Revelstoke) noted that the Secretary-General U Thant has said that the UN force in Cyprus will have to volunteer funds before Sept. 26 because of lack of financing.

Mr. Martin said Canada and Ireland are the only two members of the force paying their own way. They have to volunteer $2,000,000 short fund now pay $2,000,000 short of the amount needed to pay for the contingents of other countries.

NUDISTS RAIDED

SAINT - TROPEZ (AP) — Beach police raided nudist hideouts along this section of the French Riviera Thursday and arrested 23 men and women on charges of indecent exposure. Police said they acted after receiving numerous complaints from parents whose children were at the beaches.

New Salvation Army Head In Canada and Bermuda Will Take Flying Tour of Canada

By CAROLYN COLE

TORONTO (CP)—"We shall try to put the Salvation Army on wings," joked Commissioner Edgar Grinstead as he outlined the flying tour he and his wife will make of Canada before he settles down in his new post as the territorial commander of the Salvation Army in Canada and Bermuda.

He may not be far wrong.

Commissioner Grinstead, who comes to Canada after serving as the British commissioner since 1957, has some definite ideas about reaching the youth of the country.

The former supervisor of Salvation Army youth work throughout the world is enthusiastic about the "fine and virile spirit of army work in Canada and Bermuda.

"We are going through a transitional period. We have many young people with a good background but now with cars and great affluence, the church may be losing its way among the youth.

"We must find a way to speak to youth in the idiom of today. Religious feeling is inherent but we need a spiritual awakening."

Commissioner Grinstead, himself an accomplished musician, is proud of London's Salvation Strings, an army group which has taken hymns and gospel songs and made them "swing" — even on the steps of St. Paul's Cathedral.

"They've made the first 10 in the recording business. It is nothing to see them carry a crowd of 2,000 teen-agers."

Commissioner Grinstead also plans to inaugurate such groups in Canada as soon as possible.

"It has priority," he says, but he feels he should study the folk content of Canadian music before they begin.

"The Salvation Army are quite a decent bunch of fellows," he says.

"I hope to express youth's desire for action, for fun, and to provide the right kind of program to turn the energy in the proper direction."

Johnson Warned Not to Let Congo Be African Viet Nam

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Johnson has been cautioned by Moscow and Peking—and by one of his own Democratic senators—not to let the Congo become an "African Viet Nam."

It's a safe bet that another Viet Nam is just about the last thing the American president wants as the presidential election campaign comes on.

But the other horn of his dilemma is that he can't afford, politically or strategically, to let the pro-Communist regime fall by default to a Communist-oriented rebellion.

It is with these factors in mind, apparently, that Johnson has authorized limited military aid to the wavering Congolese regime of Premier Moise Tshombe.

There are any number of good reasons why the U.S. might want to step far away from the Congolese situation.

One is the proven difficulty of bringing stability to such a massive and untamed country. Another is the risk of bringing the Congo openly into the cold war arena. A third is the danger of antagonizing other African countries which have no love for Tshombe.

American policy-makers can hardly fail to note the irony of a situation in which the people can taxpayers are paying to uphold Tshombe, the same man two years ago they were paying to unseat his Katanga province regime.

And the Congo's African neighbors can hardly fail to be unhappy about the return of white mercenaries, leftovers from Tshombes' Katangan army, to fly U.S. aircraft against the rebels.

The mercenaries are reported to include South African and Rhodesians as well as some Europeans and anti-Castro Cubans. Their return is dismissed in hope that other African countries would answer Tshombe's request for an international force to restore order It also left any chance of a new UN operation to replace the force that pulled out June 30.

The U.S. policy supporting plans for the white mercenaries, has left itself open to certain criti-

Congolese Army Regains Bukavu In Savage Battle

Win Provides Tshombe With Big Morale Boost

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—The Congolese Army has won a major victory that may provide Premier Moise Tshombe's struggling government with a psychological boost in its fight against Communist-backed insurgents.

The government had control today of the heavily damaged northeastern city of Bukavu after a savage three-day battle that left at least 300 dead, including perhaps seven Europeans. Ex-Katangan gendarmes airlifted in U.S. transport planes joined Congolese troops in scattering the rebels and retaining control of the capital of South Kivu province.

The battle marked the army's first—key military success in months following repeated rebel advances. It enabled the central government to maintain at least a foothold in Eastern Congo, where rebels control the big cities of Albertville and Stanleyville.

Tshombe's government began the expulsion of citizens of the former French Congo, Burundi and Mali. Trucks, buses and planes took the deportees to the Congo River for the two-mile ferry ride to Brazzaville. Soldiers with rifles and clubs chased them aboard.

MAY EXPEL 50,000

Sources said Tshombe hopes to force Brazzaville's President Alphonse Massamba-Debat and his pro-Communist regime to stop aid to the rebels by pouring thousands of homeless and unemployed into the capital. Some 50,000 persons may be expelled.

In Bukavu, 1,000 miles east of Leopoldville, efforts began to restore the city to normal. All shops closed and residents were without water, electricity or telephone service.

The rebels retreated westward Friday toward Shabunda in the face of a fierce Congolese counterattack. Col. Leonard Mulamba's 800 troops, reinforced with gendarmes from Leopoldville, struck back Thursday night with rebel bands surrounding them, reports reaching Leopoldville said.

Two U.S.-made T-28 planes equipped with machine - guns and rockets pounded rebel positions. The army reported to be flown by anti - Castro Cuban exiles.

A U.S. transport plane evacuated 60 wounded Congolese soldiers and 10 dead to Leopoldville. A breakdown of casualties was not available.

2 Questions Awaiting Convention

By ARCH MacKENZIE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (CP)—Two main questions await the 34th national Democratic party convention which opens here Monday with all the cheerful chaos but little of the suspense normally generated.

The basic unknown, at a convention where President Lyndon Johnson's nomination is a formality, is the extent of the traditionally - Democratic South's dissatisfaction with national policies on civil rights.

It probably will focus early on efforts of predominantly-Negro rebel delegations from Mississippi, and perhaps from Alabama, to oust the pro-segregation old guard from one or or both these state voting groups.

The second event, which normally is merely a convention by-product, is just who President Johnson will choose as his vice-presidential candidate for the Nov. 3 election, in which Senator Barry Goldwater will be Republican presidential candidate and Representative William Miller of New York, his vice-presidential running mate.

Most sign point to Hubert H. Humphrey, the liberal-minded senior senator from Minnesota. He is a token of the continental nature of this 34th convention that the matter has received so much speculative attention.

FIRST IN ATLANTIC CITY

This is the political background for the convention, first by either party to be held in this honky-tonk boardwalk city and which will draw an estimated 12,000 people during its five days.

Perhaps more interesting to the 58,000 convention-blaise residents are the impending visits of the Beatles and Miss America beauty contestants.

The site is the 13-storey Municipal Arena, a huge architectural cavern capable of seating 60,000 people within its sevenacre spread. It has received a $2,225,000 touching up, including air conditioning, for the benefit of the 5,260 Democratic party delegates and alternates selected by various means from

Cypriot Rejects U.S. Plan

From AP-Reuters

NICOSIA (CP) — Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, has again rejected a Cyprus peace proposal made by former U.S. state secretary Dean Acheson.

Makarios also denied reports Friday night that Greece had asked him to reject any Soviet military aid and accept the Acheson plan.

The formula offered by Acheson at the Cyprus talks in Geneva suggests:

—Eventual union of Cyprus with Greece;

—Creation of a sovereign Turkish military base on Cyprus;

—Giving Turkey a small Greek island.

—Protection for the Turkish-Cypriot minority.

Rejecting the plan, the archbishop said: "The Acheson plan removes the Cyprus problem from its correct basis and cannot be a basis for discussion." He made his statements to reporters after almost 30 hours of continuous consultations here with Greek Defence Minister Petros Garoufalias.

VISIT VILLAGES

Garoufalias and Makarios visited Greek-Cypriot villages in northern Cyprus attacked by Turkish jets earlier this month in retaliation for a Greek-Cyp-

Call to Abolish Illiteracy In Commonwealth Areas Made at Ottawa Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — Mr. Chagla, India's minister of education, has called for a concerted drive to abolish illiteracy in Commonwealth countries.

He suggested to the third Commonwealth education conference Friday that a target be set so that one-quarter of the world's population would have all the benefits of modern education. His proposal was one of many put forward at the opening sessions of the two - week meeting, attended by some 200 representatives of 33 Commonwealth countries and territories.

Mrs. Susana Al Hassan, Ghana's deputy minister of education, extended an invitation to hold the next conference at Accra and announced that her government will award 10 scholarships for study in Ghana.

Meanwhile, she urged that the conference study the creation of a Commonwealth scheme of training overseas and that steps be taken to provide a training scheme for women in such fields as home economics and nursing education.

A proposal by Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, conference president and former Governor-General of Canada, that the world's fair facilities in Montreal might be turned into a Commonwealth study centre after 1967 met favorable response.

John L. Ewing, New Zealand director of primary education, said he thought the idea of a Commonwealth institute should be vigorously pursued.

Kenya's delegate, Education Minister J. D. Otiende, was one of several who stressed the urgent problems of the lack of trained teachers. He said that between 1964 and 1970 his country would need 1,500 graduate teachers in secondary schools but would be producing only 400 locally.

The conference chairman, Quebec Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie, indicated to reporters his hopes that the conference would embark on new ground in seeking definition of the use of audio-visual aids in education.

Little Evidence in Saigon Buddhist Leaders Oppressed

SAIGON (AP)—Angry Buddhist demonstrators are in South Vietnamese streets again, and the trappings look much the same as those leading up to overthrow of the Ngo Dinh Diem regime last year.

The similarity ends there but seasoned Saigon observers are puzzled by developments.

While Buddhist leaders have charged their faith again is being oppressed, there seems to be little evidence supporting the charge.

Buddhists have been permitted to fly their flag at publicly held major rallies and even denounce the Nguyen Khanh government on the radio. Students were permitted Friday to demonstrate in front of the presidential office and carry in a demand for Khanh's resignation.

Buddhists and students are demanding an end to military government, the state of emergency decree, press censorship, night curfew, alleged Buddhist persecution and abrogation of the national charter promulgated by Khanh last Sunday.

But orders calling for anti-government agitation were signed by Viet Nam's two top Buddhist leaders Aug. 14, before Khanh had himself elected chief of state and promulgated the charter.

Part of the unrest seems to arise from Buddhist objection to the cluster of Maj. Gen. Duong Van Minh and his civilian cabinet Jan. 30. Minh is popular with Buddhists for having led the military revolt against Diem last November.

Buddhist leaders want to make sure they can command the fear of the government. Buddhists are angry that many hold-overs of the Diem regime still are in office. This extends particularly to Maj.-Gen. Do Cao Tri, commander of the Vietnamese army's 2nd Corps, who joined the anti-Diem revolution only in its final stages.

In Tri's area a number of houses belonging to Buddhists were burned down recently by local officials, after occupants objected to attending a government "re - education meeting." Khanh removed the responsible officials and sought reparations to the families involved.

Khanh is a Buddhist. Diem was a Roman Catholic.

Many regard the attitude of Buddhist leader Tri Quang as enigmatic. Tri Quang, who came from Hue last summer to take charge of the Buddhist insurrection, escaped arrest during the pagoda raids by taking refuge at the U.S. Embassy.

While he has publicly expressed friendship with the gratitude to the Americans and has said he is opposed to neutralization of South Viet Nam, some U.S. political observers have expressed doubts about him.

Last summer Buddhists were

Eight Killed In Wreck

LEONARD, Ont. (CP) — A five-ton truck loaded with gravel slammed into a rear coach of a CPR passenger train early Friday, killing the truck driver and seven of the train's passengers.

Another 25 persons were injured, some of them critically, in the level-crossing crash in this quiet farm hamlet about 20 miles southeast of Ottawa.

The crack non-stop train left Union Station in Ottawa at 7:55 a.m. Dubbed the "businessmen's special," it was due to arrive in Montreal at 10 a.m.

But at 8:20 a.m. as the eight-unit train sped through the crossing — unmarked except for wooden X arms —there was a sickening crash as the truck ripped into the third-last car being pulled by the diesel engine.

The impact threw the coach from the track, taking with it a diner and a parlor car. The death coach turned over on its side but the other two cars remained upright.

The dead are:

Vietnamese Buddhists Demand Khanh Release Four Generals

SAIGON (AP) — Buddhist leaders called today for the release of four South Vietnamese Army generals under house arrest since Maj.-Gen. Nguyen Khanh's assumption of power last Jan. 30.

The generals belonged to the junta that seized power from President Ngo Dinh Diem last Nov. 1. Khanh later placed them under house arrest in the mountain resort of Dalat, 140 miles northwest of Saigon.

While the Buddhists agitated in the cities, the war continued to take its toll in the Communist - infested jungles. A U.S. servicemen was killed near the Laotian frontier, 300 miles north of the capital, in a Viet Cong ambush of a government patrol Friday.

Monks also took up the argument recently voiced in student demonstrations that the United States should "understand the aspirations of the Vietnamese people." Student demands that the United States for allegedly interfering in the internal affairs of Viet Nam by supporting what they called dictatorial government politics.

Almost continuous Buddhist and student demonstrations are under way throughout South Viet Nam, most of them with a strongly anti - government flavor.

Students have laid down an ultimatum to President Khanh that he must agree to turn the government over to civilians, rescind the state of emergency decree and rid the government of "anti-Buddhist revengists."

In Hue, 400 miles to the north, some 2,000 young demonstrators marched through the streets today demanding the resignation of the government.

Bolivia Breaks With Cuba

A communique said Bolivia considered it her duty to abide with the sanctions voted against Cuba by the Organization of American States last month in Washington.

Johnson Guides Bid to Settle Fight Over Southern Delegates

ATLANTIC CITY (AP)—With the unseen hand of President Johnson guiding them, Democrats try today to compromise a civil rights fight that might make a shambles out of their convention when it opens Monday.

The word from the president was to play it cool at a scheduled convention credentials committee session today when protests come up on the seating of the Mississippi and Alabama delegates who had advertised their intention of not voting for the president in the November election.

The difficulty was that Chairman David L. Lawrence of the credentials committee could not ignore the three bus loads of representatives of the Negro-dominated Mississippi Freedom Democratic party who were on hand to contest the "regulars" chosen under the auspices of Governor Paul Johnson of Mississippi. The governor had sent an uninstructed delegation to the convention, delaying a choice of electors until Sept. 8.

Lawrence's instructions were to do what he could to placate all sides, to try for any compromise that seemed likely to offer the possibility of acceptance. But in the same breath he had said he not to surrender to the non-Johnson regulars.

Whatever Lawrence's committee decided there was a possibly the controversy would be projected to the convention floor. The necessary eight state delegations were lined up to vote to send it there if the Mississippi Freedom Democratic delegation was not satisfied.

All of this, of course, added up to a by-play to a convention which had only one real unanswered question — who did Johnson want for his running mate?

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, who was everywhere, speaking, gesticulating, talking to the problems that confronted the administration and generally deporting himself as helpful assistant president, remained the leading contender. But there were expressed doubts Johnson would pick Humphrey.

When politicians indulged in this sort of speculation, they most often came up with the name of Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, who succeeded Johnson as the Senate's Democratic leader. Mansfield has said he doesn't want the nomination and wouldn't accept it if it came to him.

There was a great deal of talk about the wording of platform planks. Governor George Wallace of Alabama called in testimony before the platform committee for a plank demanding repeal of the Civil Rights Act.

Governor Endicott Peabody of Massachusetts, whose mother went to jail in Florida after participating in civil rights demonstrations, was on the other side of this question.

There was understanding among the knowledgeable delegates was that lines for the platform had been drawn up at the White House previously and the changes as the result of testimony taken in Washington and here would be only minor.

There was speculation, however, that some definitive statement of Democratic aims might come out of an afternoon meeting of Johnson with Democratic governors in Washington.

Changes Stand Question Test Of Confidence

Defeat Will Not Mean Fall of Government

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — There didn't appear much danger of it anyway, but Prime Minister Pearson says any defeat of the government on the flag issue won't result in the fall of the Liberal administration and a consequent general election.

He said in the Commons Friday that all MPs will be free to vote as they choose on the flag, no matter what official party policies might dictate. He thus ditched his hard line—that the government would regard as a test of confidence its proposal for a maple leaf flag.

The other parties have indicated they favor a free vote as well.

Whether a free vote with party discipline removed will cause many—or any—MPs to change their views appeared doubtful.

Quebec Conservatives and New Democratic Socia l Credit and Creditiste party members had already made clear they would vote for a distinctive national flag—enough to give the minority Liberal government a comfortable majority.

MEETINGS FALL

The search for a compromise on the flag issue ended in failure Friday — temporarily at least—after three meetings during the week among the five party leaders.

Mr. Pearson said in the Commons the meetings had tried to reach agreement on a time limit for the flag debate but that there was no unanimity. He said he had told the other leaders the government would look upon each of the flag votes they would include two Conservative Amendments for a plebiscite now before the House as "entirely free votes."

Mr. Pearson also said the door will be left open for any future meetings of party or floor leaders on a possible compromise. Meanwhile, the debate will go on — presumably unflagginly.

IDENTIFY DEAD

It was interrupted Friday for a two-hour discussion of the $80,469,000 appropriation for the forestry department.

Conservative MP Ellen Fairclough said Mr. Pearson's promise of a free vote had come too late, that attitudes already had frozen. He indicated that his party will, as a whole, continue to argue in favor of the Red Ensign.

He proposed that the Com-

Rain Cuts Crowds As CNE Opens

TORONTO (CP) —Rain poured down but relatively few people poured through the gates of the Canadian National Exhibition for its opening day Friday.

The opening day attendance was 21,500 compared with 124,500 in 1963. And the weather office predicted more rain for today.

However, the evening grandstand show went on despite the adverse weather conditions. Television comedian Jack Carter and Irish-born singer Carmel Quinn, this year's headliners, upheld the tradition that the show must go on.

About 10,000 marchers and 50 bands comprised of army, navy and air force personnel will stage a two-hour march past while Air Marshall W A. Curtis will take the salute at the Warrior's Day parade today.

J. M. Fraser, president of the CNE, told the first exhibition's directors luncheon Friday that the cold war would be won in the farm fields.

"Food producing resources of our land must be preserved, not only for Canadians but also for the hungry people of the world, said Mr. Fraser, a farmer.

Lieutenant - Governor Earl Rowe of Ontario touched off a button which started cannons roaring to mark the official opening of this annual extravaganza of noise, lost children, and fun. The rain forced officials to perform the opening ceremony inside an enclosure instead of in the open.

SINGER GETS DIVORCE

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — Singer Dinah Shore divorced Maurice A. Smith, her estranged husband, after testifying Friday he criticized her so much "I couldn't make a independent decision." Smith, a contractor, and Miss Shore were married May 26, 1963, and separated last May 10. On May 9, 1962, she divorced actor George Montgomery to whom she had been married 18 years.

Red China Is Not to Have Finger on Soviet Nuclear Trigger After Viet Nam Crisis

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP)—Western diplomats, looking back on Russia's carefully measured response to the United States air strikes at North Viet Nam, see it as a demonstration that Red China is no to have a finger on the Soviet nuclear trigger.

The Soviet Union had made an effort in preceding months to let the Chinese and the Communist North Vietnamese know that they could not count on automatic Russian support should they clash with the U.S.

Hints to this effect were contained in a succession of Soviet statements forming part of the incessant public wrangle between the two Communist giants on ideological matters.

The Kremlin's non-committal reaction to U.S. blows against North Vietnamese patrol - torpedo-boats on Aug. 5 provided concrete evidence that the Russians meant what they said.

Observers here doubt however that the Soviet response or lack of response was predicated on getting such a message across. Rather, it was conditioned by a whole set of factors summed up by one diplomatic observer as "zeopolitics."

RUSSIA LACKED POWER

Russia, he said, was not in a position to do anything about the American action even if it wanted to, since it does not have any power of its own to bring immediately to bear in Southeast Asia.

It had to avoid making any commitment of support for China and North Viet Nam that it could not make good.

Aside altogether from the stark realities of the power equation, Soviet policy is not to support for the two Communist countries would have been out of step with its present soft line on China and Southeast Asia.

Russia has often accused the Chinese Communists of fostering international tension by rejecting the Soviet policy of peaceful coexistence among countries with different social systems.

The Soviets have long been concerned about the danger of an explosion in Southeast Asia resulting from Communist pressure there.

Further, the Soviets want to extricate themselves from entanglement in a region where they no longer appear to have any influence. A firm declaration of support for North Viet Nam and China could only have prolonged Soviet involvement while tacitly encouraging the two countries to continue pressing.

In retrospect, Soviet reaction during the first 48 hours of the Viet Nam crisis seems to have been marked by hesitation and possibly confusion. The Soviet press accused the U.S. of an "openly brutal act" and talked of the danger of large scale military conflict.

NO SOVIET ULTIMATUM

However there was no hint of an ultimatum to the U.S. or of Soviet retaliation. The Soviets weighed their words and tried to find out what the intentions of premier Khrushchev continued a tour of agricultural regions.

There was clear hint that danger of more serious conflict had passed, on Aug. 8, Mr. Khrushchev in a speech at Ordzhonikidze condemned U.S. "aggressive actions" and warned that Russia would defend Socialist countries should "imperialists" impose war on them.

Some observers here felt that the Soviet premier was speaking for the record—to forestall any accusation that Russia had forsaken Communist countries in their hour of need.

They noted that throughout the period of crisis, the dispute with China continued unabated in the Soviet press. They also noted that, ironically, the same day the Soviet Union issued a pre-prepared joint statement by Russia, the U.S. and Britain came out hailing the first anniversary of the nuclear partial test ban treaty.

The previous day Premier Khrushchev himself had published what is a "certain fund of confidence" between Russia and the West.

Red China has never ceased denouncing the treaty.

SHRINER'S PICNIC

ALEMITE

On Saturday, August 15 children who attended Children's Playground attended the Shriner's Picnic at Mr. and Mrs. Muelner's cottage at Rabbit Lake.

There were pony rides and boat rides all afternoon. The children performed many stunts off the diving tower even though there was rain and it was quite cool.

The Shriners cooked hamburgs and hot dogs for the children and they had ice cream and soft drinks.

Before going home they were given many treats including comic books.

A wonderful day was had by all. Transportation supplied by school station wagon, Shriners Bob Brown and George Botting.

On Wednesday, August 19 the children were taken to the Belleville Fair. They saw the horses, barrel racing and the six-horse tandems.

They saw the grandstand show and had a ride on a horse.

Mr. Sullivan from the Conklin Farm and China could only have prolonged Soviet involvement while tacitly encouraging the two countries to continue pressing.

In retrospect, Soviet reaction during the first 48 hours of the Viet Nam crisis seems to have been marked by hesitation and possibly confusion. The Soviet press accused the U.S. of an "openly brutal act" and talked of the danger of large scale military conflict.

NO SOVIET ULTIMATUM

However there was no hint of an ultimatum to the U.S. or of Soviet retaliation. The Soviets weighed their words and tried to find out what the intentions of premier Khrushchev continued a tour of agricultural regions.

There was clear hint that danger of more serious conflict had passed, on Aug. 8, Mr. Khrushchev in a speech at Ordzhonikidze condemned U.S. "aggressive actions" and warned that Russia would defend Socialist countries should "imperialists" impose war on them.

Some observers here felt that the Soviet premier was speaking for the record—to forestall any accusation that Russia had forsaken Communist countries in their hour of need.

They noted that throughout the period of crisis, the dispute with China continued unabated in the Soviet press. They also noted that, ironically, the same day the Soviet Union issued a pre-prepared joint statement by Russia, the U.S. and Britain came out hailing the first anniversary of the nuclear partial test ban treaty.

The previous day Premier Khrushchev himself had published what is a "certain fund of confidence" between Russia and the West.

Red China has never ceased denouncing the treaty.

Manitoba Minister Resigns Post

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Provincial Secretary Maitland Steinkopf announced Friday night that had tendered his resignation to Premier Duff Roblin.

Mr. Steinkopf made the announcement in a brief statement, said a similar version of the legislature opened.

In the statement, Mr. Steinkopf said a split has developed clarify his position and validate his election in 1962, had not received the support he had hoped for.

The legislature earlier Friday voted 30 to 28 in defeating an amendment to the bill which called on the government to defer action until the courts decide on the matter.

Mr. Steinkopf said the vote on the 13 members of the amendment showed "they do not share my belief" that any prior delay on this part was on on a technicality.

The government introduced the bill because of a possible infraction of the Legislative Assembly Act in 1962 when Mr. Steinkopf acted as an unpaid agent of the government in arranging the purchase of property. The act forbids any person who executes a contract for the Crown involving the expenditure of public money to hold a seat.

Temple Answers Charges Against Northern Electric

Charges in the House of Commons by Conservative Electric Power inquired a lack of competition were answered in a recent debate by Robert Temple, MP for Hastings South.

Mr. Temple took the opportunity during a debate on a private bill increasing the directorate of Bell Telephone Company to include one following statement in his remarks:

"I should like to speak on this bill because of the fact several references have been made to Northern Electric Company and the fact that there has been a lack of competition so far as Northern Electric is concerned. Allegations have been made that Northern Electric people well have things under their own way. The reason I take an interest in this matter is that I am the father of Northern Electric Company in Belleville. I make it a habit to go through my riding at often as I can and visit the various manufacturing plants, in order to ascertain their problems and find out as much as I can about their relationship to these various industries.

I have come to know something of Northern Electric and its relationship to the Belleville plant of Northern Electric.

As I have said, there has been some talk in this committee about the lack of competition in Northern Electric because it is a subsidiary. I want to talk about something Northern Electric did which has a direct connection with what they have a great deal of competition in the field of sales market. The Belleville plant of this company has manufactured for the United States two items which alone have brought in over $2 million in sales. The first is a radio tube for Belleville and it is good for Canada. One of these items is a television picture tube rejected which was designed by Northern Electric in Canada and supplied to the United States market in competition with other United States electronics firms. It was sold on the American broadcasting System and installed by Northern Electric in New York City, Chicago and Detroit near the company is selling more of these items in various United States cities.

The other items the parliamentary secretary mentioned was designed and manufactured by the Belleville plant. These amplifiers are used in trop spheric scatter systems. They are exported to the United States by incorporation by Radio Engineering Laboratories into their scatter systems, which are also sold on a world wide basis. Tropospheric scatter systems permit multichannel telephone, television and data transmission without line of sight transmissions. Now, this is the kind of thing which Canada needs, and it is something that the Belleville plant is doing. We all know, Mr. Chairman, that we need more exports, we need more United States dollars to help with our balance of trade problems."

These things are provided by Northern Electric. They are imaginative; they are scientific. They are going ahead. They are doing a good job and also they are creating a great deal of employment at Belleville. I myself know, so far as the Belleville operation is concerned, that it is very good one. They are entering into competition, and with some insight and ingenuity they are coming out on top.

Blast Damages Milford Mill

Damage estimates run from $1,400 to $2,400 after a blasting accident at Milford Tuesday. There were no injuries in the accident.

Murray Hicks, proprietor of the village's general store, explained that he was blasting the shale rock in front of his feed mill, beside the store, so he could install underground gas tanks. The blast, he says, apparently travelled along a seam in the rock to the mill and it wrecked the front of the ce-mented block building. There was no damage, he said, to the store.

The mill is still operative, Mr. Hicks said today, "but it's hard to get in and out now," he added.

Two Public Opinion Polls Regarding British Election Cannot Both Be Right

BY ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — The only thing certain about the findings of Britain's two big public opinion polls as regards the October general election, is that they can't both be right.

At any rate, the recent wide disagreement between them provides the only life in the traditionally dull August political scene, this month being no exception even though the election is only two months away.

The politicians and other observers keep a sharp eye on the polls, but tend to disagree in their interpretations of the figures. Harold Wilson, opposition Labor leader, says polls are "traditionally feverish in the summer," and experience indicates the truth of this observation.

The polls—The Daily Mail's national opinion poll, and the Gallup poll published by The Daily Telegraph both Conservative papers—were in full agreement last summer when, during the height of the Profumo scandal, they gave the Labor party a 20-per-cent lead.

Since then they have alternated in the lead, Gallup reported, although both gradually showed increasing strength by the Conservatives. Two months ago both indicated an eight - per-cent lead by Labor.

Then came the parting of the ways.

PREDICT TORY WIN

The Mail caused a stir last week by predicting that if an election were held immediately the Tories would win by 30 seats. Gallup, at its national opinion poll said, in fact, that that Labor was still ahead by a slim four cent.

Explaining this apparent discrepancy, The Mail noted that the survey did not include Northern Ireland, where the 12 seats have always been solidly Conservative. Also The Mail says the Tories have "a hidden advantage" because of the way in which the constituency boundaries are drawn, some dividing industrial areas traditionally Labor between two or more constituencies.

"On this basis, therefore, subject to the usual sampling error, the real position is a Tory lead of 1.9 per cent."

The gallup poll subsequently disagreed. Its count showed the Labor party ahead by seven cent, a swing up enough per cent over the previous week.

The Tory party was at pains to explain that it took no comfort from the national opinion poll figures, possibly on the advice of experts who feared workers might relax their efforts.

On the other hand, the Labor party draws some encouragement from the figures. A party spokesman noted that in August before the 1959 general election the polls put the Conservatives leads of between five and six per cent. But by election day, Oct. 8, the Tory leads were down to two and 3.9 per cent. The actual election results gave Conservatives a lead of 4.2 per cent.

Ottawa Calm About Russian Air Capacity

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department declined to get excited this week over an apparently chilling — for Canada— statement in Washington by U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara.

McNamara said: "The Soviet Union is not with difficulty, place over this country (the U.S.) on two - way missions slightly more than 100 heavy bombers, plus 150 medium bombers capable of striking only Canada and the northwestern corner of the U.S."

One defence official here commented: "It's absurd to say, think that the Russians might send 150 bombers against us alone with the knowledge that they would be obliterated by American retaliation."

Informants conceded that RCAF Air Defence Command now is little more than a token force. It has 64 operational Voodoo jet interceptors—18 at Chatham, N.B., 18 at Bagotville, Que., and 12 at Comox, B.C., plus 56 nuclear-tipped Bomarc anti-aircraft missiles at North Bay, and La Macaza, Que.

But, sources said, the point was that Canada was patrolling its own air space. Moreover, the Voodoos would be able to play an important part in any war in a tit-for when they were equipped with nuclear missiles by October.

GLAMOROUS CALVES

CALGARY (CP) — Calves have taken on a new beauty around here—the bovine kind, four legs not two. The barnyard beauties are the result of efforts of 4-H members here who have tried artificial devices to glamorize the calves. High on the list of current efforts are such "cosmetics" as dish-washing detergents, bleaches and electric hair clippers. Some of the animals are groomed with hair spray and corn starch is used to keep the young cows' and bulls' knees clean.

Despite Rain Penny Carnival Was Success

TRENTON — In spite of last night's rain, a good number of parents lined the route of the playground parade in Trenton last night, and the fun at Hanna Park to allow their offspring to enjoy the penny carnival.

The parade this year, was the theme, "The Worlds Around Us," was in the opinion of the judges, Mrs. S. Bull, Mrs. V. Treloar and Mrs. M. Gosling the best to date. Floats and costumes were either made by the children themselves or they had a large part in the assembly.

Ontario Hydro And Employees Reach Accord

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission and its employees union have reached tentative agreement on a 5½-cent wage increase for most of the union's 9,000 members on salary and trade scales.

Specific increases have been agreed on for the remaining 200 workers in the construction division field forces.

The two sides have also decided to set up a union-management committee on automation.

A joint statement Friday said final approval of the two-year contract, reached after five months of negotiations, depends on settlement of two issues still outstanding.

Subject — ratification by the commission and the membership of the Ontario Hydro Employees Union, the agreement provides for a two - per - cent wage increase retroactive to April 1 this year and a further 3½ per cent on April 1, 1965. To the hydro's 4,500 workers on trade scales the increases mean about 13 cents on the present lowest hourly rate of $2.29 to $2.42 on 1965, and 16 cents on the top rate of $2.89.

Issues still to be settled are job evaluation, a job evaluation supplement and reorganization of the data processing division and a shift basis.

The new contract would cover the period between April 1 this year to March 31, 1966.

Maple Leaf Capt. Visits Indians in Deseronto

DESERONTO (Special) — George Armstrong of the Toronto Maple Leafs visited the Council Hall on the Indian reserve west of Deseronto last night.

The 34-year-old captain of the Stanley Cup champions was on hand to promote hockey among his people—the Indians.

As Armstrong put it, "I'm here to talk to the Indians because nobody else bothers to talk to the Indians.

It was the 19th Indian reserve the National Hockey League veteran has visited in Ontario since the Leafs won the Stanley Cup last April.

Armstrong stressed the importance of hard work in becoming an NHL player. Armstrong told the young boys in attendance, "If you don't work hard you get beat — 11-0 by Boston."

Armstrong also repeated several items the importance of a good school education.

The "Big Chief," from Falconbridge, Ontario, showed a sharp sense of humor when a stray dog wandered into the hall.

Armstrong remarked, "That sad looking fellow looks like Montreal or Detroit after we beat them last spring." As the dog whined on his way out the door Armstrong added, "He's crying like they did too."

Armstrong showed a little resentment for the white people when he thought of summer hockey schools. The Chief remarked that "The only good thing about the schools was that they were run by white people who stole money from other while people."

He added that instead of spending 60 dollars to send a son to hockey school for a week the parents would be smarter to rent the ice in their local arena and let all the neighborhood kids go for a skate. He said that there is nothing for a boy to learn about hockey under the age of 16 except to skate.

It was announced just before press time that today's scheduled OBA Bantam baseball playdown, Peterborough vs. Belleville Ellis Printers, has been postponed until Monday. Game time Monday will be 5.30, at the Park Dale diamond.

Reporter Finds Body of Child Under Porch

CINCINNATI (AP) — The grim two-day search for little Debbie Dappen ended late Friday night when a reporter found her body under a porch just a block from her home. Police say a 16-year-old boy who earlier had reported finding the girl's shoe in a culvert has admitted killing her.

Police Chief James Finan of suburban Fairfax said George Rickey Jr., at first denied knowing how the four-year-old girl's body got under his porch. The chief said when young Rickey admitted killing the girl after she screamed when he made sexual advances.

Debbie disappeared after lunch Wednesday. Hundreds of volunteers joined searchers for her. But there was no concrete clue to Debbie's fate until Friday when young Rickey brought one of Debbie's shoes to police and said he had found it in a culvert.

Finan decided late Friday night to ask the youth some more questions about the case —mainly how he had come to find it in an area that had been thoroughly searched.

SEARCH HOUSE

When Finan, patrolman Harry Smith and Sheriff Leo Cooper of Frank Weikel of the Cincinnati Enquirer came to the Rickey Home, young Rickey was asleep. His mother, Mrs. Alicia Rickey readily permitted police to search the house, and Weikel joined in.

While Smith held a flashlight trained under the porch, Weikel crawled in and rummaged through some old building materials stored there. He lifted some clapboards and found Debbie's body.

"I stabbed her with a kitchen knife to stop her screaming, then I couldn't stop because I was afraid she'd tell her mother," Finan quoted the thirty crew-cut boy as saying under questioning later.

Rickey took the girl's body from the living room to the bathroom where he washed off the blood, and carried the body downstairs in bids it under the porch, Finan said. No one else was home.

Screaming Mob Of Teen-agers Greets Beatles

SEATTLE (AP)—A screaming, howling mob of teen-agers, most of them girls, trapped England's mop-haired Beatles in the Coliseum for 59 minutes Friday night before police could spirit them away in an ambulance.

The youngsters, who had screamed and stomped through two hours of rock 'n' roll music surged against police and sailors locked arm in arm in repeated efforts to get at the four Beatles — Ringo Starr, George Harrison, John Lennon and Paul McCartney.

The Beatles performed for 29 minutes and had the big crowd of 14,000 screaming in a continuous roar.

When time came to leave the building, their limousine was mobbed and they were escorted back to their dressing room.

ON TO VANCOUVER

Teen-agers in the British Columbia city face the challenge of penetrating a cloak of secrecy that surrounds the arrival and movements of the Beatles.

A police escort will whisk the Beatles through the city from the airport to Hotel Georgia over an undisclosed route. They will remain in the hotel until a few hours before their performance at Empire Stadium before an expected 27,000 fans.

No one under the age of 21 is being admitted to the hotel unless they are accompanied by parents. Barbed - wire barricades will be used on a fire escape.

Six rows of wire fencing will be used at Empire Stadium to separate the crowd from the Beatles.

Duck-Stamps Proposed

Hon. Arthur Laing, Federal Minister of National Resources, is said to favor the introduction of a duck stamp to Canada.

This would copy U.S. policy. There, duck hunters must purchase stamps, the proceeds from such sales being used to preserve duck habitats.

There is much to be said for this program, but it has its drawbacks. To be worthwhile, the fee for the stamp must be fairly substantial — $3 is suggested. This is small change for those hunters who pay many times this amount to rent the rights to hunt in private marshes, or to hire boats and sometimes guides to hunt on public lands or lakes. But there are a few hunters, including possibly some pensioners, for whom the fee would be high, and there are other hunters, who go out only occasionally, who might be restrained by the fee from hunting at all.

The ideal system would be to relate the fee to the bag — then even the poorest hunter could afford it because he would get more in meat than he would have to pay in licence fees. But there seems no feasible method of applying such a system. A tax on shotgun shells would not work — they are used for many things besides hunting ducks. A tax on the rent of hunting rights might discourage land owners from preserving marshes, having precisely the opposite effect from that desired. A tax on decoys would not catch the man who makes his own.

Perhaps, the best thing sportsmen can do is to accept the duck stamp with good grace — but to make it clear that this acceptance should not be misinterpreted to mean that they would accept a fishing licence with similar equanimity.

A Modern Parable

"Good Samaritan" Leaves Boy to Die.

The story under it described how a Sudbury boy of 15 had fallen over an embankment while chasing a rabbit. A passing motorist had stopped and given the injured boy and his companion a lift, but had refused to drive right to the boy's summer cottage. Instead, he had left him by the roadside 1,500 feet away. The boy's companion had gone for help. On his return with aid, the boy was dead.

That was the story.

It was a terrible one.

It exemplified to an extreme degree that reluctance to become involved with the law of which there are numerous examples in the news almost every day of the week.

It now appears the story may have been untrue.

A blood-stained sports car has been found hidden in the bush and the dead boy's companion has been charged as a juvenile delinquent.

But, regardless of the facts, we are not at all sure that the first story told of this incident is beyond the realm of the possible.

If some motorist of basically kind intentions but an over-developed dislike for complications did not abandon this boy to die, we should not be overly surprised if today's fiction did not become tomorrow's fact, somewhere else on the continent.

This, we suggest, is a modern parable, from which we ought to profit and which ought to lead us to examine our own conduct, in small matters as well as great. How many of us who do not pass by on the other side nevertheless let our convenience, rather than another's need, determine the limits of the succor we offer?

Punishment Fits Crime

This past week a Kingston magistrate sentenced a Kingston area man to two years for the beating of his two children. The magistrate in passing sentence said he was giving the accused the maximum sentence because of the heinous nature of his actions.

This magistrate is to be applauded. Too many children today are beaten, kicked and bloodied in some drunk parent. It is hoped that perhaps this treatment of the accused will at least serve as a warning to those who regard their children as nothing more than chattels and a baby bonus receipt for the next bottle of booze.

In this Kingston case all that is left to be desired is that the father is never allowed custody of his children again. This type of man does not deserve a second chance."

Pity Poor House Leaders, Their Cosy Days Are Gone

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Pity the poor House Leaders—and the men who boss the political parties, Lester Pearson, John Diefenbaker and company—but their deputies who straw-boss the Commons.

These are the five frantic men who, since the last inconclusive election, have managed to so arrange the day-to-day business of this even more inconclusive Parliament that everything doesn't break down—not completely, anyway.

They operate as a sort of Parliamentary club, and back in the not-so-long ago days when there were only three groups in the Commons, it was a pretty tidy little organization.

A sort of charmed inner circle of privilege and power.

It planned, organized, administered and directed, often from behind the scenes, with more or less orderly — until recently — legislative operations.

Its straw-boss members did it by horse-trading.

Often exchanging little notes. All strictly confidential, of course.

Like, for instance: "If you'll guarantee to tag So-and-So on your side of the House, I'll undertake to choke off What's-His-Name on our side."

Or, maybe: "How's about saving off on Bill X like you put one more speaker and we'll answer him, then that's it."

FRIENDLY ENEMIES

They were political foes, these House Leaders, but like opposing enemy troops in war, they kept in touch.

Mostly in round-and-about ways, through little notes or by phone.

But when this wouldn't do, there was always the old personal approach, for deals behind the Commons curtains, in the lobbies of the Chamber, down the corridors of the Centre, West or East Blocks, or in the privacy of their offices. In fact, anywhere they might get away from the hordes of MPs who waited in vain.

And there, in the series and quiet of privacy, conspire how to shut up the noisy Private Members and stem the flood of oratory.

But all that has changed.

The old club has flown apart at the seams under the stress and strain of the Flag Debate.

The House Leaders just aren't talking any more. Not even the temporary clearly impossible deals.

Negotiations have ended. Abruptly.

Lines of communication are down.

Broken.

Even should the Flag Debate, out of sheer boredom and exhaustion, grind to a merciful end, those lines of communication will be difficult, though perhaps not impossible to repair.

But things will never quite be the same again.

For the club members simply don't trust or even respect each other.

And the House itself has little faith in their once considerable authority.

Their power to turn debate on and off like a tap, now entirely lost, began falling away when the number of parties increased from the two old reliables, the Conservatives and Liberals, first to three with the CCF, but more especially with the Socreds making it four.

COMPOUNDED

Now, of course, with Real Caouette and his 26 Creditistes, there are five, and the situation is even more confused.

It was bad enough with just the Socreds.

For then, the House Leaders began discovering that it was necessary to conspire, just not within their own closed and cosy circle, but to consult certain mavericks who wouldn't be bound by the old ground rules.

Conspicuous among those political oddballs who kicked over the traces was a former MP whose voice in the Commons was single-handedly battling, with a magnificently unquenchable flow of oratory, what he warned, in all sincerity, was the "Great Yurko-Mongolian Conspiracy."

House Leaders ducking up to his office in Centre Block for peaceful reading him to quiet down and let the debate come to an end could never be sure when they knocked on his door that they wouldn't find him stretched out on the floor in his long woollen underwear in a sort of yogi trance.

Since then, and particularly in this House of Minorities of the past two years, the Leaders in search of left-limit-debate deals have had to consult the Cassette Creditistes and such independent free - wheelers and blithe Parliamentary spirits as Frank Howard, Arnold Peters and Murdo Martin of the NDP, a trio seldom if ever stuck for a word. Or more likely, a few thousand words.

So the House Leaders, completely frustrated, have been vegetating in the operational discard.

Nobody pays them any mind.

While the species, so rapidly becoming politically obsolescent pantherly in their peculiar Parliament, continues at least to exist in inactivity, it might be well to stuff and mount them before they become completely extinct.

Says Canada Needs People

Hamilton Spectator

Canada, with a land area second only to Russia and China, will reach the 20 million mark in population during 1967. California, the largest population state in the United States, should reach the same mark about the end of 1966. All of which adds up to the fact that it's sometimes easy to understand what was meant when they cry about something being wrong in the state of Denmark as set up by Hamlet.

Evidently something constructive is going to be done about our population problem. Immigration Minister Rene Tremblay has told the Commons that Canada is going to go all out to persuade skilled and substantial men and women to immigrate to Canada. In addition, the immigration department will encourage relatives of families which is to say that those left behind in other lands may be allowed to join their relatives in Canada as a matter of course.

All of this is to the good. For, if there is anything this country needs it is not a good three-cent cigar. It is hundreds of thousands of new citizens. Our aim should be a population of 50 million by the year 2,000. At our present rate of growth, we would be unlikely to hit 35 million by that time.

What seems to concern Mr. Tremblay most is the quality of the immigrant. He does not want to risk allowing untried people into the nation for fear that some of them will turn out to be ne'er-do-wells or worse. The qualifying standards must be high, he thinks, in order to ensure top-notch Canadians of the future.

We agree that the better the immigrants the better for Canada. Nevertheless, many highly qualified people will turn out to remain at home or go elsewhere. We expect, therefore, to fill our present needs with only the cream of the crop. We want many worthy young people who are not skilled, who are not well educated, but who can learn from fine families. Good health, good morals, and average intelligence should be sufficient qualification for those still young enough to learn easily the ways of a new land.

Certainly we do not want a prissy immigration policy. That has been our curse. We have over-estimated our appeal and under-estimated our needs. We aren't so wonderful that we can pick the cream and leave the skim.

Law Should Cover Plazas

Toronto Daily Star

An alarming gap in Ontario law has been revealed by a court decision in Milton. In dismissing a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident, Magistrate James Black ruled that the parking lot of a shopping plaza is not a public thoroughfare within the meaning of the Highway Traffic act.

This ruling is presumably correct in law. The Highway Traffic act was passed before shopping plazas were thought of, and it may well be that the terms of the act cannot be stretched to cover plaza parking lots.

Yet the effect is to leave these places, used daily by hundreds of cars and innumerable pedestrians with no rules to regulate traffic except perhaps the Criminal Code provisions against manslaughter. This will be an encouragement to careless and irresponsible driving around plazas, and may lead to more accidents.

A particularly unfortunate feature of the ruling is that it comes at a time when juvenile gangs of hotrodders and motorcyclists have started using some parking lots for "drag strips." If the Highway Traffic act does not apply, it will be much harder for police to control the practice.

This is a matter the provincial government should not ignore. The decision should be appealed. If it is upheld by a higher court, legislation to fill the gap should be introduced at the next session of the legislature. It may not be sufficient merely to declare that the Highway Traffic act applies to shopping plazas. A new section should be added to the act, dealing with the special problems of large public parking lots and setting out clear rules of safe driving there.

Agent 007 Is No More

Montreal Star

A heart attack has done what all the strategems of SMERSH could never accomplish: James Bond, Secret Agent 007 — licensed to kill — is no more.

A critic once wrote that his creator, Ian Fleming, was "a Sidney Sheldon with spats." Fleming probably winced at the comparison. He, where Spillane has not, did write a literate style, however much it occasionally bogged down in tediously detailing improbable situations. Both, however, rode to fame and fortune on a wave of sex-and-sadism.

Today far more people know of 007 than Sherlock Holmes. Whether he goes down in international favorite is questionable. Tastes in the field of light adventure change rapidly. He'll never be liked in Russia, of course, where he long ago was damned as part of the "sinister worldwide anti - Soviet conspiracy." For a long time, however, fans like Canada's Lt. Gen. Dr. No, Goldfinger, From Russia with Love, and The Moon Raker will be near the top of the paperback best seller list.

Changing Type of Razor May Help Ingrown Hairs

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has a very tough beard and is constantly bothered by ingrown hairs. He tries to tweeze them out and there are so many it takes him an hour or longer to shave. Is there anything he can do to prevent this condition? — Mrs. J. J. L.

Ingrown hair of the beard usually occurs in the neck (but can occur elsewhere.) In the neck, the hairs emerge from the follicle at different angles and in a predictable angles.

What happens is that the hair, instead of growing out normally, "digs into" the skin. Sometimes it curls up, and creates quite a miniature ball of hair under the skin.

Shaving too close is a contributing factor when people tend to have this trouble. Shaving with the angle of the hair, rather than "against the grain" can ease the condition. On the neck, however, it may not always be possible to determine the direction.

Using a different kind of razor may help. For some, an electric razor is more satisfactory.

Pulling out the hairs will sometimes can a cure, but only if temporary relief, since they will grow back again. It is possible, however, if only a few or a few hairs are causing trouble, to have them removed by electrolysis, which is permanent.

In some cases, there can be a disorder of the follicle right at the skin surface. In this case a shopping plaza is not a public thoroughfare within the meaning of the Highway Traffic act.

This ruling is presumably correct in law. The Highway Traffic act was passed before shopping plazas were thought of, and it may well be that the terms of the act cannot be stretched to cover plaza parking lots.

Yet the effect is to leave these places, used daily by hundreds of cars and innumerable pedestrians with no rules to regulate traffic except perhaps the Criminal Code provisions against manslaughter. This will be an encouragement to careless and irresponsible driving around plazas, and may lead to more accidents.

A particularly unfortunate feature of the ruling is that it comes at a time when juvenile gangs of hotrodders and motorcyclists have started using some parking lots for "drag strips." If the Highway Traffic act does not apply, it will be much harder for police to control the practice.

Beatlemania Nothing New

Sarnia Observer

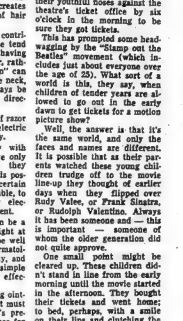
Last week the Beatles were in town (on film — may they never come closer) and some junior members of the screaming-and-dream set were pressing their youthful noses against the theatre's ticket office by six o'clock in the morning to be sure they got tickets.

This has prompted some headwagging by the "Stamp out the Beatles" movement (which includes just about everyone over the age of 25). What sort of a world is this, they say, when children of tender years are allowed to go out in the early dawn to get tickets for a motion picture show?

Well, the answer is that it's the same world, and only the faces and names are different. It's possible that a few parents watched these young children in the trudge off to the movie line-up in the thoughts of earlier days when they flipped over Rudy Valee, or Bryan Hutton, or Rudolph Valentine. Always it has been someone and — this is important — someone of whom the older generation did not quite approve.

One small point might be cleared up. These children didn't stand in line from the early morning until the movie started in the afternoon. They bought their tickets and went home; but, perhaps, left a few adults on their lips and clutching the precious tickets in their hot little hands. Such precautions used to stand in line for hour upon hour to be first in line for the opening of something, but this sort of thing is generally out of favor today. Maybe the present generation lacks the patience or stamina or something — maybe just they have more sense.

To return to the matter of parental approval, older generations have the power to crush the beatles like June-bugs if they wish. All they have to do is to swallow firmly, take their tranquillizers, and make like Beatle fans. For as the Beatles are no longer the exclusive property of the adolescents, they'll hit the togan slide to oblivion. The Beatles' success story is obviously is not their musicianship, or even the fact that teen-agers dislike them. It is the fact that adults can't stand them.



It is even possible that the parents of the screaming Beatlebugs can turn this episode to good advantage. Can a youngster get out of bed in the chilly dawn to get a Beatle ticket argue that he or she deserves to be allowed to bed on a school morning? Or claim that he or she is really excused from school because so many bursae in this area because of the many tendons.

In rare instances that may accumulate there in the bursa because of some injury to the knee joint proper. This can be painful. In that case, or if the swelling is large, surgical removal is the order. But it is not alarming: it is not cancerous.

Acne is one of the most terrible problems of growing up. If you are afflicted with this aggravation, or if you have children who are, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Daily Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of his helpful and comforting booklet: "Acne—The Teen-Age Problem." Please enclose a long, envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

The Golden Years

Keep Husband Out of Kitchen To Assure Happy Retirement

By THOMAS COLLINS

There is no reason why a man and wife cannot weave the pattern of a good life in retirement.

But it helps if the man will stay out of the kitchen.

A kindly wife, a Mrs. Sims, says this, and at the same time gives her recipe for marital happiness when the husband and his pension come home.

"I never allowed our children so much attention that I neglected my husband," she says. "Consequently, we had a wonderful relationship to start retirement with. I had always figured that someday the children would be gone and that I would have only my husband. . ."

Heading Mrs. Sims' rules for the good life is "Talking things over." If either the wife or husband has a habit, or an expression, or anything that annoys the other, then the other says so. And each always tries to reform. "When a man and wife get to the point where they can't talk freely to each other, trouble begins."

SHE RETIRED TOO

Her second rule is that the wife should retire when the husband does. "I retired," she says, "because I felt my time should be arranged to match his. I gave up Scout work, 12 years of civic work, all volunteer work on drives in the community, and everything else that kept me from doing things with my husband when he wanted to do them. There was compensation for me in this. I was no longer pinned down. My husband and I were free to come and go as we pleased. . ."

Her third rule is to let her husband be. If he wants to sit and read she lets him do it. Meanwhile, she sews, crochets, knits, and does other things around the house she likes to do without his company.

Her fourth rule: let him discover the super-market on his own. "My husband had never been in a super-market until he retired. I never asked him to stop at the store for me. Now, he enjoys shopping with me, and I enjoy the delight he shows in the job."

She has learned new things about his favorite meals since he started going to the market.

Mrs. Sims says she takes bikes with her husband, goes for walks in the neighborhood after supper with him. They call on neighbors they feel it best not to disturb in the daytime. Both regard the "getting reacquainted" with friends they had no time to visit in the working years as a major enjoyment of their retirement.

ITS HER KITCHEN

This is what Mrs. Sims says about the kitchen: "My husband does not interfere with me there. Fortunately, he does not cook. The kitchen is my haven, and he leaves it for me to enjoy. There are other things in the home for his attention — repairs inside the house in winter and yard work in summer.

"Why can't men leave their women to their pleasures? I love to cook. I love to experiment with foods since I now have only two people to please. I try exotic dishes. It's fun."

Mrs. Sims says she and her husband are very happy, and have every intention of remaining that way. She thinks her thoughtfulness for her husband earlier in the marriage has had much to do with it. She thinks another important factor has been her awareness of the fact that a husband even in retirement has a need to feel needed.

Mrs. Sims explains that their two children are now happily married and living out of the state. "This is hard to take," she says, "but on the other hand it gives us places to visit."

Annual Fleming Family Picnic Held at Park

Mrs. K. Nicol of Madoc, president, extended a hearty welcome to each one and stressed that it was a day for getting acquainted. Treasurer Mr. Ray Grant of Belleville gave a favorable report.

Miss Bessie Fleming and Mr. Elmer Wood explained where the Fleming trophy originated and its purpose and that Mr. Willie Ray would be presenting the trophy at the Belleville Fair this year.

Mrs. W. J. Moore, Mrs. Dick Fleming, Mrs. Bob McCaffery and Miss Bessie Fleming were asked to assist the historian in bringing her book up to date.

NEW OFFICERS

The picnic next year will be held on the third Sunday in July at the Moira Conservation Park. Invitations will be sent out another year.

A program of sports with various races was held under the direction of Mrs. Delbert Francis, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Ray and Mr. Marvin Reid. The winners were awarded prizes and the children received a special treat of candies.

THREE PEOPLE were hurt when this car and truck above collided with a hydro pole, cutting power in West Moira Street area.

Way Family Holds Reunion

Members of the Way family attended the 28th annual reunion at Hamlin State Park, N.Y. on August 8th, where all enjoyed a hot dinner. President Way extended a hearty welcome to the 31 members who were present.

This was the first reunion to be held in the States, and it was decided to alternate the meeting each year with next year's reunion to be held in Canada "with the place to be decided later by the Canadian cousins." A Mr. and Mrs. President will work as a team regarding the arrangements.

Regret was expressed that the family historian, Mr. Glen C. Way of Niagara Falls, was unable to be present. The new officers elected were: president, Mr. Philip Waye; sports convener, Mrs. Peter Torrelli; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Milton Dutcher.

Mrs. Torrelli took charge of the sports' program and prizes were given to: the eldest lady present, Mrs. Philip Waye, Sr.; eldest man, Mr. Percy Way; farthest distance, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pitcher, Fr'a nkford, Ont.; shortest distance, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Waye; youngest married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jurs.

Other games included bean guessing, balloon race, spoon and marble race, plate throwing and prizes were awarded to the winners.

Mrs. Harold Pitcher thanked the American cousins for their hospitality.

WILL VISIT IRAN

ADDIS ABABA (Reuters)— Emperor Haile Selassie will pay a state visit to Iran from Sept. 14-17, a palace communique here said.

Three Tourists Injured When Truck Hits Car

Three American tourists were admitted to hospital today after their family car collided with a delivery truck at the Coleman-West Moira Streets intersection this morning.

Power in the area—including traffic lights—was disrupted when the car was jammed against a hydro pole.

Hospitalized with head injuries, was Wayde Rose, Mineral Ridge, Ohio; his wife, Jeannette, 46, and 17-year-old daughter Carol were admitted with severe head cuts.

WILL USE ENGLISH

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beginning Sept. 14, the Roman Catholic Church in the United States will use English instead of Latin in administering sacraments and sacramentals. This was announced Friday by Archbishop John F. Dearden of Detroit, chairman of the U.S. Bishops' Commission of Liturgical Apostolate, at the direction of Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York, president of the U.S. Bishops' Episcopal Conference. The directive does not affect the use of Latin in the mass.

400 Sportsmen Attend Gun Show

More than 400 local sportsmen last night saw and handled about 250 rifles and shotguns, plus an assortment of handguns, archery equipment, knives and ammunition at a gun show presented at the Club Canara by Kelly's Sport Shop of Belleville.

Three manufacturers' representatives came to the show, along with members of the shop's own staff and members of the Belleville Bowmen Club, led by Geoffrey Calvert.

Four movies were shown during the evening, all sporting films provided by a firearms' wholesaler, and soft drinks were supplied free by the show. The show will be an annual event from now on, according to Mr. Kelly. Also planned is an ammunition reloading demonstration, to be held before Christmas.

LUNTS TO STAR

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will star in "The Magnificent Yankee" in a 90-minute NBC color TV program in February based on the life of Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Hurricane Cleo Races Toward Leeward Island

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Cleo, packing top winds of 80 miles an hour, was rapidly heading for the Leeward Island at the eastern end of the Caribbean Sea today.

If there is no change in the present direction, the hurricane's centre will pass over the island of Guadeloupe this afternoon.

The San Juan, Puerto Rico, weather bureau said hurricane warnings remain in effect for all of the Leeward Islands with gale warnings posted for the south of Dominica, including St. Lucia.

A hurricane watch was posted for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Hindu Monk Makes Home On Tiny Isle

By RUKMINI DEVI

BOMBAY (CP) — "The only thing I fear is the anger of God," said Swami Punya Prabhu, a 76-year-old Hindu monk, at the flood waters of India's Jamuna River swirled around him.

For the last 21 years Prabhu has made his home on a 20- by 15-foot island in the middle of the river 25 miles from New Delhi.

"I have survived a dozen manor and innumerable minor floods," the monk said, refusing once more offers to evacuate him to safety.

One night recently the swami's bamboo hut was in danger of being swept away. Chanting hymns from the sacred scriptures, Prabhu took his place on a seven-foot high wooden platform which he has erected as a refuge.

From either side of the Jamuna's banks, about 100 feet away, small groups of the swami's followers implored him to come away. He shouted back: "Go away, go away. No harm will come to me God is with me."

When there are no floods, a tiny boat puts out twice a day to bring the monk his frugal meals of boiled rice, sliced tomato and butter-milk. But for 36 hours recently he had to go without food because of rough waters.

The swami, a former high school teacher, is a scholar in his native Hindi and speaks fluent English. Grief over the death of his wife and their only son in the 1942 Japanese bombing of Rangoon, Burma, made him turn to religion.

Once a fortnight Swami Punya Prabhu goes ashore. He visits nearby hamlets and villagers gather around him for his blessings. His disciples include many Indian government employees.

Money is being collected to give the monk a modest dwelling. A three-room house is being planned.

Everything is going well except that the swami insists that the house be built right in the middle of the river.

Mennonite Youths Told Early Dating Imposes Adult Cares on Them

KITCHENER (CP) — Teenagers brought up to expect instant gratification of their desires find it difficult to accept curbs on sexual behavior, delegates to a Mennonite youth convention were told Thursday.

"Early dating is believed by teen-agers to be their social security," said Naomi Lederach of Hubbard, Ore., "but all it does is transfer adult anxiety on young people who are not ready for such anxieties."

White - bonneted Mennonite girls from Canada and the United States attended the convention's dating workshop.

Mrs. Lederach said boys and girls 11, 12 and 13 years old are "experiencing the thrill of dating which should come only at 16 and 17.

"What is left for them when they are 16 or 17 except early marriage or the drive to experiment with sex?"

Mrs. Lederach said early dating limits the horizons in the selection o. a mate and forces mature thinking on teenagers who should be enjoying their youth. If early dating continues, she said, teen-agers of the future won't know what it is to be young.

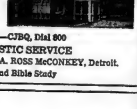
Earlier, some of the 3,500 youths attending the convention were told that urbanization was causing a "transition period" among Mennonites.

Dr. Myron Augsburger of Harrisburg, Pa., president-elect of the Eastern Mennonite College, also told the conference that as the ecumenical movement develops among Christian churches "more and more Mennonites are trying to understand other Christian religions."

"Mennonites have stopped withdrawing within themselves and are starting to emerge."

Gordon Zook of Elkart, Ind., a seminary student, said "we are trying to catch up with the jet age."

He said some traditional conservation Mennonites find change hard, "but over-all, the Mennonite is trying to catch up, and is succeeding."



The youth convention is the first held in Canada since the Mennonite youth fellowship was founded in 1946. The Mennonites, a conservative religious group, developed from the Anabaptist movement, started in 1535.

INDELIBLY MARKED

LONDON (CP)—The government should make it more difficult for teen-agers to be tattooed, says Dr. Brian Russell of the London Hospital. In an article in the British Medical Journal he says: "Too many teen-agers are tattooed on impulse and soon change their minds, so a cooling-off period should be compulsory before the tatoo is made."

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE WAYNE PRICE

Price – Townson

At Halloway Street United Church on August 15th amid a setting of potted ferns, candelabra and tall standards of mauve gladioli, white shasta daisies and yellow carnations, Judith Ellen Townson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Townson of Belleville was united in marriage to George Wayne Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Price of Carrying Place, Ontario.

Traditional wedding music was played by Mrs. Hubbs, who also accompanied the soloist, Mr. A. Hughes.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a pure silk organza gown, accented by chantilly lace. Two large roses enhanced the back of the controlled bouffant skirt, which swept into a chantilly edged chapel train. Her head piece of three crushed organza roses in a bed of lilies held a finger tip veil. She carried a cascade of white poms, mauve baby glads and ivy.

The bride was attended by her sister Gloria as maid of honor and Sandra Price and Irene Maio as bridesmaids. All were gowned alike in street-length yellow satu-peau dresses, enhanced by a flowing chiffon panel falling from the shoulders. Their headpieces were a single yellow organza rose and a matching veil. They carried cascades of Shasta mums, mauve mums and carnations.

William Grimson of Belleville was the groomsman and the ushers were Douglas Duivan of Carrying Place and Donald Hampton of Niagara Falls.

The reception we held in the Pinnacle Room of the Hotel Quinte where Mrs. Townson received the guests wearing a canterbury blue gown of satu-peau, accented by a lace bodice with the skirt swelling into a bustle back. She wore a hat of matching tulle and a corsage of feather tweed.

She was assisted by Mrs. Price who wore a strawberry pink imported Swiss silk dress with a matching tulle hat and white accessories. She wore a corsage of baby carnations.

For a honeymoon to the Maritimes, returning by way of Cape Cod the bride wore a two piece suit of white cluny lace over a pale blue linen. The jacket had a softly rolled collar of linen fastening in a bow effect. A matching hat, white gloves, bag and shoes completed the ensemble.

Guests attended from Toronto, Niagara Falls, Ottawa, Moncton, New Brunswick, Sault Ste. Marie, Oshawa, Brockville and Pembroke.

Prior to her wedding the bride was entertained at a shower at the home of Mrs. William Miller and one at the home of Mrs. Fred Fisher.

The bride's mother had a trousseau tea in honor of her daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Price will be residing in Bowmanville, Ontario.

University Women Fill Slate

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Federation of University Women Friday filled out its slate of officers to serve with Mrs. M. J. Sabia of St. Catharines, installed earlier as president to succeed Miss Margaret MacLellan of Ottawa.

Mrs. Victor Trenaier of Quebec City was elected vice-president for Quebec under a constitutional change splitting the central region into Quebec and Ontario regions. Other vice - presidents include Mrs. N. F. Orange of Sudbury for Ontario. Chosen treasurer was Miss G. E. Shaw of St. Catharines.

Provincial directors include: Ontario north, Mrs. Walter Little, Parry Sound; and Ontario east, Mrs. G. E. Boyce, Trenton.

The convention was told by a magistrate that the time to teach criminals or potential criminals is before they appear in court for punishment. Magistrate Isaac Rice said: "The soft approach that has been practised during the last 10 years has failed."

He said that expensive recreational and other facilities in prisons "at a rising cost that has been estimated at $2,500 a year an inmate" have only resulted in an increase of the number of inmates in penal institutions. He said 80 per cent of criminals who have served jail terms return to penal institutions.

Mrs. P. W. Chipeswick, Pictou, Ontario, announces the engagement of her daughter Catherine, to Dr. William Robert Nickle, son of Mr. Carl A. Nickle and the late Mrs. Nickle, Shelton, Connecticut. Marriage to take place on Saturday, September 5, 1964, at 2 p.m. in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville.

Readers' Saturday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

I have been watching for a recipe for Gooseberry Jam — not frozen jam — the regular kind. Would you please oblige? — Unsigned.

ANSWER:

I fear this will be too late for most readers but since you did not give your name and address I have no other way of speeding it to you.

Dinner Menu

SATURDAY

Picnic or barbecue supper: Triple-decker Western sandwiches (for a Wednesday), mustard chunk pickles (see Thursday), chilled lima and green bean salad with French dressing, deviled tomatoes, Indiana picnic cake (spice cake with broiled cocoanut and sugar topping), tea.

GOOSEBERRY JAM:

6 cups green gooseberries, ½ cup water, 1 package certo crystals, 8 cups sugar.

Wash and pick over gooseberries and remove tops and tails. Add water and certo crystals and bring to boiling point. Add hard 1 minute, stirring gently. Add sugar and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and let stand 5 minutes. Pour into sterile jam jars, seal with paraffin, adding a second thin coating when first is cold. Put on lids and label. An easy to make, delicious and cheap jam.

QUESTION:

I bought a two-lb. bag of Oatmeal cookie mix for fun and made 60 cookies from it which comes out at about 1c each. I consider myself an experienced cookie batter (I have 5 children) but do not think I can beat this mix for economy. Could I make the mix cheaper myself? Would you please comment? — R. I. McG.

ANSWER:

We bought a bag of the Oatmeal Cookie Mix and Eleanor who was going North for the long weekend, made it up into three varieties to take with her to her hosts. She made up the whole package adding ½ cup water as directed, and then divided the dough into three parts. To one-third she added ½ cup toasted cocoanut, to another third ½ cup Sultana raisins, and to the last third ½ cup chopped walnuts. She added them according to package directions. I tasted each this morning and they are splendid and I predict will be a boon to busy mothers of cookie lovers. I do not have the formula for this commercial cookie mix. As you doubtless know, the unbaked cookie dough may be shaped into rolls and wellwrapped and frozen. To the frozen dough, simply cut rolls into ¼" slices with sharp knife and bake as directed on package.

I recommend this cookie mix.

Successful Living

Bathing Alone Does Not Correct Offending B. O.

DEAR DORIS — In your reply to "Folks With B.O." you were not nearly emphatic enough. Bathing alone is not enough. Shaving and regular use of a deodorant are also necessary to control odor and perspiration. This applies to men as well as women.

I work in a doctor's office and am continually surprised at the carelessness of some people in these matters. And it is not only the non-educated. One couple that are the worst offenders in this respect are both university graduates. After such patients leave it is necessary to use a deodorant spray before another patient can be brought into the examining room. — DORIS CLARK

So please, Doris, advise both men and women that bathing alone is not the solution. Anyone who is not using a deodorant, buy some at once, start using it regularly, and s6e how your popularity improves. — NURSIE.

DEAR NURSIE — To which I might add for any who read this, that if someone close to you offends in this way, be a real friend by telling him about it! Or perhaps clip this item and take it to him.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — What is wrong with long hair on a boy? Do you believe it's as dangerous as they say in England? — A BEATLE-BOOSTER.

DEAR BEETLE-BOOSTER — Nothing whatever, as long as you live in the eighteenth century and like the Tom Jones type. Dangerous? Only if you find it overpowering (a la Samson).

* * *

DEAR DORIS — My sister is a very good looking woman with a family of three fine children and a very good husband. There is only one thing wrong, though, and that is that she weights about 200 pounds and is overweight.

No matter what anyone tells her she does not stick to any diet. She even went to a number of reducing clubs and .ost weight but found it all back again.

She sometimes doesn't want to go places for fear of being made fun of. When you say anything about it she just gets mad at you. If you have any ideas how I can get my sister to reduce and have more fun out of life, please write it in your column. — BIG PROBLEM.

DEAR BIG PROBLEM — No calorie chart in the world can take weight off your sister without some co-operation from her. Has she heard about TOPS? This is the Take-Off-Pounds-Sensibly club. TOPS aids and abets the overweight, providing sociability and prizes for progress.

If she'd like to learn more about this gilracle-working international group, get her to write me herself, asking for the address. She could certainly use more fun — and less fatigue — if she weren't carrying around all that extra poundage.

* * *

Confidential to SALLY — Your general hopelessness comes of the belittling which has been your lot most of your life — vivid proof that a body needs to be loved and wanted. Yet you have produced two fine sons.

You can win, Sally. Get back to your church and the help of loving Christians. You have much to live for. If you will write again, sending me your proper name and address, I'll send further ideas which can put color into your life and hope into your heart.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO ALICE — Get him talking — about football or fishing, automobiles or algebra. When he's launched on his pet theme he'll forget his shyness.

World's Fair Creates Feeling Of Joy, Wonder, Happy Place

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

NEW YORK — Once loaded, the boat glides quickly out of the summer heat and breezes to crowds of shirtsleeves and cotton dresses. Briefly it is in a dark cool tavern, then suddenly it emerges into another world.

All around it, on tiers and mountains and hanging from the ceiling, groups of animated and kewpies in stylized costumes of almost every civilization of the world cavort in rhythm to the melody of a childish song recorded in dozens of languages. For nine minutes — after perhaps an hour of waiting in line — what looks like Santa's workshop comes to life, evoking squeals of delight from children and adults alike.

The ride, created by Walt Disney and sponsored without commercials by Pepsi-Cola, not only is one of the best at the New York World's Fair, but one of the most typical. It leaves everyone with a happy feeling about the joy and wonder of being alive in a happy place. And, despite all the contentious promotion about the wonders of the future to be seen here, that is what emerges as the dominating theme. More than a few criticisms have been leveled at the Fair, but there are few with souls so dead they will not have a good time here.

ALMOST DEAD ISSUE

Futurism is almost a dead issue today. Most of the future seems upon us today — did we but look that way. We look back on the eye a couple of weeks ago! — and few of the exhibits will fail us entirely. There is able about it, the way the New York World's Fair of 25 years ago did. Fortunately, the Fair is not obsessed with the future. The world, and its present, is within grasp, and that much more interesting for it.

"To Be Alive!", the title of an ingenious film presented by Johnson (nee Johnson's Wax,) is another good — and also noncommercial — treatment of the never-mind-tomorrow theme. It is a simple exposition of the human organism in nature and beauty seen through the eyes of representative humanity ranging from street children in New York to primitives in the African jungle.

Its main zoal to the future is a technical one (though any film production with the imagination ca: do it today). The film is presented on three screens side by side. Sometimes the action is contiguous, creating a three times larger than life effect, which is particularly effective in scenes such as the one taken careening along a mountain highway. Sometimes the three screens show different angles of the same scene, or even different treatments of the same theme. Anyway, it is moving and aesthetic.

WAS SENSATON THEN

Probably the most enlightening treatment of the future is at General Motors' Futurama II. Twenty - five years ago this was the sensation of the Fair with its depiction of six lane superhighways (which came to pass) and split level cities (which did not). Today GM has models of electric cities, space cities, moon cities, and underwater hotels. A little less exotic but more down to earth, for instance, her name is mentioned first — "Mrs. Smith, may I present Mr. Brown." or, simply, "Mrs. Sm.ith, Mr. Brown." A younger woman is presented to an older man ("Mrs. Smith, Miss Jones") and a younger man to an older man (Dr. Smith, my son Jim.").

past, are as popular at the Fair as the future. The RCA pavilion offers a walking trek from being amused by letting visitors amuse themselves, mainly by observing themselves on closed, circuit color television. (Men watch only themselves on the monitors, while women examine their entire families.) The self-conscious facial expressions show why most people aren't professional actors, but they provide entertainment for those willing to stand around and look awhile.

IBM, housed in a wild-looking mounted by an egg, slides visitors into a theatre inside the egg on a hydraulically operated tier of seats. Here a dozen or so screens alternately and simultaneously flash movies designed to demonstrate the parallels between the workings of the human mind and of calculating machines.

DUR REVERENCE

As for the past, it is treated with due reverence and popularity. The Illinois pavilion has a mechanized Lincoln which is only slightly eerie pronouncing words of timeless wisdom about liberty. In a few months Ford takes you in an automated convertible through several million years of time, past realistic mechanical dinosaurs and cavemen into a futuristic abstract of a mid-space city.

Spain has brought a few El Grecos, Velasquezes, and Goyas (including both the clothed and naked Majas) from Madrid's past oriented prado museum, along with a typically far-out Dali. It also charges 50 cents to $1 for a guitar or flamenco recital, but music videos find more enjoyment in the free entertainment provided by a typically Spanish wandering tune, or minstrel, group. The elaborate stone and wood pavilion is itself a fine work of contemporary art.

Less pretentious but just as representative of the fair's realized appeals is the State of Oregon exhibit, which features such rustic entertains as the woodcarving arts of tree-climbing and chopping, axe-throwing and log-rolling.

The African pavilion charges $1.50 to watch colorful primitive dancers from Nigeria and the Ivory Coast. It's a high admission price by Fair standards, but few visitors are likely to spent several hundred times that price to go to Africa to see them there.

Which about sums up why the Fair, in words to anyone's wife: th world — now and distant, past, present, and future — at our tired feet.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

QUESTION: I always forget which name is supposed to come first when making introductions. I know you've answered this many times in the past, but would you please explain it?—Mrs. F. K., Bayonne, N.J.

ANSWER: The person to whom the introduction is being made is mentioned first. When a man is being introduced to a woman, for instance, her name is mentioned first — "Mrs. Smith, may I present Mr. Brown." or, simply, "Mrs. Sm.ith, Mr. Brown." A younger woman is presented to an older woman ("Mrs. Smith, Miss Jones") and a younger man to an older man (Dr. Smith, my son Jim.").

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Question:—About the Canadian National Exhibition, which is the best way to get there (in Toronto) and what date is the Canadian Air Show to be shown and who will participate: how long?

Answer:—When you arrive in Toronto take the Lakeshore road right to the exhibition and park your car either outside the exhibition grounds or in. It is advisable to stay off the Gardiner Exppressway, as you may pass your turnoff, and land up in Sunnyside, west end of Toronto. Or park your car downtown in Toronto and take the streetcar to the Dufferin Gates or the Prince's Gate, which so many do.

Every year the past 15, Toronto and its visitors have been treated to what has become this continent's biggest sky spectacle.

It is the Canadian International Air Show, a not-to-be missed highlight of the Canadian National Exhibition over whose grounds, within the city proper, the annual event is staged.

Dates for this year's display are Sept. 4 and 5. Back after a two-year absence to play star roles are the U.S. Navy's famed "Blue Angels."

The show has always presented the cream of North America's flying men. Last year it was the USAF's "Thunderbirds."

Several other names, familiar in aviation will complete the 1964 line - up. These include the Royal Canadian Air Force the Ro,al Air Force, DeHaviland Aircraft Co. of Canada which specializes in bush planes and pontoon craft, American Airlines, and the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, which maintains the world's largest airborne fire-fighting fleet.

The Blue Angels will do their stuff in a 25 - minute display of aerobatic skills which thrilled spectators in 1962, to win them a repeat command appearance. The R.C.A.F. portion includes a display by the celebrated "Red Knight", the Harvard aerobic display team as the flypast of modern R.C.A.F. aircraft.

The RAF is bringing back the popular Vulcan jet bomber of its V - Bomber Force, the Victor and the Valiant.

The show in past years has featured the world's most renowned aerobatic teams, including the now disbanded "Golden Hawks" of the R.C.A.F. Aircraft in the two - hour hour show will range from the newest and most modern jet fighters and bombers to American Airlines' antique 1929 Ford trimotor craft.

In addition, for the first time in the event's 15 - year history, a team of female jumpers from the Parachute Club of Canada is scheduled to take part in a sky - diving demonstration over the city's waterfront just off Exhibition Park.

The event made its debut in 1949 at Malton, site of Toronto's new International Airport but moved three years later to the CNE, where it has been an annual fixture ever since.

For the operations people master-minding the show, it is an exercise requiring spit-second-timing. The 150 or so aircraft taking part usually operate from as many as four bases, one of them as far off as Selfridge, Michigan. All must hit the "on-stage" area when the second-hand is precisely straight up.

To make sure they're right on the button, the aircraft position themselves at holding points in the Toronto area about 40 miles from the actual viewing location. As a result, inhabitants of these areas are treated to a fabulous free show even before the aircraft reach the CNE grounds.

Occasionally long - range bombers from the RAF in England and from the USAF Strategic Command have made such dramatic appearances just minutes before show time.

Planning for such an undertaking begins months in advance, with meeting after meeting to ensure the safety of the men in the clouds and the spectators they entertain.

Question: We are going to Cape Cod for our vacation and as we are on a budget and have three children, we should like to know if there are cheaper accommodations than the regular motels and hotels?

Answer: There are lower priced accommodations en route to Cape Cod. These are the small wooden cabins that are still in existence along the highways. They don't have the elegance of the new, modern motels, but are just for a traveller to sleep or rest his weary head. The prices for these cabins are about half those of the regular motels. Some old hotels in larger towns offer good accommdations for a low price also.

The Greek defence minister flew to Athens today. Reliable sources here said he had persuaded Makarios to postpone the departure for Moscow of Cyprus Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou.

The departure, the sources said, was postponed for at least 10 days pending further developments in Cyprus.

The ceasefire was marred Friday by reports that a Greek-Cypriot was killed and a Turkish-Cypriot policeman wounded in separate shooting incidents near Paphos, western Cyprus.

Meanwhile, hard - pressed Turkish-Cypriots today awaited implementation of a plan by the Cyprus government to allow strictly rationed food supplies to enter four Turkish areas of the island. Details of the plan were submitted to the United Nations and the International Red Cross Friday.

A UN spokesman said the government had drawn up a chart of the calories required by adults, pregnant women and children, together with the proposed weekly supplies of essential food based on these requirements. He said the plan covered the Turkish-Cypriot quarter of Nicosia and the Turkish-Cypriot villages of Lefka, Kokkina and Limitis in northwest Cyprus.

The rationing was proposed in case Turkish-Cypriot leaders rejected the suggestion by President Makarios that they open roads under their control in return for freedom of movement on government controlled roads.

"The Viet Cong and the Buddhist faith are the two groups in South Viet Nam closest to the rice roots of the country. It is natural at this point that the Viet Cong would want to climb the whole show," a U.S. official said.

"It comes to this," he added, "Vietnamese political leaders for years have made their names by opposing governments, first the French: Then Diem, and now Khanh. Opposition is a way of life here."

Ann Landers

Team Could Do Chores To Pay for Broken Window

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This letter is being written by seven baseball players, 11 and 12 years old. We can't afford a lawyer.

This afternoon we were playing ball in a lot behind this big house. I was at bat. The next thing I knew the ball sailed right through a great big plate glass window.

The owner of the house came running out like the place was on fire. We tried to explain it was an accident but the man said we had no business playing there in the first place. Then he took down all our names on a piece of paper.

ANN LANDERS

Nothing has happened so far but we are going to have a meeting about it tomorrow. Do you think I should pay for the window because I was at bat? Is the pitcher partly to blame? Should the whole team pitch in? Or should the man be a real good sport and say, "Forget it, kids, I was young once myself?"

Please give us the best answer you can thing of. — JR. CARDINALS.

DEAR JR. CARDINALS — I believe it would be very brotherly if the whole team pitched in and bought a new window.

It would be downright bright if you all went to the man and asked if you could earn some money by working on his lawn this summer — in shifts, say two or three at a time. Such a suggestion might jog his memory a little and he may remember that he was young once himself.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am 15, a good student and have never had any serious disagreement with my folks until now. I accepted a date with Tom, even though my folks forbade me to go out with him. (Tom got into a little trouble with the police last year.)

Last night I lied to my folks and said I was going to my girl friend's house. I had a sneak date with Tom and arranged for him to pick me up at the gas station.

It didn't take long before I realized that Tom's idea of a date wasn't the same as mine. He said he wanted to talk to me about life and things, and headed straight for the woods. I had a terrible time fighting him off, but he finally gave up and took me home. He was so mad he didn't even walk me to the door.

Today Tom called and apologized. He said I was the nicest girl he had ever gone out with and he wants another chance to prove that he can be nice, too. He says I'm the kind of a girl who could make something out of him. Is it worth the chance? —ELEANOR.

DEAR ELEANOR — No. He'll make nothing out of you before you make something out of him.

A girl who lies to her parents about where she is going —and with whom — is begging for trouble, so please stop kidding yourself and calling it a crusade. You are lucky that first date wasn't a fatal disaster. Steer clear of Tom. He's bad news.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband never made much of a salary, but we managed somehow. A few weeks ago I got tired of looking at threadbare carpets, faded curtains and a worn-out sofa. I went downtown and bought some lovely things on credit. I figured we'd pay for it somehow.

Sunday we invited a couple over because we wanted to show off our new things. These folks expect people to rave over every stick of furniture and every ashtray in their home. If you don't notice something they point it out.

Not one word was said about our new furnishings and I was furious. Will you please tell me why people are so mean? — SMILING ON THE OUTSIDE BUT BURNING ON THE INSIDE.

DEAR OUTSIDE INSIDE — Did it occur to you that perhaps they didn't notice?

Why are you so interested in impressing people you don't like? What a ridiculous waste of time and money!!

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Bob Kennedy Wagner's Choice For Senator

NEW YORK (AP)—The race for U.S. senator from New York shaped up today as Democrat Robert F. Kennedy against Republican incumbent Kenneth B. Keating.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York, the state's leading Democrat, endorsed Kennedy Friday.

The attorney-general, 38, who lives in Virginia and votes in Massachusetts, was expected to come to New York early next week to announce his candidacy.

After the mayor's statement, all but one of Kennedy's announced rivals dropped out. That one, representative Samuel S. Stratton, from Amsterdam, N.Y. has promised a floor fight, claiming Kennedy is ineligible as a non-resident.

Wagner said that Kennedy's talents and achievements, plus the "dazzling magic" of his name, outweigh his non - residency.

Kennedy is expected to move to New York soon, to satisfy the constitutional requirements of residency "at the time of his election."

Keating, 64, a native New Yorker and veteran of 18 years in Congress, had no comment on Wagner's statement.

Republican Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller said Kennedy was "cheap-picked," and that he didn't think New York wants "an out-of-state man."

Wagner said he hoped Kennedy would help him revitalize the Democratic party in New York, where the Republicans now hold the governorship, both U.S. Senate seat., and a majority of both houses of the legislature.

DOUBTS REPORTS

WASHING T ON (AP) — A state department spokesman said Friday the United States is "confident that no strategic missiles are stored in Cuba." Press officer Robert J. McCloskey said reports of such missiles in Cuba had circulated among the Cuba refugee community, attributed to Juanita Castro, defecting sister of Premier Fidel Castro.

the 50 states and the District of Columbia. Only 2,316 of these can vote.

This is the timetable for events which television will distribute nationally and internationally:

Today the convention credentials committee met for the first public airing of the Mississippi quarrel.

Unless a compromise is reached earlier, that issue would face the convention Monday and perhaps result in a roll-call vote of the delegates to indicate clearly how many southern state Democratic party organizations will bolt to Senator Goldwater.

ANTICIPATE AGREEMENT

Tuesday is devoted to approving the party's platform, which is being put together after three days of public hearings this week in Washington and further ones here. No sharp differences of importance are anticipated.

Wednesday night is the big night for nominating the president, and the vice-president too. But the president, some suggest, may well beat the gun by announcing his choice before that event, perhaps in an effort to play down attention to the southern-delegations fight.

Johnson himself has not planned to go to Atlantic City from the White House until Thursday, when he is to make his acceptance speech Friday is mopping-up day.

The convention will signal Johnson's official start in the election campaign, even though he has crossed swords vehemently already with Senator Goldwater.

His acceptance speech is expected to confirm the tone of a campaign which many expect to be brutally hard-hitting—an assumption based on what both the presidential candidates have said so far and amplified by their senior supporters.

Mrs. John Palmer, 37, of Ottawa.

One of the survivors, Rev. Sister Mary Alberta, 81, said: "There was a terrible shock and I was going through the window. There was broken glass and dirt everywhere. Next to me a woman was screaming. Her back was broken and a priest was giving her the last rites. I saw feet with no bodies, bodies with no skin."

MP ABOARD

Also aboard the train was Heward Grafftey, Conservative MP for Brome - Missisquoi. He described the scene as "one of the most dreadful you could imagine."

The grinding crash awoke Mrs. T. S. Wooda, an elderly widow whose home was near the tracks.

"When I got to my back porch, they were sitting there," she said. "Some were crawling. I gave them water and towels to mop up the blood".

A gruesome sight awaited police, reporters, medical people and others who rushed to the scene.

The death coach lay at a crazy angle, surrounded by the twisted pieces of railway track. On the ground and under the coach, were the victims. Several were dead, others disfigured.

Pieces of the track were found about 100 yards away. The driver's body was found partially buried in his gravel load.

The crash occurred on the CPR's main line between Ottawa and Montreal. Work crews worked through Friday night to restore the line.

Political Stability Grips Venezuela As New Sense Of Confidence Surging

Venezuela almost held its breath as its first orderly transfer of power from one elected president to another took place this year. Now, Latin affairs expert Paul Kidd reports in this story, the nation is moving ahead again.

By PAUL KID D

CARACAS (CP)—As political stability grips Venezuela, a new-found sense of economic confidence is surging through the nation.

One seen evidence of it everywhere. All over Caracas, buildings are soaring skywards while lavish public works projects are changing the face of the countryside.

For the most part, this building and construction boom has taken place during the last six months.

When I was in Venezuela earlier this year, the December elections had just taken place and tough anti - Communist President Romulo Betancourt was still the occupant of Miraflores Palace.

The nation was awaiting, almost breathlessly, the first orderly transfer of power from one freely elected president to another in Venezuela's 134 years as a republic.

The changeover came in March when Betancourt, 55, removed the tricolor presidential sash from his broad chest and placed it around his successor and fellow Democratic Action leader, 58-year-old Raul Leoni.

20,000 NEW JOBS

Then the nation rocketed forward. Development programs planned during the last two years, while the government was battling Communist terrorists, suddenly leaped from drawing board to location site.

Construction projects this year are already up 70 per cent from 1963. A $20,000,000 telecommunications system is being built across the country while the government has just launched a four-year, $850,000,000 public spending program.

Under the national improvement scheme, some 20,000 new jobs are expected to be created —giving some relief to Venezuela's whopping 13.7 per cent unemployment rate.

The program, which will supplement the oil - producing republic's annual $1,300,000,000 budget, is aimed at developing the country's interior and stimulating more private investment.

The money will be used for irrigation and flood control development to bring 3,000,000 more acres of cropland into production by 1980. This would make the country self-sufficient in farm products. Last year Venezuela spent almost $60,000,000 on food imports.

PLAN POWER GRID

Funds will go toward airport dock and road construction to link remote towns with more heavily populated centres.

Other facets of the development program include new schools, an explosives plant, expansion of the government's petrochemical industry and a high - tension distribution grid carrying power from hydroelectric projects in northern Venezuela to central and western parts of the country.

Finally, about 10 per cent of the Congress - approved funds will go toward public health and bolstering debt-plagued regional and district governments.

All this economic activity means, simply, that the Venezuelan bolivar is in extremely healthy shape as a currency on a continent notorious for its uncertain inflationary antics.

Today, the national budget balances and the republic's gold and dollar reserves—$700,000,000—are the highest in Latin America.

When the list of nations receiving Increased Alliance for Progress aid was recently announced, Venezuela's name was missing.

This is one South American nation, at least, which is progressing on its own.

Garden Notes

Daisies Bring Autumn Color

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

It has been said that one tenth of the world's flowers are in the form of the daisy. Some of the most colorful and long lasting are the autumn daisies, or daisy-like flowers. There are the sunflowers (Helianthus) the sneezeweeds (Helenium) English perennial daisy, Glorious daisy, Hellopsis, Coreopsis, Rudbeckia and many others.

Helianthus take many forms from the big Russian sunflower to dwarf ornamental plants. There are tall branching forms with single blooms that make fine background plants for the border. H. crysanthus has double blooms of light yellow on eight foot plants. H. miniature with a multitude of very double light yellow blooms with brown centre. H. sungold has masses of large, single, golden yellow blooms.

Hellopsis lemonei are semi-double and drought resistant. The blooms are four inches across, bloom from July to October; height 30 inches; good for cutting. Another hardy annual is Heliopsis pitcherians which blooms from May to September. Gold to orange three inch blooms have long strong stems. This makes a good show even in poor soil and does well in hot dry places. Height four feet.

MASS OF COLOR

Gloriosa daisy is treated as an annual in the north but in the south it is a perennial. The single and semi-doubles are striking large flowers in yellow, orange, double form is shaggy with rather coarse, orangy yellow blooms. They bloom profusely and make a mass of color for bedding.

Helenium Riverton Gem is a robust perennial with quantities of reddish brown blooms from June to October. Height is 40 inches.

Rudbeckia purpurea hybrida is the perennial purple coneflower. These have elegant large single blooms on long stems of four feet. There are several forms in yellow and orange with dark centres.

Many of our annuals with daisy-like blooms offer their best flowers in late summer, and early autumn. Cosmos, coreopsis, tickseed, single aster, pot marigold or calenula get into their best stride as the days shorten, the rains are more frequent and the temperature drops a little.

Cosmos Fiesta was an All-American award winner. The bushy plants are two and a half feet tall with brilliant, semi-double, orange striped, scarlet blooms. These are good for a hot dry bed or border. C. sensation has six inch blooms if the plants are spaced three feet apart and the buds thinned.

Tickseed or calliopsis has dainty yellow flowers with brown or maroon centres. The stems are thin and wiry holding the numerous blooms erect and making a good show for border or cutting.

The newest Calendulas, or Scotch marigolds, are a great improvement on the old varieties. C. cryasantha has four inch blooms, very double. Stems are long and stiff. This hats well in water; pale yellow. Pacific Beauty Mixed calendula resist summer sun and blooms on to the last killing frost. The lovely two-toned blooms have brilliant colors on long strong stems. Calendula campfire has flat heads of brilliant orange with a scarlet sheen and yellow centres. This is a handsome flower long lasting and good for cutting.

Many nurseries feature fall sales of perennials and you can plant seeds of perennials now. They will make sufficient growth to winter over and be ready to bloom next year. Make a note to include these bright fall annuals in next year's cutting garden, or beds.

mons strike a special 15 - member committee which could discuss the flag question for a "couple of months" and its findings be submitted to the people, apparently with reference to a plebiscite, which the Conservatives seek.

The suggestion brought groans from the Liberal benches causing Mr. Diefenbaker to snap that the groaners were trying to cram the maple leaf flag down Canadians' throats.

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas said his party favors a committee with a first agreement that Commons debate on its report be limited. Without such an agreement "we could end up exactly where we are now."

Mr. Douglas said Mr. Pearson had made a concession by offering the committee idea during meeting of the party leaders. Now it was up to other leaders to make matching concessions — an invitation which Mr. Diefenbaker didn't take up.

Social Credit leader, said he also agrees with the committee proposal, but on the basis of limitation of debate on committee conclusions. Real Caouette, Creditiste leader, said obstruction would cease now that there will be a free vote.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVEN, Sports Editor

When the curtain goes up on the Royal Canadian Legion's third national clinic for track and field coaches at Guelph on August 28th, there will be more stars at the Federated Colleges than in the Milky Way.

Legion Sports Director, Geoff Dyson, has chosen widely and well to come up with a solid cast of top instructors and demonstrators for the ten-day clinic. The Legion group received a grant of about $50,000 this year from the Department of National Health and Welfare for its program.

Two hundred and fifty students will be accommodated on five courses. Including Dyson, there will be 23 instructors, three special lecturers and five demonstrators. An additional course for French-speaking students has been added, and there will also be an emphasis on distance running.

The coaching staff includes Jim Alford, John Disley, Michael Ellis, Peter Hildreth, Peter Radford and Geoff Gowan of England. From France national coaches Joseph Mallejac and Jacques Bergougnou return, bringing an additional coach, Gilbert Ormes.

American instructors include Fred Will, John Powell and Bill Welch. The Canadian coaching contingent has transplanted Britishers Lionel Pugh, Geoff Elliott, Nigel Cooper, Brian Sexton and Dick Guest, in addition to Pat Galasso, Bob Reid, Don Stevenson and Ron Wallingford. Alec Peepre will act as arena manager at the Federated Colleges.

Among the demonstrators are a world champion, a former world's champion, two Commonwealth "best performers", the first Canadian to break 60 feet in the shot put, a former Olympic hurdler and two athletes who may be rivals in the next Olympics.

Harold Connelly, world record holder for the shot put, will demonstrate the skill that enabled him to heave the shot 231' 10".

Phil Mulkey, one of the world's top decathlons (8700 points) will also be back.

Canadian Rob Watson holds the "best performance" for the Commonwealth in the pole vault, having cleared 15' 9¾." Mike Ellis, who holds the best performance record among Commonwealth hammer throwers with a toss of 213' 2", will demonstrate in addition to instructing.

Veteran hurdler of three Olympic Games, Britain's Peter Hildreth, will also double as coach and demonstrator as will Peter Radford, former holder of the world's record for the 220 yards on a turn. Peter and Harry Jerome will probably be rivals in the forthcoming Olympics.

Guest lecturers will include Dr. Ernest Jokl, University of Kentucky and Dr. Ken Doherty, University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Jokl, a prominent physiologist, was recently honored by President Johnson for his work in sports medicine. Dr. Doherty is the author of one of the most outstanding technical books on track and field. He is also the organizer of the Penn Relays.

A.A.U. of C. Chairman Pete Beach, and other A.A.U. of C. members will sit on a panel, and Bob Adams, Canada's track and field coach for the Olympics, will give special lectures.

Student coaches will also hear about organizing indoor meets from John Hudson, Toronto, who was involved in the indoor events at the Map le Leaf Gardens last winter.

Archers Versus 'Gunmen'

Shades of Robin Hood and the gunmen!

Something new in the line of marksmanship competition has been arranged for the Redneersville outdoor range tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock.

The Belleville Bowmen, the city's archery club, will pit their bows and arrows against the Quinte Handgun League's handguns.

Lucky for both sides, bullets and arrows will be directed at targets, not each other and spectators should find the competition quite a unique one.

The sport is said to be popular in parts of the United States but this will be the first such competition in this immediate area.

"This is just a friendly match," said a Bowmen spokesman, "but if the competition is as close as we expect and the event goes off well, we hope to make it at least an annual affair with trophies and the works."

Sounds like fun as long as the gunmen don't walk into the place with apples on their heads.

Following Protests

Yankee Sale Investigated

CHICAGO (AP) — The department of justice has apparently begun an investigation into the sale of New York Yankees to the Columbia Broadcasting System for possible violations of the anti-trust act.

President Joe Cronin of the American League confirmed in Boston Friday night that the justice department might be looking into the case.

"We had a representative of the department of justice call on us the other day," Cronin said, "and explain that in almost all such instances they undertake a preliminary probe of this nature. We understand they have visited several ball clubs."

The sale of 80 per cent of the Yankees to CBS last week for $11,200,000 brought strong protests from Charles O. Finley, owner of Kansas City Athletics, and Arthur Allyn, owner of Chicago White Sox.

Finley fired a telegram to Cronin Friday night protesting the investigation and claiming "another sad day for baseball." He said justice department officials questioned him for 2½ hours Friday about the sale, but declined to elaborate on the investigation.

Allyn confirmed he had been questioned for two hours Wednesday by department representatives and also protested the investigation.

'Quiet Men' Lead Orioles Back To Top

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Brooks Robinson speaks softly and Sam Bowens seldom speaks but both know how to make pitchers' ears ring.

Robinson, Baltimore's American League All Star Valuable Player candidate, started a pair of argument with Chicago pitchers Friday night and, with rookie Bowens backing him each time, the Orioles hammered the White Sox 4-2 and regained the league lead.

The quiet man cuffed southpaw Juan Pizarro for back-to-back homers in the fourth inning, then broke up a 2-2 tie in the ninth with successive run-scoring singles off knuckleballer Hoyt Wilhelm. Filling the breach left by Boog Powell's wrist injury, he accounted for two-thirds of the Orioles' six-hit attack.

The fading New York Yankees lost their fifth straight, a 7-0 humiliation by Boston Red Sox and dropped five games off the pace. Detroit Tigers rode Don Demeter's slugging to a 4-1 decision over Minnesota Twins and Kansas City Athletics edged Washington Senators 3-2 as Rocky Colavito's two-run homer in the seventh off Jim Gelegles game was rained out.

HAVING BANNER YEAR

Robinson, the Orioles' unsung leader of late, has four reasons remained on course toward a banner year. The home run was his 21st, the fifth of the 1962 career high. The tie-breaking single gave him 81 runs batted in, the 82nd his club lead.

Bowens, who narrowly avoided serious injury a day before in Powell's collision, also added his 17th homer and drove in his 50th and 51st runs.

Luis Aparicio triggered the Orioles' winning rally with a one-out single off Wilhelm and scampered on a walk to Earl Robinson before Brooks Robinson's hit broke the tie and Bowens' single iced it.

Right - hander Bob Heffner tossed a six-hitter at the Yankees as the Red Sox nudged three home runs, including a grand slam by catcher Bob Tillman and solo homers by Dick Stuart and Ed Bressoud.

Demeter drove in three Detroit runs with a single, double and his 16th homer. Gates Brown's 14th homer completed the scoring.

Colavito's 30th homer capped a three-run Kansas City rally in the fifth inning against left-hander Claude Osteen, who lost his ninth game despite pitching a strong six-hitter. Dan Lock hit his 22nd for the losers.

Ken Venturi Shares Lead With Collins

AKRON, Ohio (AP) U.S. Open champion Ken Venturi and Bill Collins, a couple of guys who fought off back injuries, took over the second round lead Friday in the $50,000 American Golf Classic.

Venturi, making up one of the great comebacks in sports this year, shot near-perfect golf with a four-under-par 66 at Firestone for a 36-hole total of 137 over the Firestone Country Club course. Collins, who exactly a year ago had an operation for removal of a spinal disc and who three weeks ago withdrew from the Western Open because of an aching back added a 67 to his opening round of 70.

Arnold Palmer, the opening round leader with a 68, soared to a 73.

Meet For Title Today

Cowan, Weslock Putt Into Finals

SASKATOON (CP) — Key putts propelled Gary Cowan of Kitchener and Nick Weslock of Toronto into the final round of the 1964 Canadian amateur golf championship today competing for a title each has won before.

Weslock holed an uphill five-footer to clip Keith Alexander of Calgary 2 and 1 and Cowan connected with a 35-footer to complete a 6 and 4 romp over another Calgarian, Doug Silverberg. Weslock won the title in 1957 and 1962, Cowan in 1961.

Cowan posted an approximate medal score of three under par when his victory was completed on the 16th green. His round was highlighted by a stunning three on the par-four, 316-yard 12th hole, when he drove his three heavy brush to a spot immediately in front of the pin, then two-putted for an easy birdie.

Silverberg birdied the long, par-four second hole to open a one-hole lead, but Cowan posted birdies at the sixth, seventh and eighth holes to be two up at the turn.

Weslock, one of the leading amateur golfers in the world, had tough time with the gifted Alexander, needing the five-footer on the 17th to qualify as Cowan's rival. Weslock's approximate medal score for 17 holes was two over par.

Weslock and Cowan have met in match play five times previously. The 46-year-old Toronto player holds a 3-2 edge.

Cowan reached the semi-final by whipping John Kilburn of Edmonton 6 and 5. Weslock tripped Johnny Johnston of Vancouver 2 and 1.

Heif Led CNE Swim

Lake Conquers All!

By PHIL CORNFORD

TORONTO (CP) — Egyptian Abdel Latif Abou Heif Friday came within four miles of becoming the 14th conqueror of Lake Ontario but succumbed, with 17 other swimmers, to conditions described as "terrible."

The 37-year-old army major went farther than anyone else in the Scintilla Canadian National Exhibition marathon, but was dragged cold and semi-conscious from the soupy lake 19 hours after he started out from St. Catharines on the south shore.

The CNE sports committee was to meet today to decide how to distribute the $17,500 purse and Heif, who would have won $7,000 if he finished, was expected to get a big chunk. Chairman Allan Lamport indicated all 18 swimmers would receive some money.

Icy, four-foot waves whipped up by a 30-mile-an-hour wind battered away the strength of Heif, who won last year's 15-mile CNE swim and was second this year in the 75 - mile Lake Michigan marathon. He and 22 - year - old Hollander Born Judith de Nys surrendered after eight of Toronto's skyline when they seemed to have the swim in their grasp.

The waves hauled forcibly from the water by officials who feared they would drown after seeing them wallow helplessly in 51-degree water that was chilled all action in their legs and arms.

Heif's departure at 1 p.m. ended hopes that one of the contestants would be aboard at 6 p.m. Thursday would finish. The only surviving entrant, Charles Brown, a 44-year-old veteran from Boston, lingered another two hours but gave up seven miles off shore.

"It was too cold. It was too cruel," said Mrs. Heif after her husband was carried to an ambulance on a stretcher. Other swimmers who emerged exhausted, said the challenge was impossible under such terrible conditions.

"It's just too much to ask of a swimmer," said John LaCourse, 27, a Montreal swimmer who pulled out after four hours. "It's crazy. You get so numb you can't even feel your body after a while."

The lake is a gruelling challenge in fine conditions and has been conquered only four times by Marilyn Bell, then 16, first swam it in 1954.

The lake was calm as the 18 swimmers started out. As darkness fell they were aided in the lights of a flotilla of assorted small craft that tracked along group.

Beast Pressed His Luck

Battered Hady Gets Nod

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

"He who hesitates is lost" sure did not apply to The Beast in last night's main wrestling bout at Memorial Arena.

The Beast, as the name indicates, is a wild and hairy creature with a wrestling style to match. His opponent, different by nature and technique, one Gentleman Jim Hady, did not have a good night.

With his manager perched outside the ropes urging him to press on, The Beast appeared to have the bout in the bag for most of the affair.

He won the first round of the three-fall match, dropped the second and went all out to rip Hady limb from limb in the third. The ex-lumberjack from Sicily used his head as a battering ram and crashed it time and again into the Gentleman's face. He strangled, punched and used his brute strength to reduce Hady to a shadow of his usual self.

The Beast continued his severe punishment after the match and shoved Hady through onto the ring apron. Still, the wild one pressed on, ignoring the warnings of referee Tiger Tasker.

Hady was a limp form and hanging half in and half out of the ring, helpless in the hands of The Beast when Tasker decided that was enough.

The man in white waved for the bell while The Beast and manager jumped with joy, expecting the official nod to come in their direction.

'Twas not so.

Tasker reached through the ropes and lifted Hady's arm in victory, disqualifying one startled Beast. At least the fans liked the decision and Hady, too, when he came around enough to realize what had taken place.

As we said earlier, it was not Hady's night. He got in some good licks and showed signs of wrestling ability and style, but all in all The Beast had the best of it, grinding away with plenty of back-breaking brute punishment before slamming Hady into a turnbuckle to wrap up the first half after 12 minutes. Hady submitted in the clutches of The Beast's big arms.

Mr. Manager gave orders to continue the same punishment in the second round but The Beast had Jim in a bad way until he tried that tossing-into-the-corners bit again. Hady reversed the procedure, caught his man backward coming off the ropes and flipped him, not a bit gently, over his back and onto the mat for a tying pin after seven minutes.

Then came the third fall and you know the rest. Could be we'll see some fresh blood for the next week's main attraction.

In the semi-final, a tag-team affair, the Scuffling Families, Rip and Chuck, took care of Duke Noble and Killer Conroy in two one-minute falls. There was some spirited action in the first 22-minute go before Noble got himself disqualified. Rip and Chuck had a bare-foot ball in hammering the Duke and his buddy down after eight minutes of the second.

Eric Frohlier made it a clean sweep for the "good guys" by disposing of the Mighty Mephisto with a series of flying drop kicks in the opener.

Parsons Play At Air Station

The Kingston District Soccer League game, between Belleville Parsons and the Flying Dutchmen, will be played this evening at the Trenton RCAF field, at 6:30.

Parsons announced the change late yesterday. The game was first slated for the Belleville Fairgrounds at 6:00, but was switched to 6:30 p.m. because of the harness races there.

The Kingston League has balked on sending teams to Belleville for afternoon games so today's tilt has been changed back to an evening affair and moved to the air station field.

Tiger-Cats Chalk Up First Victory

Sutherin Boosts Bombers

HAMILTON (CP)—Don Sutherin kicked the defending Grey Cup champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats into first place alone Friday night, booting a record-tying four field goals in a 23-20 victory over Winnipeg Blue Bombers in a Canadian Football League blockbuster game.

Sutherin also added two converts on three attempts for a 14-point evening.

The win was the first in three starts for Hamilton, now tied for third place in the Eastern Conference with Toronto. Each has two points in three games. Winnipeg is fourth in the five-team Western Conference with three points in five games.

A crowd of 19,500, sitting through a misty drizzle accompanied by a stiff northwesterly breeze watched as Sutherin kicked placements of 12 and 32 yards in the first quarter and 44 and 15 yards in the fourth. Halfback Garney Henley, with two, and end Hal Patterson, with one, caught passes for Hamilton touchdowns as quarterback Bernie Faloney added Frank Cosentino poked holes in the Winnipeg pass defence, weakened by the absence of all-star Dick Thornton.

Faloney and Cosentino combined to complete 11 of 20 pass attempts. Bombers Ken Ploen and Hal Ledyard made good on 12 of 25.

Fullback Jack Delveaux, halfbacks Bill Cooper and Leo Lewis and end Ernie Pitts scored Winnipeg touchdowns. George Fleming added a single on a wide field goal attempt and four converts to complete the Bomber total.

Hamilton built up a 6-0 lead in the first quarter on Sutherin's first two scores. Faloney threw a nine-yard pass to Patterson in the second quarter for the first Hamilton touchdown. Later in the same quarter he completed a pass to Henley, who scooted into the end zone. Sutherin added the convert.

Delveaux smashed over from the Hamilton two-yard line in the second quarter and Cooper ran a nine-yard reverse for the second touchdown in the third quarter. Lewis went wide to the right for the third Winnipeg touchdown in fourth quarter and Pitts closed things out for the visitors.

Henley got his second touchdown in the third quarter when Cosentino tossed him an 18-yard pass.

Hamilton totalled 124 yards on the ground and had 186 yards through passing compared with Winnipeg's 192 and 98.

Hamilton's all-star guard Harman Curreton was helped off the field with an injured knee during the game but it was not determined how bad the damage was.

Hastings Eliminates Peewees

Belleville's entry in the OASA Peewee softball playdowns bowed out of contention here last night by dropping a 9-8 decision to the visiting Hastings club.

Hastings won the two-of-three series in consecutive games to advance into the next round.

Belleville held a brief 1-0 lead in the seven-inning contest, played at the CNRA Park, but Hastings went in front 3-1 and never looked back. Infield errors proved costly for the losers, paving the way to most of the winners' runs.

Fleming pitched the victory while Arnott was the Belleville loser, getting relief from Reid in the sixth inning.

Sport Schedule Threatened

A steady rain, commencing yesterday, threatened to wash out most of the activity on the city and district's heavy sports scheduling this weekend.

Managers, coaches and others in charge of events, were keeping worried eyes on the sky this morning and some events were washed out as early as 8:30 a.m.

First on the list to go was the Quinte Driving and Riding Club harness races at the Belleville Fairgrounds. Gerald Vance confirmed that the meet was "off because of very wet track conditions." Rain most days of the week kept the track in damp shape and the steady downfall last night finished any hope of holding the races. The next card is planned for one week from tonight.

Minor baseball officials held off decisions on the Peterborough-Belleville games slated here for the weekend. The bantams were scheduled for the Park Dale diamond at 2.00 this afternoon, Belleville Peewee Merchants received word that their game in Peterborough had been washed out. Those teams are scheduled to meet here at Park Dale tomorrow afternoon at 2.00 p.m. and an official said that a double-header will be played, due to today's postponement.

A number of OASA playdown games in the district, including Oshawa and Ellis Juniors at the CNRA tonight at six o'clock, were still "on" this morning but continued rain was expected to force postponements.

Lions Club Wins Tyke Ball Title

The Lions' Club whitewashed DeMille Construction 12-0 at Park Dale last night to win the BMBA's Tyke championship in two consecutive games.

Ace pitcher Ron McTaggart stopped the DeMille boys on one hit in the game, halted after five innings. He struck out five batters and walked a single walk. G. Edwards was his batterymate.

Randy O'Neil was the losers' pitching a four-hitter and striking out four. Eight walks hurt his cause considerably. Jud Forester was his catcher.

BUYS LAST ROUND

LONDON (AP)—Harold Mathews James, wealthy businessman and golfing fan, left $5,600 for a last round of drinks for his golfing buddies in his will published Friday. James, who died in May, was a 13-handicap golfer and habitually played on about 30 courses every year.

Al Dark played the percentages once too often and his slumping San Francisco Giants lost their sixth straight game, 6-5 to St. Louis Cardinals Friday night, with the help of an intentional walk that put the tying run on base.

The defeat dropped the Giants into third place in the National League, the first time they've been lower than second since the first week of the season. They stand one game behind Cincinnati Reds and 8½ back of league-leading Philadelphia Phillies.

On four previous occasions this year, Dark daringly violated the generally accepted baseball strategy of not putting the winning run on base intentionally. Each of those times Dark's pitchers walked the winning run in first base, the Giants ran away with a victory.

But his latest attempt failed miserably. With the Giants one leading 5-3 in the ninth inning, Lou Brock opened second and two out, Dark had Bill White walked to first.

After the walk, Dal Maxvill singled to left field, bringing in Brock and putting White at second. Mike Shannon followed with another single.

WHITE TIED THE SCORE

White raced home with the tying run, and Maxvill scampered into third.

Giant second baseman Hal Lanier, meanwhile, fired the ball to the plate, but was off balance and the ball sailed wildly past catcher Tom Haller.

Maxvill dashed home with the winning run.

Elsewhere in the league, Philadelphia blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0, Cincinnati edged Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2, New York Mets walloped Chicago Cubs 7-0 and Houston Colts slipped Milwaukee Braves 3-2.

Home runs by Jim Hart and Orlando Cepeda had helped the Giants to their 5-3 lead. Hart connected with one on in a three-run first inning off Ted Abernathy and Cepeda drove his 25th homer in the third.

Chris Short scattered seven hits as the Phillies posted their fourth straight victory. The league-leaders picked up a run in the second when Alex Johnson singled, took second on a balk by Pirates' Helsher Bob Veale and scored on Tony Taylor's single.

Johnny Callison drove in the other run in the eighth with a single.

The Reds won their fifth straight behind the brilliant relief pitching of Bill McCool. The rookie hurled the last 6 2-3 innings, allowing only one hit, striking out nine and permitting only one Dodger to reach third.

Starter Jim Maloney threw in two Red runs with a second-inning double, then scored the third on a base hit by Chico Ruiz.

The Mets also won their fifth straight and tied the longest winning streak in their-three-year history. They won five in a row in May, 1963.

Jack Fisher scattered seven hits in going the distance, marking the fifth consecutive complete game for the Mets' pitching staff, the other team in the majors has performed that feat this season.

Tony Cloninger held Houston to one hit through six innings, but the Colts erupted for three runs in the seventh with the help of Gene Oliver's bobble of Carroll Hardy's potential double play ball. Hardy scored the tying run on the play.

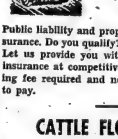
Chiefs Drop Into Tie With Suns

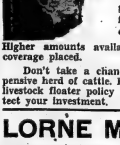
By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The weather was the biggest winner Friday night in the International League, forcing cancellation of two games.

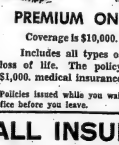
Those in both Toronto and Buffalo were wiped out by rain and Syracuse club officials probably are wishing it had.



rained as well in Richmond where the Chiefs absorbed an 8-1 defeat at the hands of the Virginians and dropped into first-place tie with idle Jacksonville Suns. The Suns were to have played the Maple Leafs in Toronto.



In the other game, Columbus Wings 9-2, leaving the Wings with only a half-game edge over the Maple Leafs in fourth place. Vern Handrahn of Charleston town started and lost for the Wings, evening his record at 4-4 before giving way to relief in the seventh-inning onslaught.



In Richmond, Mickey Harrington's two-run homer climaxed a six-run third inning that carried the Virginians ahead of the Chiefs.

Music Lessons Come High

BOSTON (AP) — Utility infielder Phil Linz was slapped with a $200 fine Friday for open defiance of New York Yankee manager Yog' Berra's orders to stop playing a harmonic on the team bus, the Yankee manager announced Friday night.

"I now consider the incident closed," Berra said after he, Linz and Yankee general manager Ralph Houk emerged from a meeting Friday night.

Berra said Linz had apologized for his conduct in connection with the incident on the bus Thursday night.

"I left the matter entirely in Berra's hands," said Houk, who made a hurried trip to Boston to look into the incident, "but I will say I don't approve of playing a harmonica on the bus after we had lost a series like that one."

The incident occurred on the bus heading for the Chicago airport after a 5-0 loss to the White Sox Thursday and New York's fourth straight loss.

Berra had indicated that he considered the fine essential to maintain team discipline during his first year as a manager.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Not the day to tempt fate. Don't try to fly in the face of solid opposition. Bide your time. Wait . . . study . . . observe. Don't become involved in fruitless argument. Conserve your energy. Be skeptical.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Important to check conditions in home. Important to conserve energy, strength. Make resolutions -- and keep them. You are better able to put ideas across . . . see people who are sympathetic.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If there is disagreement with loved one . . . back down. You are happiest today if you achieve harmony. You are less than pleased if you only "win." Meaning be tender, considerate, understanding.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Form policy. Get directions, orders in perspective. Don't attempt project with smacks of scheme or speculation. Place reality as it exists. Don't attempt to "twist" facts.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Avoid unnecessary travel. Be wary of what you put in writing . . . be explicit, diplomatic. You can favorably impress superiors, but do so through "quiet" methods. Be "master of fact."

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Stick with what you know. Loss indicated if you enter "sloppy waters." Message very clear before day is over. Make inquiries. But don't spend. There is much yet to be disclosed.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to March 20) Important to break from the old . . . to pioneer new paths. Cycle high. But tendency is for messages to go astray. You will have to be very alert . . . and ready to meet challenge.

If today is your birthday you have way of emphasizing points through unusual voice quality. You could sell, direct personnel department, teach drama techniques.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Cycle high for Pisces, Aries, Taurus. Special word to Scorpio: You will not feel victorious if loved one is hurt. Think it over. —

Your Car
Make Sure Engine Has Proper Diet

By EUGENE B. MILHOE

If your car isn't doing its best it may be that the engine is struggling along on the wrong fuel diet. There's a dip in both engine response and temperature when anything upsets the correct mixture.

Incorrect carburetor adjustments are often responsible. If you tackle this yourself, be sure you know precisely how . . . and make adjustments only when the engine is warmed up to normal operating temperature.

When the fuel mixture is too rich, you may notice a strong gasoline odor or wet carburetor exterior, as well as hard starting, stalling and roughness. Usually, this is traced to carburetor wear, dirt or faulty adjustments. A troublesome choke is also a possibility. . . and, in rare cases, sticking of the pump pressure. A weak fuel mixture can also be the result of wear, dirt or poor adjustment. . . or a faulty choke.

Air leakage, water in the fuel or anything else that upsets the flow are further suspects and might require a complete inspection from tank to intake manifold.

T. Z. Kalicz: "I had the cooling system of my '57 sedan reverse—flushed and now the radiator leaks. How come?"

On an older car, reverse-flushing can disturb rust and corrosion deposits which have sealed up pinholes or porous spots.

From N. B.: "For nearly two months, my engine kept running like that. I've had to hold to a 40 or 43 mph limit to avoid overheating. Three weeks ago the motor had muffler and tail pipe replaced, the trouble ended. Is this more coincidence?"

A clogged or restricted muffler, tail pipe, exhaust pipe or exhaust manifold causes excessive engine back-pressure which will quickly build up engine heat.

H. V. asks: "We've rolled up more than 25,000 miles on our 1961 station wagon and I've been told it's advisable now to buy new tires before winter. Do you agree?"

How worn are the treads? Good tires can give you up to 50,000 miles or more of safe driving and maintenance habits can make this good.

From L. D.: "My service station says valve trouble may be the cause of engine miss when I attempt to make a fast start, to climb a hill or to cruise at 60 mph. What kind of valve trouble?"

A sticking valve or a defective valve spring would be most likely.

Plan to Allow Insurance Firms To Buy Stocks

OTTAWA (CP)—The cabinet has approved the idea of giving life insurance companies greater freedom to invest in common stocks, Impending legislation on this score is also likely include some attempt to prevent Canadian life companies from falling under foreign hands in the future.

Finance Minister Sharp, in line with the government's efforts to maintain and increase in Canada the ownership of industries in this country.

However, it is understood that the legislation is well down on the government's list of priorities. It is part of a big package of financial legislation, including the Bank Act amendments. The te se may not be revealed until late in the year.

Life insurance companies in Canada now are operating under a 1961 law that limits their holdings of common stocks to 15 per cent of assets. The law also includes a special limit on these stocks: they must have a seven-year dividend record.

Speculation is that the government favors an increase to 25 per cent.

As a group, the life companies in Canada are far from even approaching the present 15-per-cent limit.

Drive to End U. S. Congress Founders on Issue That Ran Into Canadian Headwinds

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — A drive to end the United States congressional session has foundered on an issue that also ran into strong headwinds in the Canadian House of Commons earlier this year.

The subject is the redistribution of the size of the voting blocks which elect members of state legislatures. the goal is to even out the current imbalance —which exists in Canada as well—between the numbers of urban and rural voters in each area.

Redistribution of the 265 seats in the House of Commons is scheduled to come after every census. But legislation based on the 1961 population patterns was blocked by the Conservatives who objected to the machinery proposed.

In the U.S., the process is called reapportionment but it raises the same objections, notably from members of rural areas who are elected with far fewer votes than city - suburb members. Thus, on a population basis, the more thinly - populated areas have an undue influence in state legislatures.

It has been noted that two-thirds of the eligible states voters now live in the cities but that in 44 of the 50 states a controlling majority in the legislature is held by only 40 per cent of the population.

In 13 of them, one-third of the people or even fewer can elect a legislature majority.

MUST COME BACK

The Democratic party leaders in Congress had hoped to clean up their business in time to end the session before next week's nominating convention at Atlantic City. But a fight about the redistribution issue will bring the congressmen and senators back Aug. 31 for more work in the hot capital.

The proposed legislation comes on the heels of a Supreme Court decision ordering all 50 state legislatures to pattern their electoral districts in both houses strictly on one person, one-vote — not with more voters in city constituencies and fewer in rural ones.

The Republicans through their Senate leader, Everett M. Dirksen, Illinois, have moved that federal courts wait two years before hearing any cases that arise from the Supreme Court ruling. Dirksen would like a constitutional amendment to upset the Supreme Court ruling.

Liberal-wing Senate members have threatened to talk against the Dirksen measure indefinitely and Dirksen has said he will insist on bringing the matter to a vote. Compromises have failed and the Democrats' Senate leader, Mike Mansfield, Montana, says Congress may sit through the November election itself if necessary.

The House of Representatives, meanwhile, has passed an even tougher bill that would strip from federal courts any jurisdiction over apportionment of state legislatures. Dirksen says the House action will increase pressure on the Senate to act on his measure but he said he saw little likelihood that the Senate would accept the House bill.

Paper Handlers Try to Settle 41-Day Strike

DETROIT (AP) — The striking pressmen's union broke off negotiations with publishers of Detroit's two daily newspapers Friday night but paper handlers continued bargaining in an effort to settle strike that started 41 days ago.

The publishers of the evening Detroit News and the morning Detroit Free Press accused the pressmen of "an act of bad faith" and charged they had added "to their unreasonable and impossible demands".

Federal and state mediators expressed optimism that some progress can be made between the publishers and the paper handlers' union.

Neither newspaper has published since the pressmen and paper handlers walked out July 13 in support of new contract demands.

ASSURES LEGAL AID

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson signed into law Thursday a bill that assures legal aid for defendants in federal criminal cases who can't afford to pay for it. The new law will not take effect for a year to allow federal district judges time to draw up plans to accomplish its aims.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Now, can you think of any more complaints . . . ?"

Toronto's "Quiet Man" World Star Bridge Player

TORONTO (CP)—The Toronto lawyer who confesses to being the world's greatest bridge player has the soft voice and quiet manner more appropriate to a modest man.

In conversation away from the killing grind of an international bridge tournament or the competitive pressure of court room litigation, Eric Murray has an offhand attitude toward card-table feats that put him among the top five bridge players in North America, among the top 15 in the world.

Those among-the-top ratings are other people's estimates, not his. By Eric Murray's estimate Eric Murray is the best.

The claim sounds more solid against the backgrounds of the American Contract Bridge League's summer tournament here where Murray led a Toronto foursome through an 11 match unbeaten streak to bring the ACBL's Spingold trophy to Canada for the first time in its 30-year history.

But he adds a smiling footnote to his claim which indicates its importance to a contest where game manship can play a trump role:

"Every good bridge player believes he's the best. He's got to, because confidence is essential. There are 100 to 150 players in the world who can make the same claim."

NO CONCEIT

He tells an anecdote from a tournament he attended in the United States to illustrate his point.

Harry Fishbein, a New York professional known at tournaments for his colorful berets and matching language was asked by a kibitzer who would win the tournament.

Harry, who was not competing in that one replied that he hoped anyone would win except so-and-so because so-and-so was "100 conceited."

"Come on, Harry," the kibitzer responded, "you know that's nothing against him because all good bridge players are conceited."

"That's not true," Harry came back earnestly. "I'm twice as good as anybody playing here but I'm not conceited."

While Murray is ready to admit to conceit, he is casual to the point of forgetfulness about accomplishments.

FORGETS FEATS

He has trouble recalling the dates and places and circumstances of tournament wins or spectacular coups.

Such as the time a few years ago on Charles Goren's Championship Bridge television show when, as declarer, Murray spread his cards on the table after a round or two had been played and explained that he would make his contract by a squeeze, that is, by applying pressure to his opponents forcing them to discard potential winning tricks.

It's the sort of play any life master handles with ease but it was a spectacular bit of showmanship considering that it was made before the TV cameras and it must have made quite an impression on the less-skilled bridge players watching.

Murray does remember that his first encountered bridge in 1948 as a 19-year-old student at McMaster University in his native Hamilton and spent so much time at the card table in the campus "rec hut" that it was a miracle he graduated to attend Osgoode Hall law school in Toronto, where he now practices law.

The first tournament he played in he organized him-self. Within two years he won a non-masters pairs title. He won the U.S. men's pairs championship with Douglas Drury, formerly of Toronto and now in San Francisco, in 1953 and 1954, one of the few times the title has been taken twice in a row.

He was a life master—with 300 master points from tournament—at 22 and now has accumulated 4,800 master points.

Now 35, he has won almost every Canadian bridge title in sight in the only Canadian to win the ACBL individual title, the only Canadian picked for the North American team in the world championships (1961), three times a winner of the U.S. men's pairs title with Sam Kehela of Toronto and last year he and Agnes Gordon of Buffalo had the biggest score ever in the ACBL mixed pairs—5074 out of 650.

"Sam knows all the mathematical probabilities and plays them," Murray says. "He's a very sound player."

Murray, on the other hand, is considered an iconoclast, an adventurer who will reach for a surprising contract or attempt an unlikely coup once in a together, they present a fine blend of science and daring.

Murray considers method and flair essential qualities in good bridge, neither being enough without the other.

"Some people consider bridge a game of mathematics," he says, "but that's not enough.

"Actuaries, accountants, mathematics professors make good bridge players, but the best need something else. Bridge combines the skills required in the science—and in poker bluff and table presence."

Murray says the attraction of bridge is the competition and it is the thrill of testing wits and style that holds him in thrall.

"That's why you get former football players and other athletes interested in bridge," he says. "When they've past physical combat they get mental combat at the bridge table.

"People who sit around watching television would be better advised to join in the mental combat of bridge. One problem is that when people get bitten they play far too much."

He himself plays only rarely compared to the long hours he once filled with bridge—"perhaps two evening a month at a club."

What pleases him most is that "Toronto is now one of the strongest bridge centres on the continent" and Canada is a big world contender.

That is evident in the fact that the Spingold Trophy final here was just about all-Canadian — Murray Kehela, Percy Sheardown and Bruce Elliott of Toronto against Bruce Gowdy of nearby Ajax, Fred Hoffer and Ray Jolicoeur of Montreal and Marvin Altman of Waterbury, Conn.

Last May in New York at the 29-nation world bridge Olympiad, Murray and Kehela led Canadian team out of nowhere in a spectacular final rush into the semi-finals and wound up fourth behind Italy, the United States and Britain.

And this fall at Dallas, Tex., in trials for the North American team for the 1965 world title, six of the 16 qualified pairs are Canadian. Previously, Canada has managed to put only one player into the annual trials, Murray.

However, looking forward to Dallas, he says of himself and Kehela: "We are as strong a pair as any playing in the world today and we are the best going to Dallas."
